It is always a pleasure to look back to a notable and virtuous ancestry, and I have felt it a duty to have this little volume printed for the benefit of the descendants of Rev. Edward Taylor and Ruth Wyllys his wife, of Governor John Haynes and Mabel Harlakenden, of Governor Wyllys and his descendants, of Governor William Bradford of the Mayflower, and, through them, especially of the descendants of Rev. John Taylor and Elizabeth Terry his wife. I am led to do this from the fact that I have possession of many of the papers of the late Hon. Henry Wyllys Taylor, LL. D., of Canandaigua, New-York, who died there about six years ago, at the age of ninety-three years. Judge Taylor spent much time during his long life in making genealogical researches, and it has seemed to me proper that the facts herein stated should be made known to the parties interested. A part has been published in the "New-York Evangelist." I have added a written sketch by Miss Emma C. Nason, which was published in a series of articles in the "Advocate and Guardian" in 1880 and 1881. As it would be difficult to correct the error which will be apparent to the reader, in the first part of Miss Nason's article, I have inserted it as it was printed, with the subsequent correction.

JOHN TAYLOR TERRY.

New-York, April, 1892.

REV. EDWARD TAYLOR.

REV. EDWARD TAYLOR was born at Sketchley, near Coventry, Leicestershire, England, in 1642. His parents educated him for the ministry among the Dissenters, but their sufferings became very severe after 1662. The ejection of two thousand dissenting clergymen and the persecution which followed induced him to a voluntary exile. He remained some years after the passing of the Act of Uniformity, and sailed from England in 1668. He had declined to take the oath required of all Dissenters after the restoration of Charles II. At this distance of time it is difficult to obtain information respecting his family connections in England, although, as he spent four years at Cambridge University, it may be supposed that they were of a superior class. An acrostic letter which he wrote contained the names of two brothers and one sister, James, Samuel, and Alice.

From the date of his sailing from England till he reached this country, and for some time thereafter, he kept a diary with daily insertions, from which I make some extracts.

"A. D. 1668 April 26, being Lord's day, I came for sea taking boat at Execution Dock, Wapping, and a smooth tide, a gentle gale of wind and a prosperous fare to Gravesend," etc. The journal continues until, as recorded: "Lord's day May 3. I had a sad forenoon but toward evening the Shipmaster sent for me to go to prayer with them." And again, "Lord's day May 24. The wind in the morning was very low, yet a right northeast wind, etc., afterwards it was higher. I then being put to exercise spake from John 3rd Ch., 3rd v." "Lord's day June 14th. I exercised from Isaiah 3rd 11th." "Lord's day June 21st. I applied the doctrine I delivered the previous Lord's day." "Saturday, July 4th. . . . After the day clearing up we saw land on both hands, Plymouth on the left and Salem on the right. About five o'clock we saw the Islands in our passage up to Boston." "Lord's day July 5th. About three o'clock we came ashore."

He brought letters to Increase Mather, with whom he lodged two nights; also to "Mr. Mayo, minister of God's word to his people who meet in the new meeting house," and to John Hull the Mint Master, who invited him to his house till he was settled in college, and also invited him to bring his chest to his warehouse. "This gentleman would not be said Nay, therefore I was with him and received much kindness from him. I continued with him, until I settled at Cambridge."

"July 14th I went to Cambridge to speak with the President [Chauncey]." "July 23rd. Being settled in College pupil under Mr. Thomas Graves, Senior Fellow, I continued there three years and a quarter," etc. Again, "Mr. Graves not having his name for naught, lost the love of the Undergraduates by his too great austerity, whereupon they used to strike a nail above the hall door catch while we were reciting to him in the Hall at which disorder I was troubled, etc. When he went to read to us 'Natural Physic' he would read to us out of Maguirus which was reputed none of the best, and which had not been read by the other classes in the College and so we did refuse to read it, and I also (although since I read it am sorry I opposed it) insomuch that he seeing he could not prevail with me to read it through . . . gave me the unworthiest language that ever I received of any man to my knowledge."

The tutors were changed, and "Mr. Brown now being Tutor carried so respectfully to us that he had our very hearts, and we scarce did anything without his advice. So long as I remained in College, the Lord gave me the affections of all both in College and in the Town whose love was worth having. Some who spoke me fair, but grudged me my charitable and well grounded esteem of good will being an object of their envy, when on this account I proposed to lay down my place at Commencement, the President by his incessant request and desires prevailed upon me to tarry in it as yet." . . .

"November 17th, 1671. Being quarter day a messenger sent from Westfield to the Bay for to get a minister for that people, being by eight or nine elders met at the lecture at Boston the day before directed to myself came to me with a letter from Mr. Increase Mather, Pastor of the Second Church at Boston, whom for an answer I referred to the Rev. President and Fellows, reserving liberty to advise with friends and finding Mr. Danforth for it, Mr. Oakes indifferent rather advising to it, the President altogether against it at this time and the Fellows advising rather to it than anything else giving as a reason why their advice was not positive because they were to respect the College good, hereupon I was both encouraged and discouraged, but Mr. Danforth the Magistrate driving on hard advised to take other advice, wherefore delaying to give an answer to the 21st day, I did on the 18th advise with Mr. Increase Mather and Mr. Thacher whose advice was positive for it."

He accepted the call, and they started on the 27th November, "not without much apprehension of a tedious and hazardous journey, the snow being about mid-leg deep, the way unbeaten or the track filled up again over rocks and mountains, the journey being about 100 miles, and Mr. Cooke of Cambridge told us it was the desperate journey that ever Connecticut men undertook."

"On the night before I went to take my leave of our honored President whose mind was changed, and his love was so much expressed that I could scarce leave him, and he told me in plain words that he knew not how to part with me, but as my proceedings were by prayer and Counsel, so my journey was carried on by mercy and good success.

"The first night we lodged at Malbury, from thence we went out the day following about half an hour before sunrising for Quabaug [Brookfield], but about eleven o'clock we lost our way in the snow and woods, which hindered us some three or four miles, but finding it again by marked trees, on we went but our talk was of lying in the woods all night, for we were then about thirty miles off from our lodging, having neither house nor wigwam on the way, but about eight o'clock at night we came in through mercy in health to our lodgings from which the next day we set out for Springfield, which we arrived at also in health, and on the next day we ventured to lead our horses in great danger over Connecticut river, though altogether against my will, upon the ice which was about two days in freezing, but mercy along with us though the ice cracked every step, yet we came over safely and well to the wonder of all who knew it.

"This being the 1st December we came to Westfield the place of our desire in health where we first called at Capt. Cook's who entertained us with great joy and gladness, giving us many thanks for coming and at such a season. . . ." "The men of the Town came to welcome me," etc. "On Lord's day after I preached to them my first sermon from Matthew 3d Ch. 2d v. being Dec. 3, 1671."

Lockwood says that "Mr. Taylor did not determine for some time to stay, but there being a prospect of organizing a Church, he began to incline to settle." The population was small and the inducements for an educated man to make the place his home for life were few; but "he soon became connected with an event where the interests of this section of the Colony became involved which required his energy, his talent, and his foresight, to conduct to a successful issue." He went to Westfield four years before the breaking out of King Philip's war, during which the inhabitants were kept in a state of excitement and fear. Through the day they labored within reach of their loaded guns or of sentries to give an alarm and in the night were regularly gathered into the fort, while guards mounted the turrets of the watch-house, etc. The buildings of four families were burned, and several persons were killed or carried away.

