Had a tobacco factory. Old "press" almost buried in 1928
 Daughter Jane said she had no remembrance of ever seeing her father on the street without his high silk hat and gold-headed cane, and in winter with a long black broad-cloth cape lined with flannel — Was lining red or green? He could neither sing nor whistle a tune.

Wife was noted for her sweet singing voice and her exquisite sewing. She fainted (when daughter #3 was little) and fell in the fireplace — burning some fingers so badly they had to be amputated. Made herself a quilted petticoat and placed their gold coins inside. During Civil War, they kept sentinels posted on all roads into Centerville and when the alarm

Alarm
 "Yankees Coming" sounded, she put on the skirt. It was too heavy to wear all the time.

MISCELLANEOUS
 HUSBAND was building a new home in Greenville (then Centerville) at start of Civil War. He moved in to keep Yankees from burning it. Family divided second floor into rooms with curtains and finished house after war. When they left to go to Fairview, it was sold. A Mr. Rittinger, a Presbyterian preacher later owned it. House still standing a century later. See Reverse
