Jim Blauer:

The letter on Italian research
I mentioned and promised.

Vivian Foster

Dear Italian Researcher:

Until two months ago I was having a very difficult time finding other people who are researching Italian names.

I had contacted three large genealogy groups here in the Los Angeles area and none of them had anyone doing Italian research. I assumed that SOMEWHERE there were people working on Italian names and that it would be helpful for them to be able to contact one another. To that end I formed POINT (Pursuing Our Italian Names Together).

I have set up a computerized data base of all the researchers who write to me, as well as all the surnames/provinces they are researching. As of mid-August, we have 75 members with over 700 surnames in the data base.

Anyone working on Italian surnames can write to me, giving me their name and address as well as the surnames they are researching, including the Province where the name originated if known.

(4 3/4 X 11)
Include a SASE (#12 envelope with 90 cents postage) and I will send back a printout of all those who have contacted me along with a list of the surnames being researched and a tiny newsletter (a total of over 20 pages of material).

In time, this could grow into a real network of those with an interest in Italian names.

Sincerely Yours,

Tom

Dear POINT Submitter:

Your name has been entered as a submitter to POINT and your surnames of interest have been entered into the data base.

POINT now has 228 submitters and there are over 2200 surnames in the data base. We are adding an average of seven new submitters and 50 new surnames each week. When I started POINT in June, I had no idea it would grow as it has, and because of this large size, I can no longer afford to send out the material for just a SASE. The cost of printing is just too great. I have recently decided to change the way POINT is conducted.

A new, expanded newsletter (POINTers) will be printed quarterly (Spring, Summer, Fall and Winter) beginning with the Spring, 1988 issue. Each issue of the newsletter will include the complete listing of all the surnames in the data base, the complete listing of all those who have submitted surnames (with the two lists cross-indexed) plus a section of tips and hints on Italian genealogy and history, which will vary in length, depending on the amount of material sent in by our readers.

The Spring, 1988 issue will include over 40 pages of material. The cost of a four-issue subscription is $20.00. There continues to be no charge to enter surnames into the POINT data base.

Thank you for your interest in POINT and I hope you will consider subscribing to POINTers.

Sincerely Yours,

Thomas E. Militello, M.D.

Dear Mr. Blauer:

In the Spring 1988 issue of P.O.I.N.T. that I recently received I noticed that you were also researching the name of NAPOLITANO. That is one of my husband's family names so I am sending you his chart. I haven't been able to go back very far but here it is anyway. I would appreciate seeing what you have on the NAPOLITANO family.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Blauer:

I am in the process of transcribing the civil registration for the village of Alessandria del Carretto, Cosenza province, Italy for the period of 1838 to 1848 and after reading the 1989 P.O.I.N.T. Cumulative Directory I see that you are searching for the surname NAPOLI. I have enclosed a partial list from 1838 to 1840 and hope that it may help you in your research.

I am also interested in the NAPOLI's from the Alessandria del Carretto area, although not as my direct line.

Again, I hope the list helps.

On the Italian side, it might be good to begin with passport and emigration records. As passports are such a necessity, check in the appropriate state archives for those issued between 1800 and the end of World War I. Until 1869 the states issued passports, but local police had issuing authority after that. For post World War I information, check with the appropriate local police headquarters. I can't promise success, but you can try.

Ancestors from Italy?

by John W. Heisey

America has been described as a melting pot, and if food is any criterion, it's true. Do you like spaghetti or other kinds of pasta? Who doesn't? Regardless of whether you do or don't, it doesn't mean you are or are not Italian.

This brings up an interesting note. According to a short article in the Pennsylvania Genealogical Magazine (Volume XXXIV, No. 3, 1986, page 229) it has been estimated that over 12 million Americans have Italian ancestors. Maybe that estimate is conservative. Anyway, some of you may be trying to make the big ge-

In the National Archives many records from across the nation have been gathered and kept. Among these are parish and civil registers, national census counts, communal and family archives, tax lists, and many more records, including some relating to professions and trade guilds. While there are many documents, they are not complete, nor do they cover the entire country.

The address for the Archivio Centrale dello Stato (Central State Archives) is Pizzalle degli Archivi 610, Roma. Don't confuse it with the Archivio de Stato de Roma (State Archives of Rome) at Corso Rinascimento 40, Roma, which is one of the provincial archives.

If you're trying to trace your Italian ancestors back to Italy, sooner or later you'll discover immigrant ancestors. That will probably be in the late 19th or early 20th centuries, as that's when most of the Italians arrived in America. That being the case, immigration records of the U.S. and passenger ship lists should help.