No aid was to be expected from the Government, which advised the inhabitants to quit their homes and unite with other towns for more efficient protection. Mr. Taylor and others in behalf of the inhabitants wrote to the State authorities for aid, but were refused with the consoling remark, "Its good doing what we can and leave the rest to God." "To Mr. Taylor's presence and influence it was very much owing that the settlement did not break up."

Preparations for the organization of a church were not made until the spring of 1679. Five churches were invited to convene for the purpose on the 27th August. Four of the five churches were represented, and the then ministers were Peletiah Glover of Springfield, John Russell of Hadley, and Solomon Stoddard of Northampton.

The war was ended, and a minister was settled. New colonists increased the population, etc. The church accommodations became too contracted for the worshipers. It was voted to build a gallery on one side of the meeting house, "to make it comely and comfortable as speedily as may be." Two hundred acres of land were sold to purchase a bell, that the people might no longer be summoned to meeting by beat of drum.

Mr. Taylor discharged the duties of a physician, ministering alike to the bodily and spiritual wants of the population scattered over an extensive territory.

I will here insert his love-letter written "to Miss Elizabeth Fitch," at her father's house in Norwich, dated "8th of 7th month, 1674." The letter was in two parts. The body of the first part was a square inclosing a triangle, and in the center of all heart. A ring was also drawn upon the paper with the words, "Love's ring I send which has no end."

Rising from the center of the square at the top was a dove of exquisite workmanship holding an olive-branch in its mouth, and these lines were written upon the body of the dove so small as to be scarcely legible.

This Dove and Olive branch to you
Is both a Post and emblem too.

There was much more written that was illegible.

WESTFIELD, 8th of 7th month, 1674.

MY DOVE:

I send you not my heart, for that, I hope, is sent to heaven long since, and unless it hath awfully deceived me, it hath not taken up its lodgings in any one's bosom on this side of the royal city of the great King, but yet the most of it that is allowed to be bestowed upon creature, doth solely and singly fall to your share. So much my post pigeon presents you with here in these lines. Look not, I beseech you, upon it as one of love's hyperboles, if I borrow the beams of some sparkling metaphor to illustrate my respect unto thyself by, for you having made my breast the cabinet of your affections as I your's mine, I know not how to offer a fitter comparison to set out my love by, than to compare it to a golden ball of fire, rolling up and down my breast, from which there flies now and then a spark like a glorious beam from the body of the flaming sun, but I, alas, striving to catch these sparks into a love-letter unto thyself, and to guide it as with a sunbeam, find that by what time they have fallen through my pen upon my paper, they have lost their shine and look only like a little smoke thereon instead of gilding it, wherefore finding myself so much discouraged, I am ready to begrudge my instrument for, though my love within my breast is so large that my heart is not sufficient to contain it, yet I can make it no more room to ride in than to squeeze it up betwixt my black ink and white paper, but know that it's the coarsest part that's conversant there, for the purest part's too fine to clothe in any Lingua hominifera to be expressed by words, and this letter being the coarsest part to you, yet the purest is improved for you. But now my dear love, lest my letter should be judged the lavish language of a lover's pen, I shall endeavor to show that conjugal love ought to exceed all other love:

1st. It appears from that which it represents, viz: the respect which is between Christ and his Church (Ephesians v. 25) although it differs from that in kind (for that is spiritual and this human), and in a degree that is boundless and transcendent.

2nd. Because conjugal love is the ground of conjugal union.

3rd. From the Christian duties which are incumbent on persons of this state, as not only a serving God together, a praying together, a joining together in the ruling and instructing of their families (which cannot be carried on as it should be without a great degree of true love), a mutual giving each other to each other, and a mutual encouraging each other in all states and grievances. And how can this be when there is not love surmounting all other love? It is with them therefore for the most part, as with the strings of an instrument not tuned together, which when struck upon make but a harsh, jarring sound; but when the golden wires of an instrument, equally drawn up and rightly struck upon, tuned together, make sweet music whose harmony doth enravish the ear, so when the golden strings of true affection are strained up into a right conjugal love, thus doth this state harmonise to the comfort of each other and the glory of God when sanctified. But though conjugal love must exceed all other love, it must be kept within bounds too, for it must be subordinate to God's glory, the which that mine may be so, it having got you in my heart, doth offer my heart with you in it, as a more rich sacrifice unto God through Christ, and so it subscribeth me,

Your true love till death,

EDWARD TAYLOR.

It is sometimes said that the old New England Puritans had no poetry in them, but I think that this letter, with its drawings of a heart, ring, and dove, rather tends to disprove such an assertion.

Rev. Edward Taylor and Elizabeth Fitch were married the same year, 1674. She died in 1689, leaving eight children.

Mr. Taylor married, in 1692, Ruth Wyllys of Hartford, Connecticut. She was the daughter of Samuel Wyllys, who was born in 1632, a State Senator for over thirty years, and she was granddaughter of John Haynes, Governor of Massachusetts in 1635, who removed to Hartford, Connecticut, in 1637, was elected first Governor of Connecticut in 1639, and was elected Governor every alternate year until about 1654.

Governor Haynes married, in 1636, Mabel Harlakenden, who it is said came from England for that purpose, both having been born in or near Fenny Compton, England. Of her we read that "she was descended through many lines of Kings and noblemen from William the Conqueror, the first three Henrys, the first three Edwards, John of Gaunt," etc.

Governor Wyllys owned the property in Hartford upon which stood the Charter Oak, and I remember that fifty years ago it still was called "the Wyllys place."

Ruth Wyllys had one son and five daughters.

Hon. Eldad Taylor was the fourteenth and youngest child of Edward Taylor and sixth of Ruth Wyllys. He died in Boston in 1777, while a member of the Provincial Congress and of the Governor's Council, in the sixty-ninth year of his age. The five daughters above mentioned all married clergymen, as follows: Rev. Benjamin Colton of West Hartford; Rev. Ebenezer De-^{Naomi} votion of Suffield; Rev. Benjamin Lord of Norwich; Rev. William Gager of Lebanon; Rev. Isaac Stiles of North Haven, father of President Stiles of Yale College.

Rev. John Taylor was the fourteenth child of Hon. Eldad Taylor and Thankful Day of West Springfield. He was settled at Deerfield for about nineteen years as pastor, and dropped suddenly while preaching in his pulpit. He recovered, but lost his voice for many years, finally regaining it sufficiently to preach occasionally, but never again as pastor. It is recorded of him that he was a man of great ability as a preacher of the Gospel, and I have many of his manuscript sermons which tend to prove this. I heard him preach one sermon in Hartford about 1828, from the text, "Unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings"; and although then but a child, I have never forgotten it. He was married at Enfield, Connecticut, to Elizabeth Terry.

