Plan of the Ages / Revelation Chart I will preach from!
 This chart was used by my father, Rev. E. Lloyd Shoemaker when he was an Assembly of God preacher in Illinois. The chart was restored about 12 years ago, but is aging. This chart unfolds revelation and the prophecies related to Jesus second coming! I look forward to preach from it and share it with the people of Mexico! The actual age of this chart is about 42 years old.

Here Bruce "The Wiz Tech" !
 He has special gifts and talents that in my opinion are unsurpassable!

Bruce is top notch and extremely professional!
 Many, many thanks for God using him and his gifts to bless not only us but all of you!

Here Bruce and the better half "Linnie" in the Studio.

Marvin Lee Fulks

The Life and Ministry of Marvin L. Fulks. Marvin Lee Fulks was born August 11, 1933. He was raised in Jerseyville, Illinois, one of four children of John and Helen (Hale) Fulks. After high school, Marvin and five of his classmates together joined the Air Force. On August 2, 1953, Marvin married Karen Janette Stephens and was sent to Scott Air Force Base, in Belleville, Illinois, where he and Karen started their family. Their Divine move to Wichita, Kansas provided Christian neighbors who led Marvin and Karen to a relationship with Christ. For nine years Marvin taught electronics at McDonnell-Douglas Aircraft. During many of those years he was trained and mentored in ministry by Rev. E. Lloyd Shoemaker. In 1962 Marvin and Karen entered full-time church ministry with their four children, Steve, Jeff, Judy and Ron. Marvin then pastored in Brighton, Illinois (Todd's birthplace), Muncie, Indiana (Ketra's birthplace), and Normal, Illinois (Deanna's birthplace). While at First Assembly in Normal for 10 years, Marvin oversaw a church building program as he pastored a growing congregation of over 400 people. He would jokingly say, "I'm the only Normal pastor in Illinois!" Marvin pastored a total of eight churches in Illinois, Indiana, Nebraska & Iowa. He also served as Elder and District Missions Director in Nebraska. In early 2000 Marvin and Karen began to valiantly face Marvin's Alzheimer's Disease. Marvin kept an overall sweet spirit and sense of humor throughout. Karen's patient and faithful love was demonstrated daily as Alzheimer's Disease slowly and steadily stole away her husband. Marvin passed away on January 9, 2008. He is survived by his wife Karen; his brother James; sister Louella; and his seven children, Stephen (Julie) Fulks, Jeffery (Diane) Fulks, Judy (Kent) Anderson, Ronald (Sabrina) Fulks, Todd (Lynn) Fulks, Ketra Fulks, and Deanna (Brad) Terpstra; his 12 grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren. Marvin was preceded in death by his parents; and a brother, Darwin Fulks. Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a.m. Monday in Adams Funeral Home, Nixa. Burial will follow in Missouri Veterans Cemetery, Springfield. Visitation will be from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday in the funeral home. Memorial donations may be sent to Rural Compassion, 688 Gallup Hill, Nixa, MO 65714.

Sandra,

First of all let me state that your grandfather is not in my Shoemaker line but I found some information for you.

Your grandfather's full name is Elmer Lloyd Shoemaker. He was born in Iowa to Elmer L Shoemaker and Florence Betzer. In the 1930 census he is in Banner Township, Woodbury County IA with his father age 41, his mother age 34 and a sister F Pearl age 6. He may be the Lloyd Shoemaker who was a pastor in Ruck IA in Sep 1954.

Hopefully someone will see this additional information and make a connection.

Dick

Deputy Accused of Sex Assaults While on Duty; [Home Edition]

ANDREA FORD. Los Angeles Times (pre-1997 Fulltext). Los Angeles, Calif.: Oct 25, 1991. pg. 1

Abstract (Summary)

Deputy Lloyd Shoemaker, 33, who has worked as a patrol officer at the Temple City substation for most of his 10-year career, faces two counts of rape, one count of oral copulation and one charge of lewd conduct. He is expected to surrender to authorities today and be arraigned in Los Angeles Superior Court. Shoemaker is on leave but his pay will be suspended after the court hearing. If convicted of the crimes, he could serve up to 24 years in prison.