On the Italian side, it might be good to begin with passports and emigration records. As passports are such a necessity, check in the appropriate state archives for those issued between 1869 and the end of World War I. Until 1869 the states issued passports, but local police had issuing authority after that. For post-World War I information, check with the appropriate local police headquarters. I can't promise success, but you can try.

Emigration records for Italy have been kept by the Ministry of the Interior since 1869, but that information is not open to researchers. However, the office might relent and give appropriate genealogical data they find in the records. For example, if a request clearly shows the relationship of the requestor and the emigrant, and/or the reason for the in-nealogical jump from the United States to Italy.

Italy today is a far cry from what it was in previous centuries. We're all familiar with stories about the Roman Empire and many of us labored long over high school Latin. But this is not the place to go too deeply into Italian history.

As far back as AD 1600, the Italian peninsula was divided into a number of little states or principalities. By the mid-18th century, Italy was mostly under the control of Spain and Austria. The exceptions were the independent little states of Venice, Genoa, Lucia, Sardinia and the Papal State.

Napoleon stuck his finger into the pie and in 1796 conquered Italy, setting up a puppet kingdom in part of it. The rest of the country was incorporated into France. This has had a bearing on genealogy insofar as it concerns language in records, law and archives.

The Congress of Vienna, which unraveled the Napoleonic mess in 1815, worked on Italy too. Most of the former states were restored, but Venice and Lombardy were given to Austria.

Relative quiet covered Italy until 1848 when a revolution broke out and continued until 1861. The resulting shakeup established the Kingdom of Italy. That kingdom, however, didn't include all the little states.

Finally in 1870, all of Italy was unified into one kingdom which lasted until the fascist dictatorship of Benito Mussolini (1922-1943). Then in 1946 the Republic of Italy was established.

All the above points to some genealogical sad facts — lots of changes took place in the country. Records were lost, stored in obscure archives or maintained by other nations. The big task now is to find records when you need them.

At present, Italy is divided into 92-94 provinces and each province is subdivided into communes. (Don't equate that term with the name communism.) The end result is that there are now over 8,000 communes, and each is further broken down into hamlets (Frezioni). Ready to find the right hamlet from all those thousands?

As I said, it's a big task, especially since there is no centralized place in Italy for genealogical records. But don't stop, there is a ray of hope.

Enter a surprising hero The "Certificate of Family Genealogy." This unique project was begun in 1869, but it doesn't cover everybody in the nation. However, where they are extant, these documents show names, relationships, dates and places of birth for all living family members at the time the certificate was prepared. Ask about ones for your family in Italy from the Ufficio Anagrafe in the appropriate municipality.

Earlier, I mentioned the provinces of Italy. Although they are separate entities, they are grouped into 19 regions. Throughout the entire country are scattered at least 60 state archives, plus a central or national archives in Rome.

formation is deemed satisfactory, the data may be released.

While Genoa wasn't the most important port in Italy for emigration to America, you may wish to check some of their archives. Surprisingly, the University of Wisconsin, Madison, WI 53706, has in their library microfilm copies of many records from the Genoa state archives. Checking for some Italian data there is much closer and easier than going to Italy for it.

The same is true of the huge accumulation of Italian records held by the Genealogical Society of Utah, Salt Lake City, UT. It's relatively simple to use that data through the branch or "stake" libraries of the society, which are found all over America, at or near Mormon (Latter-Day Saints) churches.

Census Lists of Italy Limited by Scope, Access

by John W. Heisey

Part II

Very often censuses can help locate ancestors in Italy. However, don't look for them too early in time. The first known census for all of Italy was taken in 1861 and enumerations were taken at 10 year intervals since then until 1931. For some reason another census was taken in 1936. The next one was in 1951 and others are dated 1961, 1971 and 1981. As might be expected, the census lists are not all open to the public. For more and the official concerned cannot communicate in the same language. Remember that in many of the smaller and rural areas there may not be anyone available to translate for you.

This reminds me of an Italian-American under whom I served in the U.S. Army. He spoke Italian fluently and insisted it was easy, claiming that if you could pronounce the words you could read Italian and understand it. Don't believe it. No language is that simple, and you can't rely on knowing the meaning of words found. Be sure of what you are reading, and if you don't know, have it translated.

Now we come to another important point. Here in America we're used to copying documents and expect to find copy machines nearby. This isn't the case in Italy, or in most other nations. Any documents you find and wish to have reproduced may need to be copied by hand. Again, if you're not sure of the language or the style of handwriting, don't guess. Have someone fluent in that language (and English) copy the data for you. Then, when you get to some large Italian city or even back home, you can have the information translated.

