BARRET HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, IOWA.

J. C. FLETCHER, Proprietor.

THE attention of the travelling community is respectfully directed to this commodious and well known establishment. The House, in addition to being subjected to a thorough renovation, has recently undergone considerable repair, and several rooms have been refitted with the view of accommodating families from abroad.

The growth of Burlington has been attended with a regular and constant improvement of its market, until there is no longer any difficulty in supplying the table with all the delicacies of the season. With these facilities, and an experience of more than twenty years as a caterer, the proprietor feels sanguine of his ability to give increased satisfaction to all who may hereafter make his house their stopping place.

Persons from the South who purpose spending the warm summer months on the upper Mississippi can nowhere find a more pleasant point than Burlington, and nowhere more comfortable quarters than the BARRET HOUSE. The country around Burlington is densely populated and highly improved, with good roads and delightful drives (in the summer season) in all directions. Game, also, of all kinds, is plenty. The charges, too, are low, which will not, it is presumed, be a serious objection to the House.

Barret House.

The card of the proprietor of this excellent establishment will be found in another column. All that is said of the house, and the inducements held out to strangers to make Burlington a point of sojourn during the warm summer months, is true. It has often been a source of surprise to us, that, in view of the superior accommodations afforded by our city, visitors should pass it by for less attractive points.

The BARRET HOUSE is one of the most extensive buildings in the Upper Mississippi country, and in all that constitutes a good hotel is surpassed by but few, if any, throughout the entire West.

commence the ascent of the mountain. He led his men, and packed the horses. His intention then was to cross the high lies between the Arkansas and Nevada. Two days after he left the pass followed by two men, who wish to be in the party, but as he had no need of them, they returned. They stated that the party when ascending the mountain found the rough very deep snow. Col. FRENCH in advance, with a few of his ablest men, began a road for the mules and horses. When these men left, within six days they reached the summit of the mountain, and it was found that the most difficult part was when they reached the top, as the descent would be much more easy and rapid. It was Fremont's purpose, says Major Fitzfall immediately on the Rio del Norte, to travel a considerable distance north of the New Mexico settlements; from which place he intended to go directly for California, leaving the traveled routes, one north and the other west of him, and passing midway between them. Col. FRENCH's party was composed of thirty persons, and he had over a hundred mules. An interval of six or seven days had passed, and yet, it would seem to have made very little progress, as he is supposed to have been distant from Taos about twenty miles when the disaster befel him. The names of the persons who accompanied Fremont in this expedition, but not all were equally successful. We know, however, that Capt. Cathcart, an English officer and traveller in India, was a compagnon de voyage, and was on board, and all the speculators that left here six months ago have realized all their cargoes at immense profits. We expect shortly to have a great influx of this species of bullion, as it is over-abundant, and accessible to all who choose to collect it, over an extent of ground six hundred miles long by eight broad. Mr. Alex. Cross has sent one solid piece of gold, weighing ten ounces, as a present to his wife here."

The foregoing extract comes from a quarter to be depended upon, and we publish it relying upon the good authority of the party who communicated it to us.

REVIVAL OF RELIGION.—A deeply interesting revival of Religion is now in progress in the Presbyterian church in this city, and large numbers are giving themselves to the service of God. We are pleased to hear that the same is the case in many places within the borders of our state.

His wonders to perform."

FISH KILLED BY ICE.—It is a fact not generally known that the ice in breaking up on the Mississippi kills thousands of fish. Whether they are unable to escape or cannot realize their dangerous situation, we leave to those to determine who are better acquainted with the finny tribe, but certain it is vast numbers of them are thus destroyed. There is a large catfish, weighing in the vicinity of one hundred pounds, now lying upon our shore, a victim to the recent breaking up of the ice on the Mississippi.—Davenport Gaz.

UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE.

JOHN C. FLETCHER, OF BURLINGTON, IOWA.

RADIATOR FOR STOVES.

Specification of Letters Patent No. 9,745, dated May 24, 1853.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, JOHN C. FLETCHER, of Burlington, in the county of Des Moines and State of Iowa, have invented certain new and useful Improvements in Stoves; and I do hereby declare the following to be a full, clear, and exact description of the same, reference being had to the accompanying drawing, making a part thereof, and which represents a vertical section taken through the center of the stove at right angles to the axis of the outer shell or cylinder.

