Isaac Morrow – A Civil War Soldier from Henry County, Illinois

By Oriene Morrow Springstroh

Oriene Morrow Springstroh, a DuPage County, Illinois, native, has been researching her family history since the 1960s. In 1981 she founded and served as the first president of the Fox Valley Genealogical Society in Naperville, Illinois, and continues to be actively involved in its programs and projects. A resident of Aurora, Illinois, she may be contacted at orienespri@aol.com.

Pennsylvania Origins

Isaac Morrow was born 18 October 1827 in Derry Township, Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania,¹ to John Morrow and Sarah Hamilton, who were said to be descendants of Scots-Irish pioneers in western Pennsylvania. John Morrow was probably the son of David Morrow and his as-yet unidentified wife.² Isaac's mother, Sarah Hamilton, was the daughter of Alexander Hamilton, who was referred to in family records as "a man of languages" and a resident of "near Ruffsedale"³ in the same county. Hamilton's wife, Elizabeth Steel, was the daughter of James Steel and Elizabeth Donaldson of Mt. Pleasant Township, also in Westmoreland County.⁴

Isaac, who answered to the nickname "Ike," was the second of ten sons born to John and Sarah, along with three daughters.⁵ In the 1850 federal census of Derry Township, in Westmoreland County, Isaac, a twenty-two year old carpenter, was still living in his parents' household.⁶ Later that year, on 20 November 1850, he married Jane McCracken of Indiana County, Pennsylvania, at the town of Livermore in Derry Township.⁷ Within days of his marriage to Jane, Isaac's mother gave birth to her thirteenth child. Four months later, Isaac's father died on 27 March 1851.⁸

Isaac and Jane's first child, Elizabeth, was born in 1852 or 1853⁹ and a second daughter, Priscilla, arrived within the next two years. On 19 March 1855, the couple purchased a town property in Livermore from John Gallagher and his wife, Susanna, for $100.¹⁰ It was in Livermore where Isaac and Jane presumably set up housekeeping.

Removal to Illinois

After the death of John Morrow in 1851, his widow, Sarah, determined to travel west with her household to Cornwall Township in Henry County, Illinois, where her father; two brothers, Alexander and James Hamilton; and a sister, Eleanor Hamilton Porter,¹¹ had emigrated in the early 1840s.¹² A family recollection says that,

Sarah came in the fall of 1853 with [her children] John, Abe, Israel, Alex., Wm, Walter, Eliza [and] Martha from Penn & Samuel, James, Priscilla came out in 1854.¹³

Most of Sarah's living children were still under her roof. It is not known whether she ever had a chance to see her father again after his move to the west, but before his death in Illinois on 18 November 1845.¹⁴ The farm owned by one of her brothers had two houses on it. Sarah and the children still living with her made their home in one of those houses for the next two years.¹⁵

After she arrived in Illinois, trouble settled on Sarah Morrow and her family when her third son, Abraham, died in October 1854.¹⁶ Isaac's sister, Priscilla Jane, by then the wife of Perry Theodore McClain, died 23 August 1855. The next report of Sarah in the records is the news of her unexpected death on 11 October 1855 and her burial in the same cemetery lot as Abraham. The final death within fourteen months struck the family when Isaac's oldest brother, John, died on 13 December 1855. Never married and working as a cobbler during his adult years, John was described on the previously cited 1850 federal census of his parents' household as "idiotick." It is unclear what the nature of his disability was, but family records say that he was "crippled" from birth. John's burial location is unknown, but may well be an unmarked grave in North Cemetery in Geneseo.¹⁷

The years 1854 and 1855 were a time of yellow fever epidemic in northern Illinois, which may have been the cause of all their deaths. However, some family records suggest Priscilla may have died as a result of childbirth, rather than disease.¹⁸

