

Origins of a West Virginia Pine Family 1-15

Apocryphal tales abound in the annals of family history, and the Pine descendants have contributed a particularly painted account of the origin of their colonial progenitor, one "Alexander Pine." Today many descendants of this ancestor of the early West Virginia family accept as fact the story surrounding his infancy.

He is said to have come by his name as the result of a gentleman named Alexander finding him under a pine tree, where the new born baby had been left.

DOZENS OF REFERENCES TO PINE INDIVIDUALS IN OTHER RECORDS MAKE CLEAR, HOWEVER, THAT NEW JERSEY WOULD VERY LIKELY RIVAL NEW YORK IN PINE SURNAMEN IN 1790.

Mr W A Riffe,
Beckley, W.Va.

Dear Mr Riffe;

Your letter in reference to the Pine Family received some time ago.

You are undoubtedly on the right trail, as Alexander Pine was my Great Grandfather, John, his son my Grandfather, and James, (John's son) was my Father.

In the year of 1812, my Grandfather, John Pine, left his home in Champagne County, Ohio, to walk to New Orleans, to join General Jackson and fight against Pachingham. After he had walked about 500 miles, averaging 50 miles a day, he received word that the fighting was over and Jackson had won, and there was no further use in him continuing his journey, so he retraced his steps to his home. He then moved his family to a farm in Lawrence County, Ohio, near the present town of Proctorville, where he settled and raised his family.

As to the whereabouts of the descendants of Squire, the last I heard of Squire he was in Harrison County, Ohio, just back of Cincinnati.

Hoping I have given you the information you desire, I remain

Very truly yours,

John Thomas Pine.

Sometimes not far from the beginning of 1820 Thomas Christian, a nephew of Colonel William Christian of Montgomery County, the mouth of Buffalo Creek on the journey made by John Black, Jr. married a daughter of Alexander Rice of Montgomery County. This Alexander Rice took his name from the fact that a gentleman by the name of Alexander found him while an infant & only a few days under a pine tree where he had been left, and his parents were never discovered.

Thomas Christian was the father of three sons, James, Thomas, and Allen, and several daughters, all of whom, except James, married with their father to Kentucky about the year 1824. James, who was born in 1800, married a Miss Annie Meese and remained in the country. He was a member of the first County Court of Logan County and held many positions of trust, all of which he yielded to the satisfaction of the people. He was the last survivor of the first court, and died in 1892 in the ninety-third year of his age, leaving an honorable name and numerous descendants, among whom are Patterson Christian, who was for a long while one of the Justices of the county; Peter Christian, one of the leading citizens of the county; and Rev. Roger Christian, who was for many years a member of the M. E. Church, South. His daughters married R. P. Spawth and D. P. Ellis.

The Pynes of Monroe County, West Virginia; descendents of Robert Pyne of Dublin, Ireland.

from Joanne Coontz

A sketch - Pyne - from History of Monroe County, West Virginia, by Oren F. Morton, 1916, pages 394-395

"This surname came into England with the Norman-French Conquerours and for many centuries has held an honored place in the annals of the British gentry. Robert (1755-1847) the son of a British Army Officer who was killed in battle, and was reared by an uncle, a wealthy shipmaster of Dublin. He accompanied the uncle on a voyage to New York in 1768, and then ran away, hiding himself in a wagon belonging to two brothers of the name, of McGuire, and who seem to have lived in Pennsylvania. Thus the boy forfeited an inheritance that would have made him rich. The McGuires were kind-hearted, and he spent the time with them until he was of age, alternating a year at a time, between the brothers. He then received horse, saddle, and bridle. He accompanied them to the Greenbrier about 1780, and made himself a home near Centennial. He was a strict Methodist and impatient of misbehavior in time of worship. His first wife was a Stevenson, the second being Nancy McGuire of the family of his benefactors. Children: Sally (1791-1897) (Archibald Bostic); by second wife; - James McGuire (Elizabeth Mahan) - William -- John - - Elizabeth (John Keyes) - - Robert (3)