Shoemaker is the fourth deputy from the Temple City substation to be criminally charged in separate, unrelated cases in less than two months. About 200 deputies are assigned there. Authorities said the string of allegations has led officials to audit the substation's operations and review training practices.

[Elaine Minnes] said the woman was first ordered to drive her car to a doughnut shop as the deputy followed in his patrol car. When they arrived, Shoemaker saw a security guard nearby. So instead of remaining, the deputy ordered her to drive to a secluded area near Legg Lake, where she was allegedly raped. Investigators later found traces of semen on the back seat of Shoemaker's patrol car, according to court documents.

A veteran sheriff's deputy was charged Thursday with sexually assaulting three women after he pulled them over for fabricated traffic violations and forced them to drive to secluded places under threat of arrest, authorities said.

Deputy Lloyd Shoemaker, 33, who has worked as a patrol officer at the Temple City substation for most of his 10-year career, faces two counts of rape, one count of oral copulation and one charge of lewd conduct. He is expected to surrender to authorities today and be arraigned in Los Angeles Superior Court. Shoemaker is on leave but his pay will be suspended after the court hearing. If convicted of the crimes, he could serve up to 24 years in prison.

At a news conference in which the charges against Shoemaker were made public, Dist. Atty. Ira Reiner said the deputy "repeatedly abused his authority to force unwilling victims to have sex with him . . . while on duty, in uniform."

Neither Shoemaker nor his lawyer could not be reached for comment.

Shoemaker is the fourth deputy from the Temple City substation to be criminally charged in separate, unrelated cases in less than two months. About 200 deputies are assigned there. Authorities said the string of allegations has led officials to audit the substation's operations and review training practices.

Shoemaker's method of operation, Reiner said, "was to lie in wait for women-often at night-as they were leaving bars and restaurants.

"He would follow them, pull them over on trumped-up charges, convince them that they were about to be arrested and order them to remote locations while he followed in his patrol car."

When safely out of public view, he said, Shoemaker would force the women into his patrol car and attack them.

The deputy's pattern, Reiner said, was consistent, leading authorities to believe that he attacked other women who were too frightened to come forward.

Reiner noted that one of the women the deputy is accused of assaulting contacted authorities only two weeks ago after pondering for months what she should do. The third woman was found by Sheriff's Department investigators after they pored through more than a year of Shoemaker's field log entries looking for names of women he may have had contact with.

Sgt. Elaine Minnes, one of the investigators assigned to the case, said more than 30 women were interviewed in the investigation.

The incidents came to light in April, Minnes said, shortly after a 23-year-old El Monte woman was allegedly attacked by Shoemaker. The woman reportedly was persuaded by friends to come forward a few hours after the alleged attack.

Shoemaker pulled the woman over after she left a Duarte restaurant and falsely said her car had been used in two burglaries, Reiner said.

According to an affidavit filed to support a search for Shoemaker's clothing, the woman asked not to be taken to jail.

"If I don't take you to jail, what are you going to do for me?" Shoemaker replied, according to the document.

Minnes said the woman was first ordered to drive her car to a doughnut shop as the deputy followed in his patrol car. When they arrived, Shoemaker saw a security guard nearby. So instead of remaining, the deputy ordered her to drive to a secluded area near Legg Lake, where she was allegedly raped. Investigators later found traces of semen on the back seat of Shoemaker's patrol car, according to court documents.

Another of the cases involves a 25-year-old woman who was allegedly raped by Shoemaker after she left a cocktail lounge in Pasadena on Dec. 15, 1990, according to Reiner. Investigators tracked her down using the field log.

The third woman fought Shoemaker off, he said. The deputy is charged with exposing himself. She came forward Oct. 9, Minnes said, only after seeing news reports about the April incident and watching television talk shows in which rape victims told their stories.