As the oldest surviving sibling in a family that now included five motherless children ages 16, 13, 11, 8, and 6, it is not surprising that on the first of January 1856, about two weeks after his brother John's death, Isaac and Jane sold their property in Livermore,¹⁹ and headed for Illinois with their two young daughters. Although he spoke of himself in later years as a farmer, Isaac worked as a laborer while he and Jane made their home on Center Street in Geneseo. On 1 January 1857, a son, named Wesley Nesbit (often referred to as "Little Ike"), joined the family. The split between the Northern and Southern states began in earnest about the time Isaac and Jane welcomed another daughter, Margaret Odilla, in August 1861.²⁰

Civil War Days

When the Civil War broke out and the call came for volunteers, Isaac and his brothers were eager to join the fray. There were seven of them of an age to serve, or nearly so. They decided among themselves that lots would be drawn to see which of the seven would stay at home to look after the women and children.²¹ Israel drew the short straw and was left behind while the other six eagerly sought out Captain H. J. Humphrey,²² one of the three commissioned officers who were organizing a new company of cavalry. The Morrow brothers all enlisted in Geneseo on 1 September 1861 in Company B, Ninth Cavalry Regiment of Illinois Volunteers.²³

When the Civil War broke out and the call came for volunteers, Isaac and his brothers were eager to join the fray. There were seven of them of an age to serve, or nearly so.

At the Morrow family reunion in Denver in 1922, Margaret Linton Morrow, widow of Israel, recalled that "Walter was the first to enlist. He told me to tell it to the other boys and he skipped upstairs . . . The Morrow boys all prided themselves on their physical strength." She also remembered, "One time Isaac heard some man cry 'Hurrah for Jeff Davis!' He hurried across the street, knocked the man's hat off and cried, 'Hurrah for Abe Lincoln!'"²⁴

The ages of the boys when they enlisted ranged from sixteen to thirty-four and a minor problem may have ensued as they signed up. Walter was sixteen but gave his age as nineteen. Next came eighteen-year-old William who also gave his age as nineteen. Twenty-year-old Samuel stated he was twenty-one, and twenty-two-year-old Alexander declared himself to be twenty-three. There was no such problem for James Steel, who was twenty-nine, and Isaac, who was thirty-four.²⁵

Two and one-half weeks after enlistment, they were mustered in at Camp Douglas, Chicago. The historian of their regiment describes the gathering of the troops in Chicago this way:

The first company to arrive at the rendezvous was Company A from Rock Island, September 15, 1861. Then followed B and C from Geneseo and Cambridge, Ill., D from Chicago, E from Logansport, Ind., F from Chicago, G from Valparaiso, Ind., H from Kewanee, Ill., I from Belvidere, Ill., K from

*Princeton, Ill., L from Chicago, and M from Onarga, Ill., and thus was gathered at Camp Douglas, three miles south of the Court House, and mustered into the volunteer cavalry service for three years or during the war, as fine a body of men as any in the army that helped to save our beloved country from disruption.*²⁶

Isaac was "detailed on daily duty as Cook" for Company B from the beginning of his enlistment through October 31, 1861, and then in December, he was granted a furlough at home from Christmas Eve through New Year's Day.²⁷ On 15 February 1862, the regiment was ordered to move from Camp Douglas. The next day they left for Benton Barracks, St. Louis, Missouri, traveling on the St. Louis and Alton Railroad. Col. Albert G. Brackett was in command.²⁸ In this way began for Isaac Morrow, thirty-four year old father of four, a service career whose consequences plagued him for the remainder of his life.

By 1 March 1862, the regiment moved to Pilot Knob, Missouri, and by 6 May was at Jacksonport, Arkansas. During the spring of 1862 Isaac was afflicted with ague and fever, spending two weeks in the regimental hospital at Helena, Arkansas.²⁹ John Timmerman, later a resident of Guide Rock, Nebraska, was a First Sergeant in Company B during the war years. In March 1890 he described Isaac's ill health during the war in an affidavit Isaac used in his application for a veteran invalid pension in 1889. Timmerman said,