William went to Wisconsin before 1860. John was killed by a raft on Coal River, and Robert, a teacher, never recovered from an injury to his head caused while using a flail. The children of James McGuire who went to Ohio, were John W., Mary A., Louis G., James P., Nancy J., William T., and Ruthie F. James McG., and his sons J.P., and W.T., served under General Custer in the Second West Virginia Cavalry, U.S.A., and were present at the surrender of Lee. L.G. was in the Confederate service. The brothers were in the battle of Lewisburg and afterward had a friendly talk under a flag of truce. L.G. was in the Confederate Army and killed during the battle of Lynchburg.

He married in 1836 Mahala Smith. He had a brother William, who went to Minnesota, and three sisters, Julia, Martha, and Isabel, who married, respectively, Joseph Ramsey, Richard Ramsey and Robert McCleary. The descendants of Robert Pyne, the first of the name to settle in the Greenbrier Valley of Virginia, are scattered over the greater part of the United States, the majority of them follow the noble art of agriculture; some of them have mechanical ability and some are engaged in the profession of teaching. They believe in honesty and follow the footsteps of Jesus of Nazareth; they take an active interest in the social, political, and religious life of our country; they serve in all our wars. Today they stand guard on land and sea ready to defend our country against any and all enemies.

They agree with the great aristocrat of democracy, Thomas Jefferson and subscribe to his motto: "Fiat Justitia Ruat Cælum" (Let justice be done though the heavens fall). They spread the gospel of freedom for all mankind; they advocate, aya, they pray peace; but, in righteousness, they wage war. They jealously guard the motto of West Virginia: "Montni Semper Liberi". (Mountaineers are always free men), and the motto of the mother State - Virginia: "Sic Semper Tyrannis", (Ever thus to tyrants).

May our tribe continue to increase and progress and flourish in fullment of the ancient motto of the family of Pyne: "In Tempestate Floresco" (I flourish in the tempest).

The name of Pine may be seen on the wall of St. Paul's Cathedral, London. This Pine went down with his ship on the coast of France. The ship carried Cleopatra's Needle which was later recovered from the wreckage and set up on the Thames Embankment, London.

In days long since past Valentine Pyne was chief gunner in the Tower of London.

from Joanne Coontz

The following is a bit of history relative to Robert Pyne and his family given in letters by James P. Pyne, a grandson of Robert Pyne, who came from Ireland (Dublin), and was the first to settle in Greenbrier County, Virginia (Now Monroe County, West Virginia): -

Anderson, Indiana,
March 28th, 1912

James M. Pyne,
Webster Groves, Mo.

Dear Cousin:-

Your very interesting letter of inquiry of 21st inst. came duly to hand, and it has been read and re-read.

My grandfather's father, a lieutenant in the British Army; was killed in battle, so the family tradition says, and my grandfather, Robert Pyne, a young boy, was adopted by his rich uncle, a Captain Pyne of Dublin, Ireland. I do not know the first name of either Lieutenant Pyne or Captain Pyne. They were Pines, or Pynes. I do not know how they spelt the name in Ireland.

I will relate to you a story which a Court might call a "Fairy - Tale", but is true: - When Captain Pine's ship came to New York, about the year of 1768, it lay there for three or four weeks and his nephew, as well as his son by adoption, Robert Pine, dreading the thought of a return voyage over the stormy Atlantic, ran away from his uncle and aunt - his parents by adoption - hid himself under the sheets in a covered wagon in a wagon-yard in New York City. There he was found by the owners of the wagon - two brothers by the name of McGuire. The McGuire brothers gave the lad a good, old Irish quiz and got a truthful story from him: He was 13 years old, dreaded the sea and, rather than return to Dublin, Ireland on a sailing ship over the wild Atlantic Ocean, he had run away from his uncle and aunt and expressed a wish, that he might go home with them. So, the McGuires agreed to take him to their homes in Greenbrier Valley of Virginia; provided he would work for one of them a year and then a year for the other until he was 21 years of age, when, as was the custom in Colonial Virginia, Robert was to have a horse, bridle and saddle. The only trouble Robert Pine ever had with his benefactors was at the time every year when he had to go from one home to the other. It was then a good, old-fashioned quarrel always occurred between the McGuire brothers as to the time for the change to be made. Robert Pine then learned how difficult it is to serve two masters.