The allegations against Shoemaker are the latest in a string of accusations leveled against deputies at the Temple City substation.

Three other deputies are accused of stealing credit cards from motorists they encountered on traffic stops. In addition, 53 deputies from the substation are defendants in two major federal civil rights lawsuits.

In one of the lawsuits, 13 deputies were accused of viciously beating three Temple City men. That suit was settled Thursday for $925,000. In the other suit, 40 deputies are accused of vandalizing 14 houses to intimidate gang members.

"We are very concerned at the number of things going on at the Temple City station," Chief Roy Brown said at Thursday's news conference. Brown, who oversees field operations at eight substations including the one in Temple City, added: "I've looked at Temple City to determine if we're doing something wrong and, frankly, we haven't found anything."

He said, however, that a new lieutenant was recently brought in to bolster supervisory personnel and that the substation is slated to be staffed with additional sergeants. No high-ranking personnel have been transferred out of the substation because of the allegations, he said.

"That's the kind of thing we want, more community involvement," Mirabella said. "The people have to help us with the problems, and they have to help us with innovative solutions."

The captain has also reorganized the station. Before, one sergeant supervised an entire shift. Now, as many as four are on duty. Complaints, lawsuits and disciplinary actions against Temple deputies that were scattered in files departmentwide have been consolidated at Temple Station.

Deputies who chalk up a list of such complaints are counseled to avoid major problems. Finally, Mirabella has stressed communication between line deputies and their supervisors by requiring monthly meetings.

The approach is already making a difference in Monrovia-County, an unincorporated area west of Duarte once considered among the roughest parts of the Temple area.

Today, children and senior citizens wave when Sgt. Sam Jones cruises by in his patrol car. Young men lean into the passenger side window to chat. Deputies receive crime tips, along with pies and cakes baked by grateful residents, Jones said.

"They knew the gangsters in the area by sight and by name," Jones said of the deputies. "But they couldn't walk up to local residents and say, 'Mr. Smith, Mrs. Johnson, how are the grandkids?'"

Even critics say the deputies have improved their demeanor. Attorney John Burton, who is handling the lawsuit against 118 deputies, says he receives fewer brutality complaints.

"A lot of the low-level beatings that were so common and were building in frequency, those seem to have diminished," Burton said. "What we have now are the more serious ones, but they're stopping some of that lower-level brutality."

And David Hall, president of the Monrovia, Arcadia, Duarte branch of the NAACP, says his area is now a friendly one.

Mirabella wants to duplicate the idea in South San Gabriel and East Pasadena, unincorporated areas also patrolled by Temple City deputies.