The reader of this will have observed that Rev. John Taylor was grandson of Rev. Edward Taylor and sixth in direct descent from Governor John Haynes and Mabel Harlakenden. His wife, Elizabeth Terry, was also sixth in direct descent from Governor William Bradford of the Mayflower, as follows, viz. :

Her father was Colonel Nathaniel Terry of Enfield and Abiah Dwight. He was the son of Major Ephraim Terry and Ann Collins. She was daughter of Rev. Nathaniel

THE children of Rev. John Taylor and Elizabeth Terry, whose marriage is mentioned on page 23, were as follows, viz. : Elizabeth, born 1789; married the Rev. James Taylor, of Sunderland, Mass. Jabez Terry, born 1790; married Esther Allen, of Enfield, Conn. John, born 1792, of Bruce, Mich.; married Phebe Leach. Harriet, born 1794; married Roderick Terry, of Hartford, Conn. Henry Wyllys, born 1796, of Canandaigua, N. Y.; married Martha C. Masters. Mary, born 1798; married Josiah Wright, of Syracuse, N. Y. Nathaniel Terry, born 1800; married Laura Winchell. And four children who died in early infancy.

In the last clause upon page 22 it is printed, "Her father was Colonel Nathaniel Terry and Abiah Dwight." It should read, "She was the daughter of Colonel Nathaniel Terry and Abiah Dwight."

Collins (pastor at Enfield) and Alice Adams. Alice Adams was daughter of Rev. Adams and Alice Bradford. Alice B. was daughter of Hon. William Bradford and Alice Richard, and William B. was son of Governor William Bradford of the Mayflower. So that in the marriage of Rev. John Taylor and Elizabeth Terry we have the Pilgrim and the Puritan descendants allied.

The news of the battle of Lexington reached Enfield, Connecticut, on Sunday, and on Monday following the Nathaniel Terry named above left Enfield for Boston as captain in command of fifty-nine men. He continued engaged during the War of the Revolution as captain, major, quartermaster, and colonel. He was a man of wealth, and sacrificed almost all his property in the patriot cause.

The descendants of the Rev. John Taylor are related by blood to the following presidents of Yale College: President Stiles, President Day, and President Woolsey. The wife of President Clapp was also a granddaughter of Rev. Edward Taylor. Elizabeth Terry, his wife, was also distantly related to both the Presidents Dwight. I may also state that Samuel Terry, one of her ancestors, was patentee of the town of Enfield.

To return to the Rev. Edward Taylor, a communication from Westfield in the "Boston News-Letter" says he died 14th June, 1729, in the eighty-seventh year of his age, "and what a rich blessing God sent us in him, almost 58 years experience has taught us. . . . He was eminently holy in his life and very painful [?] and laborious in his work, till the infirmities of great old age disabled him. He continued to have the sole oversight of his flock till Oct. 26th, 1726, when the Rev. Mr. Bull was ordained among us, in which solemn action he bore his part."

Judge Sewall writes, 18th April, 1728: "The Rev. Mr. Taylor of Westfield sits in his great chair, and cannot walk to his bed without support. He is longing and waiting for his dismissal."

A tombstone still stands in the old burying-ground at Westfield with this inscription: "Here rests the body of ye Rev. Mr. Edward Taylor ye aged, venerable, learned and pious pastor of ye Church of Christ in this town, who after he had served God and his generation faithfully for many years fell asleep June 24th 1729 in ye 87th year of his age."

His grandson, President Stiles of Yale College, says that "Mr. Taylor was very curious in Botany, and different branches of Natural History, an incessant student, but used no spectacle glasses to his death. He was a vigorous advocate for Oliver Cromwell, civil and religious liberty. A Congregationalist in opposition to Presbyterian Church discipline. He was a physician for the town all his life. He concerned himself little about domestic and secular affairs. He greatly detested King James, Sir Edmond Andross and Randolph, and gloried in King William and the Revolution of 1688. He was exemplary in piety and for a very sacred observance of the Lord's Day."

Nearly all his professional books, which he had transcribed as he had opportunity, were in manuscript. His manuscripts were all handsomely bound by himself in parchment, of which tradition says he left at his death more than a hundred volumes in prose and poetry. Fourteen of these were in quarto. Before his death he prohibited their publication.

His library descended to his grandson, President Stiles, and many of the manuscripts were given by President Stiles and his father, Rev. Isaac Stiles, to the library of Yale College.

RUTH TAYLOR AND HER FIVE DAUGHTERS.

BY EMMA C. NASON.

It was long, long ago, in the rustic old days
When the spinning-wheel's hum was the music of home,
Accompanied maybe by caroling lays,
But oftener still by the clattering loom.

THERE were fourteen children in all in the family, and thirteen of them were girls. We have not the names nor the history of all this constellation of sisters, but, judging from what we know, we expect, when all the beautiful daughters of Zion are gathered, that there will be found those faithful sisters who in obscure places have contributed to the light of the perfect day.

The children of the Taylor family were all cradled in the arms of faith, and all knelt by the side of a Christian mother. The father was Rev. Edward Taylor, a New England minister, living in Westfield, Mass. But the girls did not all belong to the same mother.

Ruth Taylor was a stepmother. Eight of the little ones were not her own, although her tender faithfulness was added to the precious legacy of love that the departed mother had left them. Elizabeth, the first wife, was the daughter of Rev. James Fitch, of Norwich, Conn., and the granddaughter of Rev. Henry Whitfield, of Guilford. The first chapter of the family history is briefly told.

Edward Taylor, a Harvard graduate of 1671, just as he had received college honors, was called by an urgent message to a new settlement on the extreme outpost of civilization. He unhesitatingly accepted the call, and in the early winter crossed the Massachusetts forest, guided "a great part of the way by marked trees." The settlement was exposed to great danger. Every night the few inhabitants were gathered into the fort for safety, and through the day they labored constantly within reach of their firearms. After three years the young minister won a brave-hearted bride, to share the dangers and the poverty of his frontier cabin life.

A heroic heart, a wealth of love and faith, both human and divine, had Elizabeth. Fifteen years she stood by his side, braving the dangers and enduring hardships. The perils which hung over them were at times truly appalling. "The hardships were equalled only by the heroism they inspired." Amid the terrors of King Philip's war their first babes were cradled. But the protecting wings of Providence shielded their home. The fifteen years passed. Eight young souls had awakened in the cabin parsonage. The dangers of the first Indian war had passed, but while the settlers hoped for long years of peace, again was heard the war-whoop of the savage. But in this home death, by unseen hand of disease, preceded the more dreaded foe. The mother was taken. Imagination must picture the desolation of that hearthstone. Added to its poverty, added to all its exposures, was now the cry of bleeding hearts for the mother and the companion gone forever.

It became the mission of Ruth Wyllys, of Hartford, to fill the vacant place. It was a great responsibility—a far greater one than Elizabeth Fitch had taken. The dangers were hardly less, grim want had kept step with the increase of the family, while the household cares were multiplied. The minister had already reached middle life, and as his own burdens were heavy, very much must fall upon his young companion. To his work as pastor had been added the duties of a physician, and in his double vocation he was the servant of a population extended over a large territory. Thus it will be readily seen that no easy life allured the young bride on her slow wedding tour up the Connecticut. How different from the modern wedding tour was that, and at the end of the journey a cabin full of little girls, and the daily problem to be solved, "What shall we eat and drink, and where-withal shall we be clothed?"

