Sarah Mann and others her posterity Pltfs. vs John Sutton Deft. In Chancery. This day came the parties by their attorney and the Deft. moved that the suit should be dismissed for that the Pltf. had in open Court disclaimed the same by the record of the proceeding in Dec. Court 1766, but the Court having at the time of the disclaiming continued the suit upon a supposition that the same was not voluntary—and the Pltf. being since ordered into the possession of Anthony Thornton quiet sheriff, the sd. Thornton now declares on oath that the Pltf. was brought to his house by a messenger of the Defts. and this presence declared she did know she was intitled to freedom nor did she desire it but on the next day after the messenger was gone she declared that the reason of her disclaiming the suit was through fear she having been threatened though not by the Deft. that if she prosecuted the suit before the Determination that her children would be removed to the Indians where she would never hear of them again and further upon coming to Court formerly to claim her freedom she was severely whipped by the Deft. on her return home and the said Thornton declared she had never since seemed anxious about the prosecution of the suit and the Complt. appearing now in Court expressed her desire to have the trial proceed whereupon the Court on hearing the argument of council on both sides did order and direct that the suit should be dismissed and thereupon came a jury to wit. Richard Buckner, foreman &c. were impannelled and sworn well and truly to try the issue formerly directed and now joined between the parties, vizt: Whether the complt. is entitled to freedom in consideration whereof it is decreed and ordered that the Complt. go free from the service of the Deft. and that the said verdict together with the Deposition taken and returned in this suit be recorded to perpetuate the testimony for the benefit of the Compls. Issue. On the motion of the Deft. an appeal is granted him giving bond in the Clerks Office according to Law. July 1768. Ibid, p. 198.