"We're trying to teach the deputies they've got to show care for the people and then people care about you," he said. In the Media Spotlight Among the incidents in the Temple Station in 1991: Jan. 1: Ignoring department orders to avoid New Year's Eve revelers firing guns into the air, Deputy Brian E. Kazmierski, 26, confronted Pedro Castaneda Gonzalez, 28, a Mexican national, and two other men in the carport of an El Monte apartment building. The three were taking turns firing a revolver in the air. Kazmierski said he shot when Castaneda failed to obey his command and pointed the pistol at him. The shooting took on international implications when the Mexican consul general protested. The district attorney's office later found insufficient evidence to file criminal charges against the deputy, but civil lawsuits are pending in state and federal court. April: An investigation began into three deputies accused of stealing credit cards from elderly motorists. Criminal charges were filed Sept. 3 against Deputies Steven Switzer, 31; Edward Perez, 35, and Brent Mosley, 27, who stopped more than 20 motorists on trumped-up charges, took their cards and fraudulently used them to buy more than $100,000 worth of sports equipment, jewelry and stereos. The deputies pleaded guilty Dec. 9 and were sentenced to state prison terms varying from three to five years. June 6: A federal civil rights lawsuit was filed against 59 deputies by 67 residents of Monrovia-County, an unincorporated area west of Duarte. In the lawsuit, residents who live near Pamela Park said Temple deputies conducted eight raids and illegal searches in their neighborhood from June 6 to Sept. 18, 1990. The lawsuit, which is pending, has since been amended to include 59 more deputies. September: Deputy Glen Cozart, 31, a field training officer at Temple, was suspended pending an investigation into accusations he planted evidence on suspects, falsified police reports and lied while testifying in court. After an investigation by the district attorney and sheriff's internal investigators, criminal charges were filed July 7. Cozart is accused of planting cocaine on one suspect in May and November of 1990, of filing a false police report against two suspects in April, 1991, and of falsely testifying against a fourth suspect. A preliminary hearing will be set Sept. 16 in Los Angeles Municipal Court. October: The county settled for $62,500 a federal lawsuit filed by Ronald Imhoff, 19, who was injured after being beaten by deputies who were called to a noisy Temple City party on Aug. 26, 1989. Imhoff refused to leave the party when ordered by a deputy and was beaten by three other deputies wielding batons and flashlights. Although the deputies said Imhoff karate-kicked one of them, criminal charges against Imhoff were dropped when the deputies failed to appear in court. Imhoff's attorney, E. Thomas Barham, got access to 2,000 pages of Sheriff's Department internal complaint files covering 1985 to 1990, but was stopped by a court order from making the files public. Oct. 14: Joseph Ornelas, a 5 foot, 4 inch robbery suspect, died after fighting with two, six-foot deputies. A former El Monte gang member with a history of drug use, Ornelas, 25, was intoxicated on PCP, cocaine and alcohol when, authorities said, he stole a truck at knife-point from two men sitting in a South El Monte convenience store parking lot. Deputies in the lot stopped the robbery, striking Ornelas with their flashlights. One deputy jumped on Ornelas' back as he tried to crawl away. The coroner's office found that Ornelas died of a heart attack caused by the neck injuries and chest compression by the deputies, drug intoxication and an enlarged heart from prolonged drug use. No charges were filed. Oct. 24: Deputy Lloyd Shoemaker, 33, a patrol officer, was charged with rape, oral copulation and lewd conduct after he allegedly sexually assaulted three women motorists he stopped for phony traffic violations in April, October and December of 1990. Trial is set for Wednesday in Los Angeles Superior Court. November:

Deputy Michael Thomas was fired two years after a Temple City raid in which three men were beaten. On Sept. 30, 1989, Thomas and another deputy answered a 3:30 a.m. noise complaint. Thomas encountered a drunken Fred Scott Mace, 27, who told Thomas to "get a real job." Thomas pursued Mace into his apartment and summoned other deputies when Mace resisted. Mace's left testicle was smashed during the melee and later surgically removed. Mace's 61-year-old father, Leigh, suffered two fractured ribs and a broken toe during the struggle. Another man in the apartment, Russel Trice, required back surgery for a herniated disc. The county settled a suit filed by the three men for $925,000. * START OF CORRECTION *****

Deputy accused of raping woman - Sex allegedly exacted to avoid trip to jailDaily Breeze (Torrance, CA) - Wednesday, May 1, 1991*Author: UPI MetroWire

A sheriff's deputy has been removed from duty pending an investigation of an El Monte woman's allegation he raped her in the back seat of his patrol car while on-duty.

Deputy Lloyd L. Shoemaker, a 10-year-veteran, allegedly forced the 22-year-old woman to have sex with him in exchange for his promise not to jail her on outstanding warrants, the Los Angeles Daily Journal reported in its Wednesday edition.

The Journal report was based on a search warrant affidavit written by Sgt. Elaine Minnis of the sheriff's Internal Criminal Investigation Bureau.

The alleged victim told investigators she was driving in a car with a friend early April 16 when Shoemaker pulled her over, checked the computer and found she had three outstanding warrants including one for $5,000, the affidavit said.