Ruth Taylor entered upon her work in 1692, the year made memorable by the outbreak of the witchcraft excitement. But the weird rumors of the Salem witchcraft, with its lamentable results, were to these frontier people of less significance than the startling stories that reached them ever and anon that the cruel savages were on the war-path. The most vivid imagination can hardly picture those times. Truth is stranger than fiction. Ruth Taylor needed not to read the latter, her own life was story enough. To the household of daughters there were added one by one her own five girls.

First came baby Ruth, the mother's precious namesake, the child who walked in the mother's footsteps, the daughter who on her bridal journey retraced her mother's own path down the Connecticut, and at West Hartford spent the wealth of her beautiful years, leaving in the parish of her husband her great influence; extending it into Massachusetts again in the life of her son, and reaching it on and on in pious posterity down to our own time.

The next born was little Naomi. Was it for Ruth's mother that she was named?

this dear daughter whose works in womanhood were to praise her in the gates of Suffield; whose influence in another generation was, through her son, to extend over the walls of Windham; broaden still wider, a generation later, from the Saybrook platform, and, running on through another channel, reach Coventry; and again, westward bound, be recognized in Ohio in the halls of justice, and later still in the office of chief magistrate of the State.

Who can set the bounds of influence? Who can measure the length and breadth and height thereof? Ruth Taylor could not know the future of her girls. The best she could do was to nurture them for the Lord and trust him.

Anne, her third daughter, and eleventh of the family, was born in the year 1697. Could another girl be welcome when the narrow cabin was already full and running over? Every babe brought so much added care that doubtless the poor, toil-worn mother at times almost fainted.

Had the precious infant, Anne Taylor, been sacrificed to domestic convenience, fifty-two years of a useful life had not been. We shall yet see how that half-century was wrought in golden woof in God's glorious plan, while the web of life went on in her five children, and on still, in children's children, to present generations.

Next to Anne came Mehitable, or Hetta, who was to be another luminary in the constellation of sisters.

The last, and the thirteenth, baby girl of the Taylor family was Keziah. The mission of the bright Kezzy was soon finished, yet she lived long enough to become the center of a new home and to receive the crown of motherhood, leaving in her nursery a jewel for the Master that would one day be acknowledged a light of the first magnitude.

After the troop of girls there came one baby boy to occupy the cabin cradle — one son among thirteen daughters! What a large amount of petting must have been bestowed on the little fellow, the pride of his gray-haired father, the delight of his loving mother, the pet of a whole houseful of sisters, and the infant hero of the parish! The wonder is that the boy Eldad was not spoiled, and the fact that he was not of itself speaks well for the thorough discipline of the Taylor household. This son alone, of all his father's family, could transmit the family name to after generations; and Eldad Taylor was not recreant to that good name, but grew up among his dozen sisters, sharing lavishly their affection, and filled with the noble spirit of those pure hearts, ready at last to go forth and spread the influence of the family with the name he bore.

We regret that we cannot trace the influence of Ruth Taylor in the lives of the large group of stepdaughters that she helped to fit for their work; but, looking at the family picture in the far distance, we can see only those that history has placed in the foreground, and must content ourselves with the thought that when the light of the perfect day shall fall upon the whole canvas these workers will appear in distinct view. But history gives us just a glimpse of the addition of one of the interesting group surrounding Ruth Taylor. The eldest stepdaughter married early, and died leaving an infant daughter. This motherless little one was immediately received into the Westfield home and adopted as their very own. Think of it! ye mothers at ease, who shun the responsibility of your own family; think of Ruth with all her baby girls, who crowded so fast into the narrow parsonage, yet giving room, freely, to the child of her stepdaughter, and giving to it the love it craved in her motherly heart. In that hour a fresh benediction rested upon her home. This new immortal would complete the mother's final crown of rejoicing. The child grew up with the five little aunts, sharing every way with them while there awaited her a sphere of future usefulness every way similar to their own.

Thus Ruth Taylor's daughters were counted at last six instead of five. And when they had grown to beautiful womanhood, through a remarkable providence, six young ministers, all from Connecticut, were attracted, one by one, to the Westfield parsonage, and from that loving circle each young servant of the Master won for himself a companion.

Ruth, the eldest, married Rev. Benjamin Colton, of West Hartford.

Naomi followed as the bride of Rev. Ebenezer Devotion, of Suffield.

Anne went forth to a happy home with Rev. Benjamin Lord, D. D., of Norwich.

Hetta became the loving helpmeet of Rev. William Gager, of Lebanon.

Kezzy, in her short mission of love, blessed the home of Rev. Isaac Stiles, of North Haven.

Last, the adopted daughter went forth to the work of the Master with Rev. Peter Reynolds, the young minister of Enfield.

In the six different parishes they labored simultaneously, and the work of Ruth Taylor's daughters became known in the gates, from the center field to the borders of old Connecticut. Would we number the sheaves of the faithful mother Ruth? We must first learn the history of West Hartford, and know how much Ruth Colton contributed to the plentiful harvest there; we must follow the results, also, in the field of their son, Rev. George Colton, of Bolton, Mass., whose devout life reached down to 1812; and then we must pursue our investigation on through all the branches of Ruth Colton's family.

Next we must turn to the sister Naomi and in her husband's vineyard at Suffield read the story of their united toil, finding the continuation of that story in the faithfulness of their son, Rev. Ebenezer Devotion, Jr., of Windham, Conn., and again continued in his son, Rev. John Devotion, of Saybrook, and on down through his family. Then the work takes us to Coventry, Conn., where we find John Devotion's sister united in labor with Rev. Joseph Huntington; and another sequel is found in their ten children, one of whom, Hon. Samuel Huntington, removes to Ohio and becomes Chief Justice of the State, and afterward its Governor. His family would take us still onward; but we return to his sister, Frances Huntington, who married Rev. Edward D. Griffin, D. D., so eminently known in his pastoral labors in Newark, N. J., and Park Street, Boston, and who was fifteen years President of Williams College, also one of the founders of the American Bible Society, and connected with almost every benevolent enterprise of his day ; in all of which relations his devoted and accomplished wife was found closely associated with him, their daughters also occupying stations of usefulness. One of these, well known as the wife of Dr. L. N. Smith, of Newark, fell a martyr to her own work of love, "a lady of the finest intellectual and moral qualities, distinguished alike in authorship and philanthropy." And through all these channels and many more may be traced indirectly the influence of Naomi Devotion.

Next we turn to Anne Lord, of Norwich. But what amount of study will ever be able to compute the outgrowth of the work of Rev. Dr. Lord and his devout companion, during those revival years of the eighteenth century when the Norwich church, that could hardly be reckoned by the score, became multiplied to hundreds? A mountain in the history of Norwich stands the work of Dr. Benjamin Lord, and from the base to the summit of that mountain may be traced the footprints of his wife, Anne. And when she had finished her half-century course, and received her reward, there are still to be numbered the sheaves of her five children in the field, and of their descendants.