The McGuire brothers lived in Monroe County, Virginia, and grandfather Pine lived there until his death which occurred in October or November 1847, or thereabouts. He was 92 years old and he died when the cholera was raging in Kanawha County, Virginia, where my father and family were then living.

Robert Pine would not claim the large fortune left in Ireland by his adopted parents because he had run away from them and did not feel worthy to take that which legally belonged to him. I will remunerate you well if you will successfully prosecute my claim, as the oldest living heir, in the male line to the fortune left in Ireland by Captain Pine or Pyne, as the name may be spelt over there.

Besides the line of ships trading between Ireland and India, Captain Pine was a manufacturer in Dublin. I remember hearing about his large button factory where all sorts of buttons were made.

My sister informs me that grandmother Pine's maiden name was Nancy McGuire. She was grandfather's second wife and no doubt a relative of the McGuire brothers.

That his first wife was a Miss Stevenson of Pennsylvania there can be no question since you got the information from her own daughter's lips.

My father (1) James McGuire Pine, eldest son of Robert Pyne, Sr., was born April 8, 1808, in Monroe County, Virginia. His childhood and early manhood were spent there. He married Elizabeth Mahan and to this union were born the following children: John Washington Pine, borne February 22, Mary Ann Pine, born -----, Lewis Greene Pine, born October 3rd, 1838, James Pondester Pine, born October 20, 1839, Nancy Jane Pine, born November 14, 1840, William Thomas Pine, born -----, Ruthis Frances Pine, born -----, and "Dock Pine - the last named was from a second marriage.

Grandfather Robert Pine was an overseer of slaves on the McNutt Plantation near Gap Mills, Monroe County, Virginia, and my father was for five years an overseer on the Plunkett Beirne Plantation near Union Monroe County, Virginia.

I was borned in a house which stood beside the road that led from Union to Salt Sulphur Springs, Monroe County, Virginia, October 20, 1833 married Charles Anna Parker, August 9, 1866. I volunteered to serve in the 2nd Virginia Cavalry, August 15, 1861, and served until the close of the war.

My father and my brother, William T., served with me. We served under General Sheridan and General Custer - the ill-fated Custer. We were in many battles but escaped injury.

When I married, after the war, we moved from Kanawha County, West Virginia, to Lawrence County, Ohio, lived there five years, then moved to Carthage, Missouri, then moved to Pheonix, Arizona. All this time I was a farmer.

In the year 1900 I went to Moundsville, West Virginia and engaged in the publication of religious literature and became an active church

I shall visit you as soon as the weather will permit.

Your saved cousin,
James Pine

P.S. Brother Greene served in the Rebel Army and was killed at Lynchburg, Virginia.

My father and grandfather Mahan owned the Hot Springs, in Virginia, and were running stage lines through that part of Virginia. They were doing very well until the President signed a bill changing the currency from State to National. This broke up father and grandfather and after their reverse father worked at his trade as a carpenter.

Brother Greene drove a stage coach from Hot Springs to Old Sweet Springs. He did not go west but remained in Virginia and that is why he got into the Rebel Army.

J.P.

Cousin James Pyne dropped his middle name - Pondexter - because as he said, too many Ps did not sound well in a name. He died February 1, 1926, and was buried at Anderson, Indiana.