I well remember said Morrow. When he joined the company in Sept. 1861, I think he was a sound healthy man. He was with us performing his duties as a soldier and I cannot now recall that he was sick or in any way disabled until as hereinafter stated. While we were at Helena, Ark. in the summer of 1862 and I think sometime in July . . . Morrow was taken sick with malarial ague and diarrhea. I think the heat of the season, the impure water we had to drink and the malaria of the section in which we were serving was the producing cause of his sickness . . . so he was unfit for duty two or three months. From this time on said Morrow . . . was *frequently unfit for duty on account of it.*³⁰

Further investigation into the history of the 9th Regiment Illinois Cavalry reinforces Timmerman's statement:

After our arrival at Helena, it was soon found to be the case that a large part of the regiment was sick, jaded and worn out. Hospitals were established, while a large number were put on the transports that were arriving, some of which were being transformed into hospital boats and sent North, some to St. Louis and Cairo, and quite a number farther up the river to the hospitals in other cities. Others were now granted furloughs and sick leave, and went direct to their homes. Many, very many, took their departure from this place to their long home, and their bones are now lying upon the hills so beautiful, just above our camping ground.

While in camp here our Regiment suffered terribly from disease; often there were not enough men in camp to care for the sick and properly look after the horses.

*August 10th, when the regiment was called upon for an escort to a forage train sent out by one of the Iowa regiments, there were but seventy soldiers fit for duty. This showed the terrible state of health, which lasted till the winter frosts and cool weather killed some of the poison.*³¹

Disease was generally rampant among all the troops during the Civil War and, despite his troubles, was much kinder to Isaac than to many others. During the war, his regiment lost one officer and forty-five enlisted men in combat, but an additional six officers and two hundred and forty-one enlisted men died of disease.³²

Isaac's brother, Alexander, died of disease 23 August 1862³³ at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, Missouri, and was subsequently buried at the Jefferson Barracks National Cemetery in Section 28, Grave 134.³⁴ His brother, Walter, was just seventeen when he died of disease at Keokuk, Iowa on 28 October 1862.³⁵ He was buried in Plot 400, Keokuk National Cemetery.³⁶ On 25 December 1862, another brother, William, received a medical discharge when it was discovered he suffered from epilepsy. He thereafter received a pension of $2 per month.³⁷ The remaining brothers – Isaac, James Steel, and Samuel – continued with the regiment until they were mustered out on 23 September 1864 at Springfield.³⁸ Both James and Samuel attained the rank of sergeant (although when James was mustered out, he was again a private), but Isaac remained a private throughout his three-year enlistment.

What did Isaac do during his years in the service? Was he in combat?

Mention of combative action in which he might have been involved is sparse to non-existent in his personal official military record. Even the mention of the “Curtis Campaign” or the raid into Mississippi, mentioned in his pension file, are merely incidental to the gathering of other information in support of his pension application.³⁹

Isaac’s Compiled Military Service Record (CMSR) and Civil War Pension File are silent about combat, but they tell us he was company cook until November 1861. Remarks on the Company Muster Rolls indicate that from March through June of 1862, he was on extra duty as a mule driver/teamster for the regiment’s quartermaster, Capt. Samuel H. Price,^{40,41} who subsequently became as ill from the malaria in the Helena, Arkansas setting, where they were stationed, as most of the other soldiers were. Price was gone on leave several times because of ill health and ultimately died in Chicago 8 April 1863.

For the next thirteen months, there are no unusual remarks on the Muster Roll to call attention to Isaac’s continued presence on duty until he was noted “absent on 30 days furlough since Aug. 7, 1863.”⁴² Thereafter he was present in camp until March and April, 1864, when he was absent on detached service. The “Muster Roll of enlisted men on special duty, Provisional Cavalry Encampment” shows that Isaac was stationed for those two months at Fort Pickering, Tennessee, working as carpenter for the “Q.M.D. [Quarter Master Depot?] per S.O. No. 53 Mar 25/64 Hd. Qrs. P.C.C.”⁴³ Other information in the file explains that he was thrown from a mule and injured while he was on that special duty. Present with his company from May 1864 until September, he then returned to Springfield, Illinois to be mustered out due to expiration of his term of enlistment.⁴⁴

It is presumed that Isaac returned home after being mustered out, but surprisingly enough, he re-enlisted about 20 December 1864 as a private in Co. A, 6th Regiment U.S. Veteran Volunteers.⁴⁵ He was enrolled 22 March 1865 at Peoria, Illinois.⁴⁶ In September 1865, he spent several weeks in the hospital at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, being treated for rheumatism of the back.⁴⁷ He was discharged 22 March 1866 at Washington D.C.⁴⁸ and finally returned to Geneseo.

