

History of Stamford Connecticut 1641-1868, Including Darien until 1820 By Rev. E.B. Huntington, A.M., page 35, describes Husted, Robert. "Husted, Robert, was one of the company who received land in October 1642. He had come from Mount Wollaston, now Braintree, Mass. He is probably the father of that Robert Hustis who, according to Bolton's Westchester, went from Fairfield to Westchester in 1654. His will, dated July 8, 1652, makes bequests to his son Angel, of all his lands in Greenwich, with housings; to his son Robert all his lands in Stamford, with cattle and housings; to his wife a maintenance and other bequests; and to his daughter Ann, ten pounds. In 1654, his widow Elizabeth, by will makes bequests to her son Angel of Greenwich; to Robert of Stamford, and to her daughter Ann, the wife of Richard Hardy. In the will of Robert the name is Husted, and in that of the widow he name is written Hustis and both are equally distinct, and that they refer to the same family, is also, as clear as the form of the name. The names of the children are also changed from Husted to Hustis, though in the second will the name is spelled both Hustes and Hustis."

Also from the History of Stamford, Connecticut - Page 46: "John Whitmore came with the first company of settlers from Wethersfield. He was murdered here by the Indians in 1648. The inventory of his estate, 217 pounds, 4 shillings, 2 pence, was presented at a Court of Magistrates in New Haven, 26 May 1656, which had been made 8 Dec 1648 and prized by Robert Husted (or Hustis) and Jeffrey Ferros." - Page 62 - "James Steward, defendant, and Robert Hustice and Jeffrey Ferris, plaintiffs. He, as it was shown, had engaged to keep the town oxen; to keep them from coming home, and out of the Indians' corn; and that he neglected his duty so that the oxen injured the corn to the extent of twelve and half bushels of corn, and two and one half bushels of peas. He is ordered to pay for the corn and the peas and "to beare the charge of the court," a landholder in 1650."

In The American Genealogist, Volume 32, 1956, page 147, there was "ELIZABETH WIFE OF ROBERT HUSTED OF GREENWICH, CONNECTICUT," by George E. McCracken, Ph.D., F.A.S.G. It was written that, "Among the early settlers of Greenwich, Conn, was Robert Husted whose will was made 2 July 1652, probated 4 November 1652. His wife Elizabeth made her will on 16 October 1654, probated 20 November 1654." Then, a second paragraph reads, "Robert Husted may have been the Robert Husted, husbandman, aged 40, who appears on a passenger list from an unknown ship which bears date 20 March 1635 (1634/5 or 1635/6?) printed in Hotten, Original Lists, page 286, and in C.E. Banks, Planters of the Commonwealth (1930), though most of the passengers on the ship were from the west country." A third paragraph has information about the wife of Robert Husted: "Many contributors to the genealogical department of The Hartford Times have from time to time identified the wife of Robert Husted as Elizabeth Miller, born 1607 at Frome, Dorset, daughter of Lawrence Miller and Joan Smith, the latter daughter of Angel Smith. No evidence for this identification has ever, to my knowledge, been advanced. Who first published the claim, I do not know."

In Volume 14 of Documents relative to the colonial history of New York, page 116, is the text of a letter from Robert Husted and other landowners in Greenwich to Governor Peter Stuyvesant. There is a dispute between the landholders in Greenwich and those in Stamford. This letter indicates an attempt to clear up the matter. Control of this section of Connecticut was in dispute, between New York and Boston. The letter is dated September 18, 1649.

The map on page 9 indicates the present day locations of Frome (which is NOT in country Dorset, but in Somerset), Dorchester, where Robert was reportedly from, and Pilsdon. Frome is actually quite a distance from the Dorchester area (looks to be about 40 miles). Does anyone have an explanation?

BOUND FOR NEW ENGLAND

In The Original Lists of Persons of Quality by John Camden Hotten, Genealogical Publishing Co., 1962., Robert Husted, aged 40, Husbandman, is on the manifest as number 104 of 106 passengers. Andrew Halle, aged 28, is on the same list as number 102, a servant to Richard Wade of Simstuly. [probably Simsbury]. There is no name of the ship given. In Banks' Manuscripts in the Rare Book Room of the Library of Congress are the following items: "Robert Husted and Andrew Hallett sailed to New England from Weymouth, Dorsetshire, 20 March 1635/6 with Richard Wade of Simsbury. Hallett was baptized in Simsbury, 18 May 1607, son of Andrew Hallett and Beatrice Knot; married at Simsbury, 18 Dec 1598." And "Robert Hewste lived at Pilsden, less than five miles north of Simsbury, and is listed in Dorset (England) Subsidy rolls of 1628."

James Savage, in his Genealogical Dictionary, states that Robert Husted, or Husted, in 1640, Boston, had a grant for eight heads that year at Mount Wollaston, (now Braintree or Quincy, Ma.), and removed soon after to Stamford. It is recorded in the SECOND REPORT OF THE RECORD OF COMMISSIONERS OF THE CITY OF BOSTON that on "The 27th day of the 11th month, January, 1639 [old style, new style would be 1640]. At a meeting this day of Mr. John Winthrop, Governor, etc..granted...Also Robert Hewstead hath a great Lott granted unto him at the Mount for eight heads." [eight people]

But soon after this we find Robert in Greenwich witnessing the Indian deed to the original proprietors of the town of Greenwich Connecticut, Robert Feaks and Daniel Patrick.

Robert A. Heusted was a witness on 18 July 1640 to a deed describing the purchase by Captain Daniel Patrick and Robert Feaks of lands lying between the Asamuch and Patomuck rivers for the purpose of settling the Town of Greenwich. It is believed that with these men were some Dutch and English settlers, namely: Everardus Bogardus, John Bowers, Jeffre Ferris, Angell Husted, Robert Husted, Andrew Messenger, Robert Williams, and John Winkelman. They immediately located on a portion of the property and proceeded to form a settlement. Thus, Robert Husted finally settled in Fairfield County, Connecticut. The town book of the freeholders of the town of Stamford (Rippowam) contains the names of the first twenty-nine landholders of Stamford. Other names were added until by December 7, 1641 there were forty-two. Immediately following the last record are these: "October 1642, in a general town meeting was given these lots as other men, marsh & woodland, viz.: . . . to Robert Hustice seven acres; . . ."

There is a historical fiction novel The Winthrop Woman, by Anna (or Anya) Seton which gives a detailed account of the settling of Greenwich. Both Robert Husted and his son Angel are mentioned in the text. Although the book is fiction, it does appear to be quite well documented and may certainly be of interest to Husted descendents. If nothing else it puts some flesh on the bones of all of the hardy soles who found reasons to leave the security of the homes for parts unknown.