The woman asked the deputy not to jail her, and suggested he follow her home to verify her destination, but Shoemaker allegedly said, "If I don't take you to jail, what are you going to do for me?" and reached up and rubbed his hand over her bra-covered breasts," the affidavit said.

He then told the woman to drop off her friend and meet him at a doughnut shop, the newspaper said. Once there, she then followed his car to a secluded area, where she got into the back seat and was forced to have sex, according to the affidavit.

Minnis said the woman "admits she did not resist him because she was afraid of going to jail," but did not participate willingly. Shoemaker allegedly promised to "take care" of the warrants, the affidavit said. The woman returned home, told her friends, and they called a 911 emergency dispatcher. She was interviewed by sheriff's investigators, and sent to a hospital for a rape investigation.

A search warrant signed the same night resulted in the seizure of the patrol car back seat, Shoemaker's uniform, underwear, badge and notebook, the Journal said.

The newspaper quoted the affidavit saying Shoemaker was under investigation for alleged forcible rape and forcible oral copulation.

The Board of Supervisors voted Tuesday to pay $150,000 to settle a lawsuit by a 25-year-old woman who was sexually assaulted by a Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy in April, 1991.

The former deputy, Lloyd Shoemaker, was assigned to the Temple City station when he stopped a motorist for a traffic violation in El Monte, officials said. After discovering that the woman had an outstanding arrest warrant, Shoemaker coerced her into having sex.

Shoemaker was convicted in October of rape, battery, oral copulation and lewd conduct for raping two women and sexually assaulting a third. He is serving a 14-year prison sentence, officials said.

Ex-Deputy Guilty in Rape, Assault Case, Faces Lengthy Term Crimes: Jury convicts him of criminal acts involving three women during incidents in 1990 and 1991. He could spend 33 years in prison.; [Home Edition]

She came forward after reading about the Whittier Narrows rape. A third woman, who was assaulted but not raped, was found by investigators who interviewed more than 30 women with whom Shoemaker had contact while on duty.

Shoemaker's attorney, Leo B. Newton, said his client, who persistently carried his Bible with him into the courtroom throughout the trial, was "extremely disappointed" with the verdict. Newton said the verdict will be appealed.

A former Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy was convicted Thursday of rape, battery, oral copulation and lewd conduct for raping two women and sexually assaulting a third while on duty in 1990 and 1991 when he was assigned to the Temple City substation.

Lloyd Shoemaker, 34, a 10-year veteran who resigned last June while under suspension, faces a maximum of 33 years in prison when he is sentenced by Superior Court Judge Richard Neidorf on Nov. 19. Shoemaker is being held in County Jail without bail.

Caressing a Bible, Shoemaker heard the guilty verdicts to all six counts with a grim expression.

After two days of deliberation following a three-week trial, the jury found that the former deputy had forced two women into having sexual intercourse with him under threat of arrest.

After the verdicts, several jurors said they did not believe Shoemaker when he testified that the women had initiated the sexual contact because he was so desirable.

"His testimony was just unbelievable," said jury foreman Don Hallinger, an Altadena geologist. "He had an excuse for everything. Had he not testified, we would have had more difficulty reaching a verdict."

Hallinger said the men on the jury were even more determined than the women to convict Shoemaker.

"I thought he was lying," said another juror, Phebe Ogami. "His insistence that all these women wanted him, and that one of the cases was a true romantic encounter just was not convincing."

In both rape cases, the victims testified that Shoemaker told them he had a warrant for their arrest, but he would not take them to jail if they had sex with him.

Both submitted without any violence being used.

The case came to the attention of authorities in April, 1991, when friends of one of the women persuaded her to report Shoemaker to authorities shortly after she was taken to the Whittier Narrows Recreation area and raped.

Shoemaker followed the second woman from a Duarte restaurant on Sept. 20, 1990. She said the deputy told her she was swerving, then told her that her car had been identified as one used in two robberies, for which she could go to jail.