Then we must hasten over to Lebanon to acquaint ourselves with the work of Mehitabel, that "gift of the Lord" to Rev. Wm. Gager. But we here become lost in our hasty reckoning. As well might we try to number the deep, wide-spread roots of the tall cedars of ancient Lebanon, as to reckon the influences of their Christian home in Central Connecticut. Verily the old prophecy hastens to fulfilment, "An handful of corn in the earth, upon the top of the mountains, and the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon." We find the fruit of the Taylor family already amounting to a sum that can only be reckoned by the mathematics of heaven, and yet we cannot pause in our outlook on the harvests.

Kezzy Stiles presents her quickly gathered sheaves. A happy bride in the beautiful June of 1725, and only a year and a half later, in bleak December, a dying young mother, who in the parsonage at North Haven gives her life for the frailest of infant sons. That babe, whose slender existence hardly whispered the faintest breath of hope to bleeding hearts, was all that remained of the beautiful Kezzy's life that had promised so much. All! But God sees all, not as mortals see it. Just fifty years passed, and the only child of that mother was known as Rev. Ezra Stiles, D. D.,

President of Yale College. Of him, Chancellor Kent has said, "Take him all in all this extraordinary man was undoubtedly one of the purest and best-gifted men of his age."

President Stiles was the father of eight children, but we cannot follow these descendants. Neither have we space to note the greatness of the work at Enfield, where during forty-four years Rev. Peter Reynolds and his beloved companion won jewels for the kingdom. The final day shall declare it, how this last daughter of the Taylors, the child of the first, was the finishing glory of the brilliant crown of Ruth Taylor. But her daughters were not her only jewels. Her one son grew up to honor her, and while his sisters served the church, he served as faithfully the state. He fell at his post, an honored Senator of Massachusetts, during the War of Independence. And in places of trust in our nation are still to be found the descendants of Hon. Eldad Taylor. In the fields of church and state who shall reckon the sheaves of Ruth?

MORE ABOUT RUTH TAYLOR, HER ANCESTORS AND DESCENDANTS.

NOTE.—In our late sketch of this mother, we made some misstatements, to which we had been led by errors that had slipped into history. Through the kindness of Hon. Henry W. Taylor, of Canandaigua, New-York, we are able to make these corrections. Ruth's maiden name, instead of being spelled Wyllis (as it is given in Sprague's "Annals"), is Wyllys, the spelling having been changed after the family came to America. This correction might be of little account, were it not for the important aid it gives in tracing a family whose sons have been distinguished, and whose daughters have been "corner-stones." The other mistake is more significant in its relation to fact. Rev. Edward Taylor, instead of having eight daughters in his first marriage, had three sons and only five daughters. His two eldest children were Samuel and James, who lived to manhood; the youngest was Hezekiah, who died young. The granddaughter, who was adopted by Ruth, instead of being the child of his eldest daughter, as is stated in the "Annals," was the only child of the eldest son, Samuel. We regret that it has been necessary to make these corrections, yet we are glad, in the interest of history, to be able to do so. In these sketches we try to have all our statements based upon the best authority, but the threads of family history are sometimes to be traced only by the most careful research. Little, comparatively, has been written about the Wyllys and Taylor families; families which through all their branches have had a remarkable number of eminent descendants. Like mountain-peaks, these individual lives have stood in history, but they have not been connected into a mountain-chain. The neglect is to be regretted; and if our humble sketch of this mother Ruth shall, even with its mistakes, call forth facts, in the possession of living descendants, which have never before been given to the public, and thereby furnish important connections in the historic chain, our first expectations will be more than realized. Any such information will be gratefully received, either by the writer or by Judge Taylor, who is the nearest living descendant of Rev. Edward and Ruth Taylor. Besides the corrections mentioned he has furnished us with many additional facts of interest, part of which we will give our readers in the sketches to follow.

THE story of Ruth's ancestors is not less interesting than is the history of her descendants.

She was the granddaughter of two Connecticut governors. Her maternal grandfather was John Haynes, Governor of Massachusetts in 1635, and who joined the emigrant party of Rev. Thomas Hooker in 1636, Governor Haynes being, according to Bancroft, the leader of Hooker's party through the forest wilderness of Massachusetts. He was made the first governor of Connecticut, and was reelected every alternate year until his death, in 1654.

When he came to America, in 1633, he was a widower, but not far from the time of his journey to Connecticut, he married Mabel Harlakenden, who came from England in 1635. We are not informed whether Mabel was one of Hooker's famous company, but it is not unlikely that in this party she went on her bridal tour to her future home. There is no doubt but if the story of Mabel Haynes could be fully told, it would in thrilling truth surpass any modern novel. She was the descendant of kings and of the daughters of English nobility. We are told that her ancestry has been traced back through thirteen different lines to William the Conqueror. It is probable that no other maiden ever came over with the Puritans, whose ancestry could be traced so far, and through so many royal names. Reared in luxury, Mabel and her brother Roger left their sumptuous English home,—Roger being the proprietor of a grand park of 1800 acres in England,—left all this beautiful estate to face the untried hardships of the American wilderness. Roger soon died, and Mabel, "the daughter of nobility," gave the wealth of her life to Connecticut. The new colony needed just such female heroism as was displayed by the Governor's young wife.

The name of John Haynes is venerated in history, and the name of the ardent, loving Mabel should be given its own place beside it; and glad are we to introduce her to our readers as the beloved grandmother of Ruth Wyllys Taylor. We cannot fail to observe the family likeness between them, and we almost involuntarily repeat the proverb, "As is the mother, so is her daughter."

Ruth Haynes, the daughter of Mabel, married the son of Governor George Wyllys. The home of the Governor, one of the finest situations in Hartford, known as the "Wyllys Place," came into the possession of the son, Hon. Samuel Wyllys, and here, in this picturesque spot, were born Ruth

