

*Newberry FamilyConejo Valley HistoryGENEALOGY OF THE CONEJO VALLEYITS ANCESTORS AND ITS DESCENDANTS(Continued from Volume Two, Number Three, Fall)MORE ABOUT EGBERT STARR NEWBURY

In the previous issue, we presented a "locality" profile of Egbert S. Newbury: a brief description of his decision to choose the Conejo Valley as a homesite. This issue will present a more detailed profile of the man who became the namesake for the first town of the Conejo Valley, Newbury Park. Many current residents know this town only as a "suburb" of the City of Thousand Oaks. Not everyone is aware that the original site of Newbury Park is the current site of the city of Thousand Oaks, and did not move to its present location until much later.

Egbert Starr Newbury was born in Allegan, Michigan 8 September 1843 and migrated to California following his service in the Union Army. He served four months with the 44th Iowa Infantry and it is believed that he was discharged for health reasons. He made the trek west to seek a cure from an ailment which left him barely able to speak and with a very persistent cough. He ultimately died of consumption in 1880, at the young age of 36, but after residing in the Conejo Valley for more than a year, he credited the wonderful dry climate of the plateau with a miraculous recovery, as he was so improved he thought himself to be recovered.

Newbury was a tenth generation member of an English family which migrated to New England in the 1600's. He was a descendant of several well known early families including the Sergeants. His third son was given the name of Samuel Sergeant Newbury. Newbury Street in Boston was named for his forebears.

Egbert's only brother was killed in the Civil War in a battle fought near Gettysburg. One sister was the wife of John Judson Bagley, the governor of Michigan and the other was a widow who died even as she made plans to move to the Conejo Valley to make her residence here.

Frances Maria Kellogg of Jackson, Michigan, whom he met in San Francisco, became his bride in a ceremony performed in that city on July 9, 1873. Miss Kellogg was a teacher at Mills College, a prominent girls school still in existence.

Frances and Egbert enjoyed riding horseback and his betrothal gift to her was a horse. They often rode on the beach in Santa Barbara where they made their home. This was a popular pastime among the young people of that city, and their friends included Kate Douglas Wiggins and her sister Nora Smith.

Their modest little home in the Conejo was probably built in 1874 and was one of the first to be built in the area other than an adobe. It was located in the area of what is now Jungleland in a forest of gigantic oak trees by the Barrel Spring.

Egbert Newbury served as a public relations representative for the Conejo and often contributed to the Ventura Newspaper, the Signal (see next page).

Xmas Carol

Pillies and roses fade and die,
 The blue and gold desert the sky,
 The green of earth is turned to brown,
 The crisp leaves sigh, and flutter down.
 Then swift descending, covering all,
 The feathery, driving snow-flakes fall.
 Forming a mantle soft and light,
 To hide the bare and brown from sight.

Wreaths of holly, red and green,
 With bay, and mistletoe are seen;
 And, pealing forth in chime and chorus,
 Their melody floating round, and o'er us,
 Merrily out on the frosty air,
 The caroling bells sound everywhere,
 While the "tidings" ring from vale to hill,
 "Christ is born," "toward man, good will."

He felt the need for a postoffice in the growing valley and petitioned the government for one. In July of 1875 the Newbury Park Postoffice became a reality and a stage coach stopped twice daily. One came from Ventura and parts north, the other came from Los Angeles.

Of his children, Egbert Starr Newbury II was Born in Santa Barbara on May 21, 1874 and George Kellogg Newbury was born on the Conejo Ranch on March 28, 1876. Katherine Frances was born in Michigan on March 13, 1878. 'as was son Samuel Sergeant Newbury, born October 28, 1879.

Soon the Newburys were forced to build a second structure which housed the overnight guests who came mainly to inspect the properties for sale in the Conejo or to enjoy the healthful climate. A cook was hired to serve meals. Soon a large barn was constructed and the three buildings comprised the village of Newbury Park.

Mr. Newbury busied himself managing their 2200 acre ranch in what is now known as "Oldtown Thousand Oaks." Wheat was planted in the virgin soil and Mr. Newbury and his partners were engaged in raising sheep on a large scale. The wool market was booming and there was a great demand.

Southern California experienced a distasteful drought in 1877-1878 which resulted in an extreme shortage of water and feed for the huge herds of sheep. Conejo Valley was no exception and it became necessary to kill thousands of sheep to save just the hides. Large rafts were built and the dead animals were towed to sea for burial.