She came forward after reading about the Whittier Narrows rape. A third woman, who was assaulted but not raped, was found by investigators who interviewed more than 30 women with whom Shoemaker had contact while on duty.

Prosecutor Gordon Scott said he was pleased by the decision, adding that the conviction showed that law enforcement authorities who use "the color of authority" to attack women will be punished.

Shoemaker's attorney, Leo B. Newton, said his client, who persistently carried his Bible with him into the courtroom throughout the trial, was "extremely disappointed" with the verdict. Newton said the verdict will be appealed.

SEE CORRECTION APPENDED

A year ago, sheriff's deputies assigned to the station in Temple City were in the media spotlight-for thefts, beatings, shootings and other alleged on-duty misconduct in the heart of the San Gabriel Valley.

Three former deputies who worked out of the Temple Station are in state prison for stealing credit cards from motorists. Another was fired after allegedly beating a suspect. Eighteen were named in civil lawsuits that cost the department more than $1 million to settle.

One deputy earned international censure when the Mexican government protested the killing of a Mexican citizen on New Year's Eve. Another faces criminal prosecution for rape, yet another for planting false evidence.

Meanwhile, 118 Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies, most of them working out of Temple Station, are accused in a civil suit of repeatedly and systematically violating the constitutional rights of an entire neighborhood.

E. Thomas Barham, attorney for a man beaten by deputies in 1989, said internal Sheriff's Department documents released in that suit give "a flavor for an organization that had virtually no accountability, where misconduct was forgiven, or never identified."

Then, six months ago, Capt. Robert Mirabella assumed command of Temple station. With a master's thesis that stressed community-oriented policing and a crackerjack reputation from a 14-month, high-profile stint as a lieutenant in Long Beach, Mirabella pledged to create a bond between deputies and the communities they patrol.

"We need to not only develop and deal with the crime issue out here, but we need to win the hearts of the people we're serving," Mirabella said in a recent interview.

He met with community leaders, put more sergeants on patrol to better supervise deputies, began a tracking system to catch problem officers, and proposed joint community and law enforcement anti-crime programs in the five cities under Temple's jurisdiction.

The Kolts report, a 359-page review of the sheriff's operations commissioned last year by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors, was critical of the department overall but noted some exceptions. Of 91 sheriff's captains, the report praised just three—one was Mirabella.

"There is also some healthy experimentation taking place, particularly at Temple City Station under Capt. Bob Mirabella," the report said, citing his community-oriented policing projects and deputy tracking system. "We think that his well-thought-out approach should be emulated throughout the (Los Angeles Sheriff's Department)."

Karol Heppe of Police Watch, a Los Angeles civil rights organization, said complaints about Temple have gone down. In 1990, the group tallied 30 complaints against the Temple Station, 1.1% of its 2,654 complaints against law enforcement agencies that year. Last year, Temple Station logged 27 complaints, .7% of the 3,888 total. Through July of this year, 11 complaints against Temple were received.

Some residents say they too have noticed the changes.

"They treat people like human beings," said Marlene Davis, who lives in an unincorporated area near Duarte. "They don't shove people around like they used to."

Temple City Assistant City Manager Donald Wagner noticed "an effort to try to coordinate with other resources in the community, such as schools and (nonprofit organizations)." Mirabella, he said, is "trying to get deputies known out there in the communities and get it so that people aren't afraid to talk to them."

The captain says the station's past problems came from a handful of deputies.

"You do everything you can for quality control, but our deputies work 24 hours a day, seven days a week, around the clock, out there in contact with the community on a one-on-one basis," he said. "If someone's really intent on violating policy, there is always the potential they can do that."

Limiting that potential and improving the station's image and operations are now his job, Mirabella said.

Under him are 197 deputies who patrol a diverse, 62.3-square-mile area. The territory includes Bradbury, population 833, an affluent residential town nestled in the San Gabriel Mountain foothills (called "up top" by Temple deputies) and the relatively low-crime cities of Duarte and Temple City.