Wyllis
Taylor, her two sisters and brother Hezekiah. Her father, when only twenty-two years old, was elected to the upper house of the Connecticut Legislature, to which honorable position he was returned by annual elections, without intermission, for thirty years, until the time when Sir Edmund Andros usurped the reins of government. Thus the son of Governor Wyllis was constantly busy in the legislative halls; but meanwhile the daughter of Governor Haynes was the faithful "keeper at home," and the beautiful "Wyllis Place" was a nursery for church and state. Around this early home of Ruth Taylor are grouped many of the most thrilling scenes in the history of Hartford. "The old oak" in front of the house, under whose branches Ruth and the other children played, was afterward to become the most famous tree in America, so famous as to be made a universal medium for advertising an "insurance," "giving a name to everything, from a great banking-house down to a box of blacking." Irresistibly are we carried back to those days when the English usurper demanded the beloved Charter of Connecticut. In imagination we stand in Hartford on that memorable day in the autumn of 1687, when the din of arms proclaims that the time of final decision has come. Andros, with sixty soldiers, marches into town and demands the charter. Will the heroes of Hartford yield? They meet in general council to consider. The Assembly is held in the Old Church. Of course, Ruth's father is there, but at home the mother with the children, Hezekiah, a boy of fifteen, the thoughtful Ruth, and her sisters, all are intensely interested. We take our place with them—the house is close by the Assembly—and we watch the building surrounded by soldiers. But hour after hour the debate continues. The sun sets. The dark curtain of night falls, while every heart is still in suspense. The candle-lights flicker from the old church, and the thick darkness without increases—when, suddenly, the church is as dark as the night without. Confusion follows, and soon the story spreads on wings over Hartford, "The charter is gone." Just as the tyrant hand was stretched out to grasp it, the light of every candle in a twinkling went out, and in the sudden darkness, noise, and confusion the precious charter disappeared. Where was it? That was a Hartford secret. It was guarded well. The friendly old oak opposite Ruth's home never whispered it, but for twenty long months it kept the valuable treasure concealed in its bosom. That memorable night was five years before Ruth's marriage, and Ruth, when the dangers were passed, celebrated with the rest of the family the happy May-day in 1689, when the charter was taken from the trunk of the old oak, when the government was restored, and Ruth's father was again given his place in the Legislature. Hon. Samuel Wyllys served six years more, making a total of thirty-six years in this office. But the sequel of this family's official history is still more remarkable. Hezekiah, the only brother of Ruth, was elected in 1711 Secretary of State, and by annual elections was continued in this office for twenty-three years, until his death. His immediate successor as Secretary was his own son George Wyllys, who was elected annually to the office for sixty-one years, until his death, in 1795, when he was succeeded by his son, General Samuel Wyllys, who was elected every year, for fifteen years, until 1809, the office of Secretary of State having thus been during ninety-nine consecutive years by annual elections given to Ruth's brother, his son, and grandson. Adding to this the thirty-six years that Ruth's father served in the Legislature, and the time that her grandfather, Governor Wyllys, held the office, either of chief magistrate or as assistant in Connecticut, and we have a record of one hundred and forty-one years, where high places of trust were annually given by the people to the Wyllys family. Is there to be found anywhere an official history similar to this?

Our readers have now become somewhat acquainted with Ruth's ancestors, have lingered near her childhood home, have recognized the old charter-oak as it stood a sentinel, as it were, over "the Wyllys place," and guarded in its secret treasury the most liberal grant that had ever issued from the royal hand; bounding the Connecticut colony on the west by the Pacific Ocean, and thus preparing the way of the American nation for its wide claim to the great Western States of our Union. Well might the Wyllys family cherish and our whole people venerate that grand old oak! We have followed also the boy Hezekiah, who whistled beneath its shade and climbed to its topmost branches. Taking a look into the distance, we have seen Connecticut intrusting for a century its important records to the faithful Hezekiah and his family.

Now we go back and follow again the maiden Ruth. We are better prepared than we were at first to follow this descendant of kings, this granddaughter of two governors, who, like the bravehearted Mabel, counted not the hardships before her. We realize more than at first how great the change from the Wyllys place in Hartford to the cabin parsonage of Westfield. But the minister's motherless children were waiting for the blessing of her life. The two boys, Samuel and James, were just at the age when boys need, perhaps, more than at any other time, the gentle influence of a judicious mother; and the influence that was so blessed in the training of their younger sisters must have fallen with a precious benediction upon the minister's boys. Their sister, Bathsheba, was nine years old when the stepmother came, and Elizabeth was between seven and eight. Mary, Abigail, and the other sister died young, and Hezekiah, their little brother, was also numbered with the early dead.

Samuel and James grew up to manhood, and the two brothers went into the mercantile business together; but Samuel, while absent in the West Indies, died suddenly, and, not far from the same time, James died at home. Thus, almost at one stroke, the minister's family was bereft of its sons. The only one finally to perpetuate the family name was the boy Eldad, who followed in the wake of his ten sisters. Samuel had married, but his young wife died before he did, leaving only an infant daughter, Elizabeth, the adopted one of the Taylor household, who grew up with Ruth's little ones. But before we follow the history of this child and Ruth's daughters further, let us turn to the half-sisters, Bathsheba and Elizabeth. They were educated almost entirely under the loving watch-care of their stepmother; and while assisting her in the household duties, and rocking the cradle of the little ones, they grew in all the domestic graces, and beneath the culture of the wise young mother developed into lovely womanhood. But death claimed the beautiful Elizabeth for his bride, before any happy suitor had won her from the parsonage. Judge Taylor says, in reference to her: "In my early youth the traditions of Elizabeth were clear and bright. She died, I believe, at the age of eighteen or twenty. According to tradition, she was an extraordinarily gifted and lovely girl. It is said that no person had ever died in Westfield whose death had caused such universal and profound grief." Who shall tell what an influence for good may have followed this lovely life?

The fair Bathsheba now alone was left of all the first mother's daughters to carry the influence of the Taylor household into a home of her own. Hon. John Pyncheon, a young man of worth, received this first bride of the parsonage. He was a descendant also of Governor Wyllys, his grandfather, Colonel John Pyncheon, having married the Governor's daughter, Amy Wyllys, the aunt of Ruth Taylor. Thus the descendants of the stepdaughter came in Ruth's own line of descent. The Pyncheon family had received well-merited honor for their public spirit, skill, and faithfulness in every position they filled. The son-in-law of the Westfield minister was prepared by his upright predecessors to extend the family influence in his union with Bathsheba. Her life was not long, yet was lengthened until she had nursed a flock of precious little ones for the Master, and then some one else was raised up to carry on her work. We must pass over those years, when, in the household of Bathsheba, the life of the Taylor nursery was repeated, and content ourselves by pointing our readers to a few of the results.

We cannot attempt more than an imperfect glance. The family circle has become far extended. It would take many volumes to tell all the story of Bathsheba Pyncheon, her seven or eight children, and their descendants. We would need to learn the record of her son, Joseph Pyncheon, the Harvard graduate of 1726, and know all the great family history of her daughter, Elizabeth Pyncheon, who married a Mr. Colton, and had fifteen children, nine sons and six daughters ; and still another volume would be needed to trace the sister, Bathsheba, who married Robert Harris, and from whom, according to Dr. Sprague, descended President Harris, of Columbia College. But the mother Bathsheba's multiplied life would not be half portrayed, even then. You must learn by the most thorough acquaintance the remarkable family history of her daughter, Mary Pyncheon, who married General Joseph Dwight, and had nine children. Study then the saintly life of their daughter, Lydia Dwight, who married Rev. John Willard, from whom have descended many eminent clergymen, and such men in official life as Hon. John Dwight Willard.

Another volume of the life of Mary Pyncheon Dwight is that of her daughter, Dorothy, who married Hon. Jedediah Foster, a Judge of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, and a member of the convention which framed the constitution of that State. The history is still continued in the life of their son, Judge Dwight Foster, a United States Senator from Massachusetts. Add to this the life of Hon. Theodore Foster, another Senator, for thirteen years, from Rhode Island ; include in the catalogue the life of General Dwight Foster, another Judge of the Supreme Court, and forget not to embrace the noble record of Alfred Dwight Foster, of Worcester, Massachusetts. What a library it would take to tell all the story of the Pynchons, the Coltons, the Harrises, the Dwights, the Willards, and the Fosters, descendants of Bathsheba ! We have named only a few of the many who are included in this family. Besides all its renowned senators and judges, ministers, professors, and college presidents, now placed on high, how many faithful Elizabeths, noble Bathshebas, loving Marys, saintly Dorothys, and beloved Lydias,—a host of true-hearted Christian women,—descendants of Bathsheba Taylor, the step-daughter of Ruth.