John Claspell was a boarder in the home of Isaac and Jane Morrow in 1866 and testified that Ike, as he was known, was quite ill when he returned from military service.

Claspell stated that Isaac was attended by Dr. William Hinshaw of Geneseo and was apparently unable to work.⁴⁹ The doctor could not do much to treat Ike’s physical ailments, which may have stemmed from post-traumatic stress syndrome, a condition recognized today, but unknown in the mid-nineteenth century. One can only imagine how many suffered, as Ike may have, from the effects of losing family members, comrades, and even a beloved Commander-in-Chief⁵⁰ as a result of the war. His faith in the skill of doctors diminished to no faith at all. When he enlisted, he was described as a strong, vigorous man of light complexion, auburn hair, and blue eyes, who stood 5 feet 11 inches tall.⁵¹ The following two statements from his pension file describe some of what happened to him.

The first is given by eyewitness, John Fones, of Geneseo, who was in the same company:

*While in the raid to Aberdeen
[Mississippi] about February 1864
[Morrow’s] clothes took fire accidentally*

while asleep in bivouac. In taking off his overcoat which was on fire, his eyes were scorched and he was burned about the head and body. [His] coats and blankets were burned up and he rode three or four days while on the raid without coat or blanket. From this exposure in cold weather he took a severe cold which settled in his eyes – which became very much inflamed and swollen so that he was relieved from duty when we reached camp.⁵²

The regimental surgeon, Dr. George B. Christy, provided additional testimony about Isaac's misfortunes in the following letter:⁵³

*Dunlap, Harrison Co., Iowa
May 27th 1891*

In regard to Isaac Morrow, late a private in Company "B," 9th Regt. Ills. Cavalry, would state that: When I joined said 9th Ills. Cav. in March 1863, as surgeon of it, I found said Isaac Morrow suffering with chronic diarrhea, bloody flux and intermittent fever, which I understood from the medical and other officers, he had contracted during the "Curtis Campaign," during the previous summer of 1862. From that time on, till he was mustered out of service Sept. 23rd 1864, I had cognizance of his condition and treated him for his . . . troubles as well as when thrown from a mule while in line of duty at Germantown, Tenn. in Spring of '64, fracturing three, or four of his ribs and otherwise bruising him considerably. During the month of February '64, said Morrow, while in line of duty on a raid through central Miss. was severely burned, while in camp at night, their tent, or quarters, accidentally taking fire. From the burning and exposure afterwards, he contracted a severe cold and suffered greatly for four or five weeks, both from inflammation of bowels and lungs, but eyes also. – Said Morrow never regained anything like perfect health while in the service, though able to perform light duty for about one half to two thirds of the time. He was a man of good habits and a good soldier whenever able to perform military duty and often did it when he should, and might have been excused, if he had but asked it. – according to the best of my recollection, said soldier's constitution was badly broken down; from hard service and exposure to inclement weather, with the diseases prevalent in that climate.

The Divorce

Whether from physical debility or a lack in his character, Isaac continued not to work after his return from service and the support of his family fell on Jane's shoulders. There must have been considerable tension and argument in their home. Then in April of 1869, Isaac abruptly left his wife and children.⁵⁴ Some family stories say he wanted to go to Iowa to try his luck, but Jane did not wish to leave Geneseo.

