

Barnard Family

NOTE: This is a transcript of a Bible of a family with a North-eastern North Carolina connection. James H. Barnard's marriage certificate indicates he was born in Camden County, N.C. To date I have been unable to identify the Samuel T. or Martha Calhoun Barnards listed in the Bible.

Our young ladies had no strenuous games in those days; & supper at six. An hour of recreation followed—dancing in the big parlor, doing fancy work, or just conversing. The study hour followed; then Evening Prayers, and then to bed. All this was not as dull as it may sound. We were taken to town occasionally, and could accept invitations to dine out with family friends living in Raliegh.

Mrs. MEARES was Lady Principal; Miss CZARNOMSKA, the daughter of a Polish count, taught mathematics, German, literature and elocution. She was a grand person, regal looking with her black hair, fair skin and noble bearing, but difficult to get acquainted with. Later she went to the faculty of Smith College. Rev. Bennett SMEDES was the Principal. He had been a chaplain in the Confederate Army and taught Bible class. Professor SANBORN taught music, and Mlle. LEGAL taught French; and later, Fraulein BLUME arrived from Germany, eventually marrying Mr. SANBORN.

So soon after the war, many families still felt the economic pinch; so our wardrobes were not elaborate. Our best dresses were made of wool; simplicity was the watchword. Social life was limited largely to special occasions such as the State Fair, invitations to town, and such; and we had our plays and concerts. Friendships began at St. Mary's which have lasted throughout life. Some of my dearest friends were Sally MANNING who married President VENABLE of the University, Fanny HUGER of Charleston, Alice LEAKE, Alice PETTEGREW, Rebecca and Annie COLLINS of Hillsboro, and of course Sophie MARTIN and Minnie VAUGHAN whom I had always known at Elizabeth City. Now that I am over ninety, few of them are left; but they and St. Mary's are still as dear to me as ever.

COLIN & CHARLES: LONG-LOST KIN?
The Virginian Pilot - October 16, 1995
By : Edith M. Lederer
Submitted By : Nancy Long

LONDON - Colin POWELL is related to the British royal family and many other European royal houses as well as to several former U.S. presidents, including George BUSH, Burke's Peerage reported Sunday.

In Washington, POWELL spokesman Bill SMULLEN said he "wouldn't put much stock" in the reports.

The retired four-star general is descended from six generations of Jamaicans. His ancestry includes English, Irish, Scottish, Jewish and Arawak Indian blood, it said.

In "My American Journey," his autobiography released in September, POWELL wrote about an aunt and uncle named COOTE.

According to the research, POWELL is a direct descendant of the COOTE family of Irish military baronets. While lieutenant governor of Jamaica, Gen Sir Eyre COOTE (1762-1823) had a child by one of his slaves.

"This child, born in or around 1807, was General Colin POWELL's great-great-great-grandmother," said Harold Brooks-Baker, publishing director of Burke's Peerage.

Through Sir Eyre, POWELL is related to most of Britain's great ancient families, including the royal family, and to many royal and noble families in France, Italy, Germany and Spain, Brooks-Baker said.

He is also directly descended from England's KING EDWARD I and Caroline STANHOPE. The link with Edward means his lineage can be traced to WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, and through the STANHOPE line he can claim kinship with presidents, GEORGE WASHINGTON, THOMAS JEFFERSON and GEORGE BUSH, Brooks-Baker said.