We turn again to Ruth's own girls. We have followed her eldest daughter, Ruth, to West Hartford, and have had a faint view of the influence she exerted in her union with Rev. Benjamin Colton and their children. A question has arisen whether Rev. George Colton, of Massachusetts, was their son or not, as some of the family have not his name on their records; but Judge Taylor is inclined to think this only an omission, and that our statement, taken from history, is correct, as he remembers that his own father often mentioned with his relatives Rev. George Colton, who, on account of his great height, was called the "high priest." We are also informed that Rev.

Ely Colton, of Stratford, Conn., was reckoned among the sons of the West Hartford parsonage, and besides there was a son Benjamin.

Ruth Colton had a daughter, a namesake, who married Timothy Skinner, and Mrs. Ruth Skinner had a Ruth, who became the wife of Rev. Nathaniel Hooker, of West Hartford. We are thus able to trace five generations of Ruths, from the time when Ruth Haynes, the Governor's daughter, let her light shine brightly from the Wyllys home, on the beautiful "hill of Hartford."

Going back to Ruth Colton, we meet another daughter, Thedocia Colton, who joins her life with Rev. Adonijah Bidwell, the first pastor of the church in Tyringham, Mass. We are told that the fair Thedocia was "a poetess," but we believe that her poems were not preserved—women had not yet been given their place among authors. Traditions of her writings were handed down, but her beautiful life was a brief sonnet, including only seven years of wedded happiness. To fill her place, Rev. Mr. Bidwell chose her cousin, Jemima Devotion, a daughter of Naomi Taylor.

The history of the Devotion family has called forth close investigation. It appears that Naomi Taylor was the second wife of Rev. Ebenezer Devotion, of Suffield, and stepmother to the minister's eldest son, who was afterward known as Rev. Ebenezer Devotion, Jr., of Windham, Conn. Although not Naomi's own child, he received from his sixth year the lasting impress of her loving care, growing up under the same influence that was thrown around Rev. John Devotion, of Saybrook, who, we learn, was Naomi's own son, instead of a grandson, as we were at first informed. Naomi's eldest daughter married Rev. Hezekiah Bissell. This daughter was the mother of nine children. To her family belonged Colonel Hezekiah Bissell, of East Windsor, whose daughter married Rev. Abel Flint, D. D., of Hartford. Their daughter became the wife of Rev. Herman Norton. Two of Naomi's daughters we are not able to trace, only to learn that one married Jonathan Goodhere, and the other Jonathan Wells. The youngest daughter, Jemima Devotion, who took her cousin Thedocia's place at Tyringham, had four children. Her two sons, Adonijah Bidwell, Jr., and Barnabas, have very many descendants, some of whom have risen to prominent places. One of Jemima's daughters married Eliab Brown, and their son, Rev. Josiah Brown, was for many years missionary in Greece and Asia Minor. The other daughter, Jemima, became the wife of Wm. Partridge, and from the home of Jemima Partridge one of the first missionaries to the Sandwich Islands received his heroic companion. This descendant of Ruth Taylor, Nancy (Partridge) Whitney, was in 1868 still to be found at the Hawaiian Mission, among the remnant of that first brave band who planted the Gospel in the benighted isles of the Pacific. In opposite directions, the great-grandchildren of Naomi had gone into the mission-field, and in their work they almost met in the circumference of the great vineyard. One of the family wrote years ago: "The children of Jemima Devotion are found in all parts of the world."

We are not able to follow so far the descendants of Anne Taylor, but we doubt not that the work of Rev. Benjamin Lord, D. D., and his devout companion, which stands as a monument in the history of Norwich, Conn., has sent out, in numberless channels, good streams that, flowing on and on, are bearing precious freight to the boundless ocean of eternity. Anne Lord had four sons, Benjamin, Elihu, Ebenezer, and Joseph. The last two were twins, and were graduates together at Yale in 1758.

There are doubtless many descendants of this Norwich family. One great-grandson of Anne has lately been traced to his field of labor at Colorado Springs, Col., where Rev. Willis Lord is found planting a new vineyard for the Master.

Hetta Talyor's life cannot be followed through children's children. The home of Rev. Wm. Gager, although blessed, was also afflicted. Their two children were taken while young to the upper fold. Mysterious are the ways of Providence. This mother in Lebanon was written childless, and in North Haven her sister Kezzy left the frailest of infants motherless. But we have followed the little one until we have been introduced to the man of great influence known far and near as President Stiles, of Yale. The President had two sons and six daughters. The eldest son, Ezra Stiles, became a lawyer of North Carolina. Isaac was at sea at the time of his father's death, and as he was never afterward heard from, it was supposed that the ship was lost in a storm. Elizabeth, the President's oldest daughter, died about the same time.

Keziah married Hon. Lewis Burr Sturgis, a member of Congress. Amelia, after her father's death, had a home for some time in the family of Rev. John Taylor, the father of Judge Taylor. She married Hon. Jonathan Leavitt, of Greenfield, Mass., a judge of the higher court. She had three daughters and one son. The latter died in the midst of his college days. Sarah Leavitt, the eldest daughter, married a lawyer; Mary remained single, and occupied the old home in Greenfield; Amelia married a Mr. Jenkins, and their only son is well known as Rev. Jonathan L. Jenkins, pastor of the First Church in Pittsfield, Mass.

Ruth Stiles married John M. Gannett, and was the mother of the late Rev. Ezra Stiles Gannett, of Boston. Mary Stiles, the other daughter of the President, was the first wife of Rev. Abiel Holmes, D. D., the father of Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Thus we may trace in high positions, in church and state, the descendants of Keziah Taylor, who lived only long enough to give her child to the world. Elizabeth Taylor, the adopted child of Ruth, has also had numbered among her descendants men high in position. Among these was Hon. James Dixon, late United States Senator from Connecticut, who was a great-grandson of Rev. Peter Reynolds and Elizabeth Taylor.

We have now followed Ruth Taylor's girls from Bathsheba, the stepdaughter, down to the adopted grandchild. We have tried to so trace them, that our readers may follow them still farther, should they know their families. But we must not close our imperfect review without one look at the family of Ruth's only son, Eldad, the youngest of the fourteen children of the Westfield parsonage.