From vital records it's only a step to local church or parish registers. Normally, in Italy there is a bishop in each provincial capital city, and under detailed information on which ones can be checked, contact the Direzione Generale del Servizi Trenici, Istituto Centrale di Statistici, Via Cesare Balbo 16, Roma.

By the way, censuses were taken on the island of Sardinia in 1848 and 1857. No other censuses for the entire nation or parts of it in modern times are known than those mentioned.

Another research source, which might be one of the best, is that of civil registration. This began for all of Italy in 1869 and gets right down to village level. Contact the Ufficio de Stato Civile (Civil Registry Office) in the Registry Office) in the commune (town) where the birth, marriage or death took place. You must know this information if the data is to be looked for, and you should ask for a full certificate showing all the information available.

Some parts of Italy had civil registration as early as 1803. About all you can do is search, write or visit the appropriate town to determine when registration began there. If you have difficulty finding the desired information locally, contact the Istituto Centrale de Statistica, Via Cesare Balbo 16, Roma.

Just to let you know how helpful these certificates can be, look at what information is contained in birth certificates: name of child, date and place of birth, father's and mother's names (with mother's maiden name); and father's occupation. Since 1900 some marriage and death data may also be found on birth registration documents. Marriage certificates list names of both bride and groom, their parents' names, witnesses' names, marital status and place of birth of the bridal couple, and occupations and addresses of all persons mentioned in the certificates.

Death records give places and dates of birth and death of the decedent, name of the deceased and his or her parents, as well as addresses and occupations. What more could one ask for?

While probably the majority of people will be found in these certificates, the documents themselves are usually difficult to find. For one thing, they are not well indexed, and, the ravages of wars, weather, time and human carelessness have resulted in some gaps in records. Additionally, think of people themselves. Some local officials may not want to help you (unless a special "fee" is paid), and others may not really understand what you want. This is especially true if you him are the local parishes. There are one or more parishes in each commune, and even a hamlet or village can constitute a parish.

How many parishes in the whole of Italy? The best estimate is around 25,000 in almost 300 dioceses. If you are interested in finding out when a particular parish was formed, they are all listed in the Annuario delle Diocesi d'Italia (Turin: Editore Marietti, 1951). This can be an extremely helpful book, as you must contact the individual parish for data from the parish register.

Keep in mind that many of the older parish registers have been transferred to diocesan archives, therefore, the book mentioned here might help establish the appropriate diocese for the parish you seek. Even if your parish is quite old, there are few surviving church registers before the early 17th century. To make it even more difficult, there is no central repository in Italy for church records, old or new.

Until the French Revolution and the subsequent occupation and reorganization of Italy by France, the local parish priest kept the parish records. After that the commune took control and parish records were to be reported to that authority.

Another interesting and sometimes helpful record often found is the clerical survey. This record dates from the early 18th to the mid 19th century but is usually far from complete. Many of these records have been destroyed. Some parishes never made such a survey, but where they were made, the records list all the people in the parish. As almost everyone belonged to the Catholic church, very few residents of the parish would have been overlooked.

Tax Records of Italy Among Most Comprehensive

by John W. Heisey

Part III

A previous column on records of Italy ended on the subject of church registers but that isn't the end. Let's look at parish records a little more closely. In fact, we'll look at three separate types of books — baptismal, marriage and death registers.

Records were kept in Latin and the books bear Latin names: Liber Baptizatorum — for the baptismal record. The information in this book can be quite extensive, listing the name of the child and dates and places of birth and baptism. The name of the father is also shown (if the child was born legitimately), and usually the names of the baptismal sponsors or godparents are shown. Frequently the relationship of godparents to the child is shown.

The marriage record bears the inscription Liber Matrimoniorum and provides the usual data: place of residence of the bridal couple, their names, ages and sometimes occupations.

The death record, or Liber Defunctorum, gives lots of data on the deceased. Most of the information is the same as that found in the civil registration record of deaths, so you have a cross-check of information.

A fourth type of church record that can be of value is the confirmation record. In this you will find the complete name of the confirmer and data on the parents, as well as the name of the parish — of the parents that is. An excellent way to trace back a family's movements.

While deeds and wills are useful, don't put much hope in finding them for everyone. Many people didn't have enough property to make a will or a deed necessary. If you do want to search for these records, contact the Ufficio del Registro (Registration Office) in the appropriate town.

Notarial records (which include wills and deeds) begin as early as the 13th century, but these early ones are relatively scarce. Remember that only land-owning and other well-to-do families had need for such documents.