Sally Pyne, born in October 1791, was the only child of Robert (the 13 years old boy who ran away from his uncle and aunt in New York City), by his first wife, a Miss Stephenson or Stevenson of Pennsylvania and had not her oldest son by Robert Nickell, Madison M., assumed the name of Pyne - that name would now be extinct in the Greenbrier Valley of West Virginia. Her other children were Martha who married Richard Ramsey; Julia who married Joseph Ramsey; Isabel who married Robert McClary; and William Pyne who went to Minnesota and has never been heard from by any of his kinsmen.

Robert Nickell went to Kentucky. He was a member of a highly respected family, but he was not as good as Sally Pyne according to family traditions. Late in life Sally Pyne married Archibald Bostic, a veteran of the War of 1812, born in 1794; died 1869, and to this union one child was born - Ellen Bostic, who died about the age of sixteen.

After the death of her daughter, Ellen, and her husband, Sally Pyne Bostic lived and worked for her step-children who loved and cherished her as if she had been their own mother. The last years of her long life were spent in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Ramsey, near Ravens Eye, Fayette County, West Virginia, and the writer of this sketch visited her, his great grandmother, in that home when she was 104 years old. Her "mind was as clear as a bell". She said her father came from Ireland and her mother, who was a Stephenson came from Pennsylvania. She remembered well when Gen. George Washington died; she never taken a dose of medicine from a doctor in her life; she remembered her old friends and neighbors, and especially the old ministers in Monroe County, West Virginia, she died March 4th, 1897, age 105 years and 5 months.

When night came and bedtime that evening Uncle Joe Ramsey read a chapter from his Bible and those three aged saints joined in a prayer that was more earnest and touching than any this writer had ever knelt in before or since. They were Methodists and the order was - "Let us kneel in prayer".

If they had any sins I, a Presbyterian of my mother's faith believed they were all washed away that evening. There they were, those three aged people in a snug little farm home by the roadside, flowers, shrubs, gardens and field crops all around them. Aunt Julia well up in her seventies, Uncle Joe in his eighties and Old Grandma, one hundred and four. Truly it was the most remarkable prayer-meeting in my life, the Bostics, weeping as they fondled those locks of hair from "Granny's" head. Strange to say the hair had more black than gray in it.

The old Bostic home was still in existence at the time, a log house with puncheon floors, built by old Grandpa Archibald Bostic on top of Wiseman (now called Pyne) mountain, above Dropping Lick M.E. Church. Archibald Bostic served in the War of 1812, not in the Mexican War as stated in the History of Monroe County.

Pyne
Madison Milhollin Pyne was borned in Monroe County, Virginia, July 9, 1817, and died September 9, 1902, age 85 years and two months. He was the oldest child of Sally Pyne, and his birthplace is in the vicinity of Old Sweet Springs, the famous summer resort of that time. He grew like a Pine tree, straight and strong. He had large bones and muscles of iron, a lean man with a standing-weight of 202 pounds. When twelve years old he was living in the splendid home of "Uncle William" and "Aunt Nellie" Milhollin on Dropping Lick Creek, near the present village of Rock Camp, Monroe County, West Virginia. From them he took his middle name, Milhollin.

In the Milhollin home he educated himself with the help of "Aunt Nellie" Milhollin, a most excellent woman. He studied before an old-fashioned fireplace in the brick mansion house by the fire light of burning pine-knots, or fat pine, gathered from the little mountain nearby.

He read the Bible and the English Classics and all the history within his reach. As he grew to manhood his strength increased to such an extent that he was the strongest man in Monroe County, and his voice was like that of a giant.