But parts of Rosemead and South El Monte, plus an unincorporated area between Monrovia and Duarte, are "fast." They have the highest crime rates among the five cities patrolled by Temple Station deputies. Burglaries and Asian and Latino gangs boost the crime rate in Rosemead, while two Latino gangs clash in South El Monte.

Although the Temple Station has one of the lowest crime rates among the 19 sheriff's stations, it logs more arrests than most others. For example, in 1991-with 18 murders and a crime rate of 454.5 major crimes per 1,000 people-Temple ranked sixth-lowest in crime among the county's 19 stations, according to sheriff's statistics. Yet the station logged 6,679 arrests in 1991, surpassing 10 other stations.

Lax supervision-which the Kolts report said was departmentwide-was a problem at Temple, some residents and attorneys said.

Capt. Richard N. Walls, who headed Temple from March, 1989, to February, 1992, was easygoing and well-liked by his deputies. But critics say the 28-year Sheriff's Department veteran lacked substantial experience in supervising officers in the field, avoided strict discipline and failed to keep a tight rein-from top supervisors down to deputies in patrol cars.

In the 17 years before commanding the Temple station, Walls spent one year supervising patrol deputies, as an operations lieutenant at the Crescenta Valley Station.

Walls, who declined to be interviewed, was transferred in February to inspection services in downtown Los Angeles. He no longer supervises field deputies but audits stations countywide to ensure that they follow department policy and procedures.

Chief Roy Brown, a regional commander who oversees two specialized bureaus and nine stations, including Temple, said he recommended the transfer. Brown said he was concerned about Walls' health after a quadruple-bypass heart operation in early 1990.

"He was doing a great job, in my opinion," Brown said. "The ability to directly supervise people in the field is not a necessity for being a good captain."

Brown said the station's problems arose because of character flaws in a few deputies. "If you'd taken any of those deputies and put them in another station, the same thing would have happened," he said.

Some Temple deputies disagreed. "What do they do when the team's batting .150?" one deputy joked recently.

"They fire the coach!" another answered.

The station's new "coach," Mirabella, wouldn't have been anyone's pick to become a sheriff's captain. Growing up in South-Central Los Angeles, near Slauson and Vermont avenues, he was the only Italian-American in a Latino gang.

When he was 15, his parents moved to Torrance, and he dropped his street-tough swagger for the confident strut of a high school wrestler and football player.

"The neighborhood defines what kids do," Mirabella says, explaining his commitment to community-oriented policing.

Espoused by Sheriff Sherman Block, Los Angeles Police Chief Willie L. Williams and scores of other law enforcement leaders nationwide, community-oriented policing is the newest of police philosophies. The approach employs officers not solely as crime busters, but also as agents of social change to improve neighborhoods and deter crime.

But Mirabella, 48, a 23-year-veteran of the department, dates his commitment to the idea from the 1970s. The muscular, soft-spoken, long-distance runner eagerly pulls out his master's thesis from the University of La Verne and quotes whole paragraphs. And he points to framed newspaper headlines from Long Beach, where he put the theory into action.

In November, 1990, as a lieutenant, Mirabella took charge of 40 deputies in north Long Beach under a dual-policing plan with Long Beach Police. He distributed questionnaires asking residents and business owners to list crime problems, devised postcards on which residents could rate deputies who answered service calls and enlisted residents to videotape crimes.

During three months in the summer of 1991, crime dropped 13.8% in areas patrolled by the Sheriff's Department, while rising 5.6% in areas patrolled by Long Beach Police.

Mirabella has similar plans for the five cities patrolled by Temple deputies. Already, three cities have approved his proposals for public forums on crime, questionnaires to determine community needs and expansion of crime watch programs.

Deputies focusing on crime prevention will be assigned to city halls. Other deputies will coordinate law enforcement and community action for each city. Citizen advisory teams will meet with station management to provide information about specific criminal activities and locations.