Much of the property and sheep, as well as the lumber for the buildings, were purchased on credit with a view to making a great deal of money when the sheep were sold. As a result Egbert Newbury, as well as many others, was bankrupt. His creditors foreclosed on all his property and the Newburys were forced to leave. They left their beloved little home with their few possessions in a wagon. Mrs. Kellogg, who had come from Michigan to attend the birth of little Georgie, was with them as they started their unhappy trip back to her home. As the horses labored up the Conejo Grade, Frances turned from the front seat to ask her mother if the baby was asleep. Horrified, Mrs. Kellogg said that she did not have the baby. In their distress at leaving, Baby Georgie had been left asleep in his cradle at home.

The harsh climate of Michigan was too rigorous for the delicate health of Mr. Newbury and he died on February 10, 1880 at the age of 36.

The Conejo Valley Historical Society is in possession of two lovely bone china soup bowls used by the Newburys and recently received the Newbury Family Bible which was presented to Frances by her husband on the day of their marriage. The Family pages of that bible are reproduced herein.

Conejo Items.
 E. S. Newbury is now filling an order for 50 tons of wheat hay from the Conejo to be delivered at Mission. He has his shipment to the north.
 A postoffice has been established at Newbury Park with Mr. Newbury as postmaster. An office is also petitioned for at Pleasant Valley.
 Messrs. Boluz and Walbridge are now busy putting up cottages and large hay and grain barns on the Conejo.
 It is rumored that the first wedding in Newbury Park will take place about Sept. 1. The parties being given by the ladies from the Conejo and Santa Barbara's future daughters. They will settle permanently on the park.

 We commence heading our wheat next week. It is now ripe, has a plump grain and is as good as I ever saw.
 The stage reaches us at 11 A. M. from Los Angeles and at 4 P. M. from Ventura. The daily mail adds much more to the comfort of living on the Conejo.
 Rooms are being put up at the stage office station to accommodate travelers.
 The Signal is read each week with much relish. E. S. N.

READING EARLY DEEDS AND PROPERTY SURVEYS

submitted by ESTHER GREGORY

Did you ever wonder, when reading through records of early deeds, how property lines could be determined from the type of boundary descriptions which were commonly used? . . . . . The following was copied from Adams County Ohio Early Deeds, 1810. . . . . Try it for yourself: Using the map below, try to follow the boundaries as described in the three surveys.

RESEARCH TIPS - 18TH CENTURY IMIGRANT

by Linda C. Hitchings

For those with an 18th century immigrant, who have "lost" him somewhere between the 1880 and 1900 federal census takings, consider the possibility that he may have changed his name.

Recently, I was searching through indexes to New York City court records, in hope of finding a court case involving my husband's great-great-grandfather, Rudolph LASCHANSKY. In the index to the Court of Common Pleas, I found one Edward Albert LASHANSKEY, who was changing his name to Edward Albert LAMBERT! The date of the record was January 11, 1882.

Although this is not my direct ancestor (at least as far as I have been able to determine), some interesting possibilities arise. If this had been my ancestor, and I had found him in the 1880 federal census of New York City, my next step would be to try to locate him in the 1900 census, first going through the 1900 Soundex under the varient spellings of the name Laschansky. Not finding him in the 1900 census, I must come to the conclusion that he either moved from New York state, or had died.

On the basis of my conclusions, I would first check for a death record for Edward Albert Lashanskey in New York City between 1880 and 1900. Not finding a death record, I would then start checking the 1900 Soundex, first for the states surrounding the state of New York, and then moving westward. Not finding him in any state at the time of the 1900 census, nor a death record, I would probably become "desperate", and start checking land and probate indexes. Not finding any record of Edward Albert Lashanskey anywhere, he would become a "lost" ancestor.

Checking indexes for court records would have solved my research problem. I would have found that he had changed his name, and thus looking for my ancestor under his new name, would be able to locate records for him.

RESEARCH TIPS - HAMBURG PASSENGER LIST

submitted by Russell Green

If you have found your emigrant ancestor in the Hamburg Passenger List, don't stop there!

Having found him in the Hamburg Passenger List, note the date and name of the ship your ancestor sailed on, and check the passenger list for the port of entry in the United States. Once onboard ship, passengers were many times required to fill out papers to be turned in upon arrival. These papers sometimes list the final destination in the United States, the name of the person (often a relative) who was sponsering the emigrant, etc. The more recent the passenger list (1900 and upwards), the more information given.