The nature of my invention consists in combining with the fire chamber and escape pipe a series of concentric flues, having communicating passages one with the other, so that the products of combustion shall commence in their passage in the outer flue, and passing through the series escape at the center flue, and so that the heat of one flue shall be communicated to the next succeeding one, and by heating and warming that to prepare it for rarefying the air and transmitting the draft more rapidly through the series.

To enable others skilled in the art to make and use my invention, I will proceed to describe the same with reference to the drawings.

This stove is more peculiarly adapted to the burning of coal, but may with great economy be used with wood.

The fire chamber A is placed underneath the flue cylinder, and the heated products of combustion pass in the direction indicated by the arrows through the series of flues B, B, B, &c., one within the other, and gradually approaching the center flue C, whence they may be carried to the chimney. These flues are connected by the inclined passages D, D, D, but it is obvious that, instead of concentric flues and communicating passages, the flues may be eccentric and serve an equivalent purpose.

This stove may be made of either sheet or cast iron, and put together by flanges, grooves, rods and nuts, or in any other well known manner, and may be built vertical or horizontal, the object of the series of flues, which may be increased or diminished at pleasure, being that one flue shall impart a portion of its heat to the flue in advance of it, and thus cause the escaping heat to rarefy the air in advance of the draft and thus produce a sufficient draft in a long flue to effectually keep up the fire, and present a large surface of metal to be heated. By this method of constructing stoves it will be perceived that the escaping heat, smoke and other similar products come into immediate contact with every piece or portion of the stove, which takes up almost the entire escaping heat, while the repeated metallic connections between the flues, and the outer ends of the stove, bring by eduction, a great portion of the internal heat, to said ends, where it is radiated into the room.

Having thus fully described the nature of my invention what I claim therein as new and desire to secure by Letters Patent is,

The interposition, between the fire chamber and the exit pipe of a stove, of a series of concentric flues or a spiral flue so arranged as that the heat of one flue shall pass through the partitions and in whole or in part be transmitted to the next flue or portion of the flue in advance, and prepare it for transmitting the draft through the series substantially as described.

Application for removal and appointment of Guardian for Sarah Graham Foose, ^{a minor} heir and distributee of the estate of J. C. Hetcher and David S. Sheldon ^{of Davenport in Scott County Iowa} asks this court for the removal of Sarah F. Hetcher hitherto appointed guardian of said Sarah Graham Foose, and for appointment of himself as the guardian of the estate, ^{of said} minor & for cause of such application states -

That a long time ago the father of said child (her mother being dead) placed said minor in the care & custody of your petitioner & gave him full power and authority & requested him to retain the care of said child & to manage her affairs and see to her education & in all respects to control said child as her said father could do; that said Sarah Graham Foose has ever since that time been living in the family of your petitioner as her protector and guardian; that her said father also conveyed to petitioner a large amount of property to be held in trust & for the use and benefit of said minor, and petitioner is in fact & for a long time has been the guardian of the estate as well as of the person of said minor by virtue of the aforesaid Conveyances in trust, and of all her estate, excepting such as she may be entitled to as heir of the estate of said J. B. Fletcher deceased that being so situated and having the custody of said minor & a large portion of her property, it will be greatly to the advantage of said Child that Petitioner be appointed by this Court as her guardian, that said Sarah F. Fletcher is also an heir and executrix of said Estate and is also sole executrix thereof that her interests and the interests of said minor heir will necessarily be conflicting, and that she is not so situated as to care with that fidelity and disinterestedness for the interests of said Child as your petitioner could & would do, that if said Sarah F. Fletcher is retained as such guardian, the expenses of managing said estate will in all probability be much greater than if committed to the charge of Petitioner who already controls a large part of her property is so situated as to be able to manage said Estate to great advantage & with much less expense to said Child

Petitioner therefore asks the removal from said Guardianship to said Sarah F. Fletcher and to be appointed ^{as guardian of the estate of said Child} instead of said and