At the age of twelve he carried a 200 pound bag of salt up a flight of stairs; at seventeen he cut the timber, split and laid up 200 fence rails as a day's work for Anderson Brown; in a tournament he won the prize for pulling the head off the greased-neck gander (the gander was suspended over the race course and the contestants rode by at full speed; grandfather grabbed the gander's neck in an underhand way and, with a quick twist, jerked the head off); in a blacksmith's shop, Matt Pyne, as he was called, not only lifted an anvil up onto the block by the horn with one hand, but also held an anvil in each hand by the horn and clapped them together three times; he hauled salt from the wells in Kanawha Valley and in passing Marshall's shaft, better known as the Hawk's Nest, he wagered that he could throw a stone into New River, from the top of the Hawk's Nest and won. (He shot the stone downward over that 1000 foot cliff in such a way that the wind could not carry it back against the face of the cliff before reaching the river); he carried the heaviest stone which went into the old Stone Hotel Building

at Salt Sulphur Springs; and while working on that building, he played a joke on a darkey who kept begging for a ride in his wheelbarrow. Finally Matt Pyne said: "Get in, I'll give you a ride", and while crossing the nearby Indian Creek on an open bridge, Matt gave the wheelbarrow a quick flip which sent the darkey into the muddy waters of the creek; Matt Pyne never met a man who could handle him in "rough and tumble" bout, or whip him in a fair fight; and when the war between the States came on, General Chapman said at a public meeting: "There is Matt Pyne over there, he can surround and whip a field full of yankees".

He did enlist in Bryan' Battery and served for a short time, until attack of acute rheumatism sent him home. He was then forty-four years of age. He never bushwacked a yankee although he saw them rob his home of everything fit to eat, and burn up his fences while they camped on his property. He never owned a slave, did not believe in slavery; yet he believed in the Confederates had the right under the Constitution to protection in their slaves and would have settled the question through time and patience, by purchase of the slaves and freedom, without bloodshed. Lincoln tried mightily to do the things that Matt Pyne would have done, even suggested colonization of the slaves, but the people, the foolish people, were a flame of hate. Reason was cast to the winds, the Constitution was violated, and "Civilization" makes and unmakes Constitutions", they say; and "Civilization" is unmaking our Supreme Court at this present time, in windy March 1937. Civilization is great stuff, "believe it or not".

On November 5th, 1836, Madison M. Pyne married Mahala Smith, daughter of Jacob Smith who came with his brother, Abraham Smith, from Rockingham County, Virginia and settled on Indian Creek, below Salt Sulphur Springs, Monroe County. Mahala Smith's mother was a Ballard from Albermerle County, Virginia. Madison and Mahala Pyne worked together, saved, bought land until they possessed more than 1,000 acres, reared a large family and were well off when the great so-called Civil War wrecked them. (Is there anything civil about any war?).

(The revolution of 1861-1865 in the United States of America, would be a better name for that foolish, frarticial strife).

Then horses and cattle were sold for confederate money and that money became so worthless that Mahala Pyne used a lot of it for wall-paper and, in later years, gave me several bills to use as markers in my school books. After the war Madison M. Pyne sold off several farms to his children, keeping only about 300 acres for himself. He employed an Italian to start a vineyard on the South side of Pyne Mountain where he grew grapes in large quantities, also the damson plum and peaches, for the White Sulphur Springs market. He also ranged cattle on the Big Survey 180,000 - acre tract in Giles County, Virginia, embracing the present Mountain Lake summer resort and Bald Knob, one of the highest peaks in Virginia. Every year in the autumn he took his cattle to the Baltimore market and brought back money and nice things for us all. Little children "shied away" from Matt Pyne's giant-like voice until they learned from his actions that he had a heart of gold. Mahala Pyne's kitchen had a fragrance of good things to eat which, the child's mind can never forget and was excelled only by her kind and generous heart. She was the best grandmother in all the world.

Mahala Pyne, borned November 9th, 1817, died December 25th, 1900, age 83.

The children of Madison M. and Mahala Pyne were in the order as named below: -

James Alexander; Eleanor Frances; Malinda Jane; Mary Ann (Grandmother of the L.R. Honaker children); Lewis Stewart; Rebecca Susan; Louisa; Elizabeth Stepp; John Wesley; and Jacob Wilson Pyne.
