

Below are 8th generation systems in alphabetical order.

Those with a previous generation, contain a) previous work and formal system work for those in previous

only folders

This 8th generation FGR sheets have not been fully reworked. I need to do the better half a, no bottom of FGR sheets and do research on requested items

b. look in MAR 1972

c. look in IGI 2

d. look for summaries of responses to get more info.

As for 9th generation system sheets, ^{most} are in the previous system folders and ~~most~~ have not been made up. I am in which I will probably do next after getting the 8th generation FGR sheets as completely as possible with generation 10, leaving some previous, etc.

Gilson

GILSON, LOTTIE [née LYDA DEAGON] (1869?–1912) Billed as "The Little Magnet," she was one of the most popular entertainers in the last years of Tony Pastor's ♦ heyday. Today her figure would be considered plump, but it was pleasing to her generation, and, while playgoers generally agreed she was hardly beautiful, she had a winning personality that allowed her to put over both tear-jerkers and songs that were considered risqué. Her most celebrated song was "The Sunshine of Paradise Alley." She is reputed to have been the first blatant song-plugger, for a fee introducing even the dreariest material. She is also credited with being the first vaudeville performer to plant in the audience a stooge who would sing along with her.

Gin Game, The a play in two acts by D. L. Coburn. Produced by the Shubert Organization ♦ at the John Golden Theatre. October 6, 1977. 517 performances. PP.

At a home for the aged, cantankerous, somewhat unstable Weller Martin (Hume Cronyn ♦) invites Fonsia Dorsey (Jessica Tandy ♦) to play gin rummy with him. As the couple play, they reveal their personal histories. But Fonsia's persistent winning provokes Weller's ire, and when he explodes in a profane rage, the games are apparently over.

This play may well come to exemplify the sorry or peculiar state of American play-writing of its day. Soaring costs made two-character plays a commonplace, and this was the first to win a Pulitzer Prize. ♦ Almost by necessity these plays had minimal plots and action, consisting instead simply of dialogue. Yet when this play toured, it was often performed in large auditoriums, and the Cronyns, supposedly

Girl Crazy

GIRADOT, ETIENNE (1856–1939) One of many actors remembered for a single role, the London-born actor captivated Broadway when he made his New York debut as Lord Fancourt Babberley, who helps his college roommate by dressing as an old lady and pretending he is Charley's Aunt ♦ (1893). He later played in several revivals of the farce. Although he continued to appear regularly for the next forty years, often in important supporting roles, he never again equaled his early success. Among his other roles was Valentine, opposite Mrs. Fiske ♦ in Leah Kleschna ♦ (1904). His last assignment was as Matthew Clark, the religious zealot, in the original Twentieth Century ♦ (1932).

GIRAUDOUX, [HIPPOLYTE] JEAN (1882–1944) Thanks to a number of fine productions, Giraudoux has been the most successful of more serious modern French playwrights in the American theatre. Although several of his plays failed, he met varying measures of popularity with four works: Amphitryon 38 (1937), The Madwoman of Chaillou (1948), Ondine (1954); and Tiger at the Gate (1955). His best works were felicitously witty mixtures of fantasy and realism.

Girl and the Judge, The, a play in four acts by Clyde Fitch. ♦ Produced by Charles Frohman ♦ at the Lyceum Theatre. ♦ December 4, 1901. 125 performances.

When Judge Chartris (Orrin Johnson) grants the Stantons a separation he allows their daughter Winifred (Annie Russell ♦) to choose which parent she will live with. She elects to live with her mother, for she knows the real reasons for the separation.

He served as a member of the conference committee in 1946 and 1949 and as vice-chairman in 1947 and 1948 of the Silver Bay Human Relations Conference, Lake George, N.Y., that was sponsored by the YMCA. During the Second World War he was a labor consultant to the Office of Production Management. A life member of the American Management Association, he also belonged to the Society for the Advancement of Management, Society of Automotive Engineers, Industrial Relations Research Association, American Society of Tool Engineers, Engineering Society of Detroit, Delta Tau Delta, the Oakland Hills Country Club of Birmingham, Mich., the University of Michigan, Detroit Athletic, and Recess clubs of Detroit, and the Thursday Men's Luncheon Club of Ann Arbor, Mich. He completed his preliminary education in Boston, and was graduated S.B. in 1912 at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. While in high school he worked as a fan salesman, and while attending college he was employed as a streetcar conductor during summers and in other capacities during winters.
