WHY THEY ARE CALLED TAR HEELS...

Although North Carolina produced quantities of tar, pitch and turpentine, a livelier story involves NC soldiers in the Civil War. The NC regiment, feeling let down by a regiment of another state, threatened to put tar on the heels of their allies so they would "stick better in the next fight." General Lee, upon hearing of the tenacity of the NC soldiers, is reported to have said, "God bless the Tar Heel boys." The name stuck.