By the fall of 1869, Isaac was boarding in the house of John Meeks in Hamilton County, Iowa. During that time, according to Meeks' affidavit in the pension file,⁵⁵ Isaac became extremely ill, in fact, at the point of death. He would allow no doctor to treat him, so Meeks and his wife nursed him back to a semblance of health with the help of another neighbor, Charles H. Brockschinck. He suffered a great deal from eye inflammation, a result of his burns. He boarded with Meeks for the next three years.⁵⁶ [It should be noted, however, that Isaac is listed with his wife Jane and their four children in the 1870 federal census of Geneseo, Henry County, Illinois, and not in the household of John Meeks.⁵⁷]

Meanwhile, back in Geneseo, Jane filed for divorce on 7 August 1871⁵⁸ on the grounds of desertion. Notice of her action was published by Francis & Hinman, publishers of the Cambridge Democrat for four successive weeks beginning 9 August 1871 and ending 6 September 1871. Her final decree was granted 24 October 1871 in the

Circuit Court of Henry County at Cambridge. She described to the court the situation in which her husband left her:

I was married to Isaac Morrow the defendant at Livermore, Penna. On the 20th day of November 1850. I have lived with him from that time until sometime in the month of April 1869 as his wife. There were born to us during that time four children, one of whom is now of age her name is Lizzie. Priscilla is now about sixteen, is living with me at home most of the time. The second child Wesley is now fourteen years old and is a sickly, delicate child and not able to do much work. The youngest, Maggie is named Maggie Morrow and is now nine years old. The three last named children I have supported and taken care of myself ever since Isaac went away . . . For thirteen years I have been obliged to take in washing and sewing and to go out to work by the day to get food and clothing for myself and children.⁵⁹

Jane was awarded custody of their three minor children and possession of their house on Center Street in Geneseo. At the time of the divorce, she valued the house at $750, with a remaining mortgage on it of $250. She stated that Isaac "has suffered it to be sold for taxes. It was sold in 1868 and I redeemed it myself."⁶⁰ Jane's statement to the court at the time of her divorce also included allegations that Isaac mistreated her physically. Isaac did not answer the summons to appear nor did he contest her action in any way. Jane later married William Patterson on 14 December 1874.⁶¹ She died 25 November 1905 and is buried in Oakwood Cemetery in Geneseo.⁶²

The Iowa Years

Over the next few years, Isaac was engaged in farming in Hamilton County, Iowa. His farm was about two or three miles from his friend John Meeks' home, according to Meeks' affidavit. He further testified that Isaac was physically unable to do heavy labor and hired his harvesting done. Meeks did his butchering for him. Isaac kept occupied with weighing and the keeping of accounts, along with running a coal bank. On the 1880 federal census of Hamilton County, Iowa, his occupation was given as farmer and miner. His state of birth was erroneously reported as Ohio on this census.⁶³

Another woman came into his life during this time. Lucy Blowers, who was born in New York, according to the 1880 census noted above, was about 38 years old when she and Isaac were married on 11 August 1875 in Hamilton County, Iowa.⁶⁴ The marriage took place at the home of a Mrs. Bacon and was performed by A.V. Bloodgood, minister of the gospel. Lucy is identified on the marriage license as "Miss." It is presumed this was her first marriage.

I was married to Isaac Morrow the defendant at Livermore, Penna. on the 20th day of November 1850. I have lived with him from that time until sometime in the month of April 1869 as his wife.

On 6 July 1867, a son named Bertie Lincoln Morrow was born.⁶⁵ Bertie L. also went by the name Lincoln B. Morrow in later years and was so addressed in the minutes of the 1922 John Morrow family reunion in Denver, Colorado, in 1922. He was appointed chaplain of the association for the coming year and noted as living in Waterloo, Iowa.⁶⁶

A second son, Ora Washington Morrow, was born 17 May 1878.⁶⁷ Ora, who was listed as Orlando on the 1880 census, died 16 April 1896 following a boxing match with his cousin, William Blowers, and was buried in Fairview Cemetery in Waterloo, Iowa.⁶⁸

There seems to have been frequent communication between Isaac and his children in Geneseo. His son, Wesley, and Miss Katie Sloan were married and started their family in Hamilton County, Iowa,⁶⁹ suggesting that Wesley and his father had an amiable relationship.

