Notes for Ida Martha KRELLENSTEIN
Ida used to say to her neice Fannie, "I didn't invite you to my wedding, but you were so good you came anyway." As indicated, the marriage took place at the bedside of the bride's mother-in-law, who had just given birth to Fannie.

THE DESCENDANTS OF RABBI JOSEPH

Shortly after becoming interested in genealogical pursuits, I was privileged to meet with three of the surviving members of this once-active organization known as The Descendants of Rabbi Yosele Shapiro: Solomon J. Weinstein, the President, born 24 October 1880 in Suchowalia, Grodno Gubernia, Russia; Israel Herman "Alter" Levin, M. D., born 1 January 1880 in Grajewo, Lomza Gubernia, Polish Russia; and Isidor Levin, born 3 January 1889, also in Grajewo. They acquainted me with many of the oral traditions and reminiscences carried forward by the descendants who retained close ties with their European relatives after immigrating to the United States.

The progenitor, Rabbi Yosele (or Joseph) Shapiro, born before 1755, was "extremely orthodox," as were many Jews in Russia. In 1775 he was a "head rabbi" at Bialystock—whether the town or district, I do not know. However, by 1800 he was located with his family in Augustow, Poland, where he was "Rosh Beth Din"; that is, "Chief Justice." He was the individual mentioned in Chester G. Cohen's Shtetl Finder as having died in Augustow in 1848.

Of particular genealogical interest is the fact that Rabbi Joseph had two daughters and at least seven—some say ten—sons. The girls were Frume Feigel and Blume; and the sons were Joshua, Nissel, Abraham Itzak, Eliahu, Isser, Benjamin, Heschel, Mottel, and perhaps Boruch and David. All children had large families, and all the sons became rabbis and established themselves in various communities throughout northeastern Poland and across the borders into Germany and Russia.

Thus, I began to abstract records from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, which contained numerous birth, marriage, and death registers from many of the towns in which I was interested. While at the time missing the Civil Registry Office of Augustow, there were excellent entries from Grajewo and Szczuczyn (Stuchin in Yiddish), where many vital events took place: Shapiro (Szapiero & Sapir in Polish records) and Lewy (Levy, Levin, Levine in English). The major lineages followed were those of Rabbi Joshua (Osieja in Polish and Schia as a nickname), who married 1) Malki Zelda Wincewicz and 2) Chaje Osiejowa. The two daughters of Rabbi Yosele: Frume Feigel, who married Elias Suchowolsky, and Bluma, who married Gedalia Chimilewsky (Zhmielwski, the Yiddish equivalent) were also followed.

It might have been particularly difficult to find record of the Chimilewsky family had Dr. I. H. Levin not informed me that the family name had been changed. He pointed out that when the family visited their German relatives on their way to New Orleans, they were told that they shouldn't enter the United States with such a Polish-sounding name, so they adopted the approximate German equivalent in use by their cousins: "Oppenheim" or "open house"; thus, hospitable.

The popularity of German names during the mid-nineteenth century was apparent with other descendants of Rabbi Yosele. Hyam Wolfe Shapiro became Henry Wolf Silverstein, and several of his children became the more American, "Stone." His brother, Rabbi Boruch Aaron Shapiro reputedly became Benjamin Silverstein; then Rabbi Benjamin Stone. Since it is not always possible to know exactly when a name-change took place, one must use all the names to follow the movement of an individual.

Not to be forgotten was the frequency with which a given name would be changed after the family found itself in the United States—often with an English equivalent. To name just a few of the others: Chaya became Ida, Bryna or Brindel became Bertha, Bernice, or Betty, Shaina became Jenny, Zelda became Celia, Basha became Bessie, Nechama became Natalie, Itke became Etta or Ethel, Fruma Feigel became Freida or Fanny. Among the men: Chaim or Hyman became Herman, Moshe became Morris, Leib became Louis, Gedaliah became Glenn, Hershal became Harry, Mordechi or Menachem Mendal became Max, Eliahu became Alan or Alexander, Shaike became Samuel, Fishel or Fivel became Phillip, Akiva or Kivi became Carl, Jehuda became Julius, Ruwen became Robert, Pesach became Percival.

It is apparent from the names listed on the letterhead of The Descendants of Rabbi Yosele Shapiro as late as 1940 that additional work still needs to be done on lineages from other children of Rabbi Joseph.

Notes for Samuel Benedict OPPENHEIM	About 1878 he travelled to the United States; then returned to Polish Russia; then in 1894 immigrated to the United States. The name Chimilevsky had been changed to Oppenheim by the German branch of the family, who recommended that he do so. Helped by New York relatives. Lived in both New York and Louisiana.
Notes for Shana Itke FISHBEIN	She believed that she could better help husband financially in Poland where she was known. They had business which she sold later. She, too, went to the United States after husband but also returned to Poland before finally immigrating permanently to the United States in 1896.