Tax records, on the other hand, concern almost every family in every generation. While such documents may cover hundreds of years, they are extremely difficult to use. There are no indexes. Look for tax records in the local municipal office, but if you can't find them there, perhaps the records were transferred to the appropriate state archives.

While death and taxes seem to hit everyone, for adult males the same seems to be true of military conscription records. These began for all of Italy in 1869 and may furnish some useful data, if permission to release the information is given by the government. Among the items found in these papers are the full name, date and place of birth, residence and occupation of the individual conscripted. There may also be information as to the status of the man (whether he served, didn't serve, or emigrated before reaching age 18). The Italian Consulate in the United States can supply you with the appropriate address in Italy where you can write for details.

As part of your researching process, you'll likely need or want to check books on Italian families and related subjects. The following, while not the only source books, may be of the most use:

a. Dizionario Biografico (Rome: Instituto della Enciclopedia Italiana, 1960-1976). This is a set of about 20 volumes by now, dealing with Italian families, but unless you understand Italian, it may not be of much help. However, you might come across an ancestral name or family that may be worth having translated.

b. Our Italian Surnames, by Joseph Fusilla (Evanston, IL: Chandlers, 1949). It's always good to read up on background data. This work might steer you to the right area of the country for your family research.

c. In Search of Your European Roots, by Angus Baxter (Baltimore: The Genealogical Publishing Company Inc., 1985) has a good section on Italian research — in English.

If you can, check current and back issues of The Italian Genealogist, published at 1510 Craven Ave., Torrance, CA 90501. Possibly a query to this publication will bring you some information on an ancestor, or put you in touch with some previously-unknown relative who is researching the same line.

Contacting genealogical societies in this country and in Italy may also help. Genealogical groups in Italy should be able to find you a reputable genealogist to work with, or steer you to the right area of the country or an office where you may find the data you seek. The following agencies (organizations) may be places to start:

a. Genealogico Italiano, Castelli 19, Firenze, Italy.

b. Istituto di Genealogia e Araldica, Via Antonio Cesari 5a, Rome, Italy.

c. Istituto Genealogico Italiano, Via Torta 14, Firenze, Italy.

You should be able to write to these places in English and get a reply. However, the answer may be in Italian. (Be sure to include a SASE and two International Reply Coupons.) If you know someone who is fluent in Italian, have your letters translated before sending them. Results from the recipient may be better.

Just a few bits of miscellaneous information now. Until the 1880s, not many Italians had immigrated to the United States, and most of them came from northern Italy. Here in America they congregated mostly in the North and Midwest.

Economic troubles in Italy in the 1880s set off mass migrations. This brought thousands upon thousands of Italians each year into the U.S. Most of these later immigrants came from the southern part of Italy and from the island of Sicily. By the way, most Italians looked down on Sicilians and Italians would not often intermarry with the islanders.

Don't ever be ashamed of your Italian ancestors, even if they were Sicilian. And, don't be embarrassed of Italian ancestors being very poor. They couldn't help their situation in Italy or in America. Most did their best wherever they were, so don't be afraid to trace your Latin families. You'll find a long and treasured heritage.

Iowa Library Hours Cut

The Iowa State Historical Department has announced that due to state budget cuts hours at two major libraries will be reduced. The library in Iowa City and the Des Moines library will be closed to the general public on Mondays (effective Oct. 1).

Regular library hours at both facilities will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. The Iowa City library at 402 Iowa Ave. will continue to be open the last Tuesday evening of each month from 6 to 9 p.m.

RE: POINTERS

Dear James,

Saw your listing in Pointer's Annual Directory. I too am searching for a Troisi. Mine may be in the town of Tufo not Turo. All I have to go on is a death certificate of my grandfather. His mother's maiden name is listed as Philomeno Troesi or Troisi. The witting is so poor I can't be sure of the spelling of the name or town. She was born in Italy.

She was married to an Angelo Tiso and had a son named Angelo Tiso born 9Nov1886 ,not sure where he was born or any other children. He died in New York 26 Mar 1934. Her son came to the US about 1910 with his wife Palmina Molinaro I've included a copy of my family group sheet.

I know this is a shot in the dark but any information would be appreciated.

Sincerely,

Alice Romero

Newport Beach, CA. 92663-5829

Dear Blauer,

I recently received a copy of my Grandparents birth certificates. After the excitement subsided, I realized that these two records had ten other names on them in addition to my Grandparents'. Your name was selected from POINTERS because I saw you were working on one of these names. This might help you locate someone who was in Tufo, Italy in 1885 & 1889.
Sincerely,

Record #70