Isaac's Final Years

About 1887, Isaac decided to try his luck out west. The bond between the Morrow brothers may have prompted this action. In the late 1880s, 1890s, and into the early 1900s, the Morrow brothers, except for William who lived in St. Joseph, Missouri, seem to have traveled and lived on and off on property somewhere along the border between Kansas and Colorado in Elbert County and Kit Carson County. Places frequently mentioned in family records and Isaac's pension file are Carlisle, Colorado; Burlington, Colorado; Kanorado, Kansas; and Wallett, Colorado.

On 14 May 1889, when Isaac applied for, and was later awarded, a government pension of $6 per month as an invalid, his application was mailed from Carlisle, Colorado. The autograph album of his son Wesley's wife, Katie Sloan Morrow, contains numerous family autographs written in _____ was buried in a "GAR" (Grand Army of the Colorado during the late 1880s. Wesley and Katie's fourth child, Alexander, was born there in June 1889. When the regimental history of the 9th Regiment Illinois Cavalry was published in 1888, Isaac's listed place of residence in the book was Kirwan, Kansas.⁷⁰ A search of the Bureau of Land Management and Government Land Office records revealed a homestead entry for 160 acres entered by Isaac in Kit Carson County, Colorado, on 29 June 1891.⁷¹

It is clear Isaac was drawn west by _____ family, when one notes that his brother Samuel was buried in Webster, Kansas, at his death in 1908. His brother James Steel was buried at Crown Hill Cemetery in Denver, Colorado, in 1912, and his brother Israel was buried in Kanorado, Kansas, when he died in 1918. His youngest sister, Martha Morrow, who never married, also lived in Denver and was buried at Crown Hill Cemetery.⁷²

By 1891, Isaac's health and eyesight were both very bad. He had his eyes examined, and was diagnosed with cataracts.⁷³ He was almost totally blind and had to rely on others to help him get around. When examined in Colorado by army doctors to get approval for his pension, he was sixty-two, weighed 154 lbs. and had shrunk several inches in height to 5'8 $\frac{1}{2}$ ". His complaints and discomfort continued to center on his lower intestinal tract, as they had during his service years.⁷⁴

In 1891 he returned to Tremaine, Hamilton County, Iowa, where he died 11 Dec 1891. He _____ was buried in a "GAR" (Grand Army of the Republic) cemetery plot (Lot 16 in Block B) at Graceland Cemetery in Webster City, with other Civil War veterans.

On 14 May 1889, when Isaac applied for, and was later awarded, a government pension of $6 per month as an invalid, his application was mailed from Carlisle, Colorado.

In addition to her two sons, his wife was left with a 75 acre farm, three horses, three colts, and six cows and calves, all mortgaged. The government gave her $12 a month for the remainder of her life as a veteran's widow. In 1910, at age 73, Lucy Morrow was enumerated on the census in the home of her son Lincoln Bert and his family in Waterloo, Iowa.⁷⁵ In the column asking for her profession, Lucy confidently informed them that she had her "own income." Lucy Morrow died in May of 1911.⁷⁶

Wesley Morrow, Isaac's only son from his marriage to Jane, returned to Geneseo, Illinois, where he lived out the remainder of his life.

⁹*CMSR and Pension File of Isaac Morrow*, 45th page of unpaginated file. Elizabeth, also known as Lizzie, states her age as eighteen at the time of her parents' divorce in October 1871. The divorce proceedings are included in the pension file.

¹⁹Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, Land Records, Vol. 38, p. 378. Isaac and Jane Morrow sold the property to Elizabeth Freeland of the same city for $175. Although early maps of Livermore are available, the city was abandoned and then flooded as part of a reservoir project along the Conemaugh River before the end of the 19th century, and for that reason, no longer exists.

²⁰Researchers interested in this family should be advised that the Isaac Morrow family will be found on the 1860 federal census under the surname Morrill and on the 1880 federal census under the surname Morrell. Although the usual records one would expect to find for Isaac give his surname correctly, these two censuses are exceptions. Perhaps the family's pronunciation of their surname prompted the misspellings.