It was the year 1708 when Eldad, the fourteenth child of the parsonage was born, the same year when the little grand-child, Elizabeth, was received into the crowded nursery at Westfield. The death of Samuel's young wife being soon followed by his own death and that of his brother James, the orphaned babe was doubly precious for the sake of the lost; while the blow that suddenly bereft the household of the two grown-up sons led them to fold very closely to their hearts the infant Eldad, the only boy now of the parsonage. But the care to Ruth, at this time, must have been great. When these two children were added to the family, the Westfield pastor was already an old man, his locks well sprinkled with the gray of sixty-six years. Would the Benjamin of his old age prove a staff in his last days? Their hopes were fulfilled. Eldad was their stay. He remained when his five sisters, one by one, went forth to bless the homes of Connecticut ministers; and, when the sixth minister came and took Elizabeth also, the old parsonage had only Eldad left, of all the fifteen children who had gladdened it. Its last blessing was reserved for the noble young son who was its crowning joy. Upon this strong, faithful arm the aged pastor leaned until his feet had touched the last sands on the shore of time. When death divided them the pilgrim had entered his eighty-eighth year, and Eldad had only just reached his majority. Upon the threshold of twenty-one, he received the dying blessing of the patriarch of Westfield. Verily, Eldad Taylor was blessed. How long he was permitted to minister to his beloved mother we know not, but we are sure that by her influence Ruth Taylor remained long as a ministering spirit to her boy. He continued to occupy the old home, where every association was precious. He became a deacon in the church where his father had so long ministered.

We pass over the many years of faithfulness that intervened, and come down to the commencement of the Revolution, when we find in the memorable Senate of Massachusetts Hon. Eldad Taylor. He was selected as one of the Governor's Council. At the close of the legislative session he had a strong desire to return home, but "he was earnestly urged by the Governor to remain and aid him in the threatening emergency." He did so, and fell at his post, as truly a martyr to the cause as the soldiers who gave their lives. Had he returned to Westfield he might have escaped the fatal pestilence, but, obedient to duty, the Massachusetts Senator fell in Boston, by the hand of that dreadful scourge, smallpox, on the 21st of May, 1777. He had been twice married, and left a large family. His first wife, Rhoda Dewey, had five children, but only two survived her. He next married Thankful Day, a relative of President Day, and also of Secretary Thomas, the successor of Secretary Wyllys. Thankful was evidently one of those noble helpers for whom the world outside of her own family has reason to be "thankful." She was the mother of nine children. Thus, it will be noticed, the second Taylor family of the Westfield homestead numbered the same as did the first—fourteen children. At his death,

Hon. Eldad Taylor left six sons and four daughters. This family was hardly less remarkable than Ruth's, but we must content ourselves with only a rapid survey of their history. We shall not in this connection attempt to trace the descendants of the four daughters. The following is the significant epitaph on Eldad Taylor's tomb-stone in Westfield, Mass. :

"Kind reader, this stone informs you who we were. What we were, we tell you not. What we ought to have been, that be thou. Where we are now you will know hereafter. Remember that 'Christ is the Resurrection and the Life.'"

The six sons were Eldad, Edward, James, Samuel, Jedediah, and John. Four of these were at different times members of the State Legislature, three of Massachusetts, and the youngest of Connecticut.

Eldad, the eldest of the six, was one of the first wife's children, but, losing his mother at the age of four, he came early under the care of Thankful Taylor. One of his descendants is Dr. Charles Fayette Taylor, the manager of the establishment for curing curvatures of the spine, etc., on 53d Street, New-York. He has numerous other descendants scattered through northern New-York and the Eastern States.

Edward, the eldest son of Thankful, has also a large posterity. He left several children, "all of whom were decidedly religious," and some have given liberally to charitable purposes. His daughter, Mary, married Rev. Jonathan Nash, and was the mother of Rev. Ansel Nash. Roland Mather, of Hartford, a corporate member of the A.B.C.F.M., was another descendant; as was the wife of John B. Eldridge, another of the first members of this Missionary Band. The Morgan Brothers, Homer and Henry T., of New-York, are connected with the Taylors, through Pa-melia, another daughter of Edward. Thus we find the links connecting ministerial circles, mission bands, and business firms. Turning to Hon. James Taylor's family, we are made acquainted with a son, Rev. James Taylor, of Sunderland, Massachusetts, and among his descendants are Rev. James F. Taylor, of Michigan, and Rev. James Taylor Dickinson, of Connecticut, one of our foreign missionaries to the East.

We must pass by others,—there is much to be yet learned by investigating the history of this large family,—and devote our brief remaining space to Rev. John Taylor, of Deerfield, Massachusetts. He, like his father, was the fourteenth child of the Westfield home. His brother Eldad had been married eight years before John was born. Bereft during his boyhood years of his father, he must have owed much to his mother. How much the world owes her they never will know. Thankful Taylor did her work faithfully. She survived her husband twenty-six years. Her children, even to the youngest, were thoroughly fitted for their work. John, a graduate of Yale, was the family offering to the priesthood. He served at one time in the Connecticut Legislature, but he was best known for his work in the ministry. For nineteen years he was the pastor of the Congregational Church in Deerfield. He married "a child of the Mayflower," a descendant of Governor Bradford, and was the father of eleven children, seven of whom—five sons and two daughters—lived to years of maturity. His eldest daughter, Elizabeth, married her cousin, Rev. James Taylor, of Sunderland, Mass. She and her husband died within a week of each other, leaving nine children, the eldest scarcely of age and the youngest not six months old; yet these children of many prayers all lived to honor their family. One of the sons rose to the head of the greatest mercantile company in Charleston, S. C., and one of the daughters, Julia Taylor, married Rev. Mr. Hyde, through whose family the influence of good parentage may be traced still on. Harriet, the other daughter, married Mr. Roderick Terry, of Hartford, and left at her death eight children. In this family we are introduced to Rev. Roderick Terry, D. D.,* of Peekskill, N. Y., her grandson.

Of the five sons of Rev. John Taylor, three have been deacons in the Congregational Church, and a son of the youngest, Frank D. Taylor, of Detroit, Mich., has been President of the Young Men's Christian Association of the United States.

But the best-known of all Rev. John Taylor's five sons is Hon. Henry Wyllys Taylor, of Canandaigua, N. Y., late Judge of the Supreme Court of this State. We are indebted to him for a large amount of the knowledge we have of this remarkable mother and her descendants. Judge Taylor being her nearest living relative, only removed two generations from Ruth's own nursery, has treasured up much of the family story.

Although these sketches, as given by us, have been imperfect, we are sure that every one who delights to note the fulfillment of God's promises to the faithful must be interested in the harvest of Ruth, whose descendants in the ministry may be reckoned by nearly half a hundred, who has representatives in the wide mission-fields of the East and of the West, among the mountains of Asia and in the isles of the sea, whose sons have molded our institutions of learning, and whose law-makers have been exalted to almost every position of trust in our nation. Is not the record of such a family worth preserving?

The sheaves of Ruth can never be fully numbered here, but we trust that the story will yet be more complete, and that many more of the faithful laborers of her family will yet "be known in the gates" of the world's wide field.

Two Gaelic soldiers and their contribution to Canada

By Bruce W. Taylor

Mr. Taylor, the author of this lively account, was born on 11 June 1937 in Kirkland Lake, Ontario. He writes that he received his primary and secondary education in New Liskeard, and is a graduate of the Provincial Institute of Mining in Haileybury, Ontario. He holds a B.Sc. in Geological Engineering from the Michigan Technological University, and is currently mine manager at Steep Rock Iron Mines Ltd., Atikokan.

It is only in the past two years that I have seriously become interested in genealogical research on my family, although for a number of years I have been a serious student of Canadian prehistory. In any case, having made some initial inquiries into Taylor history, mostly to satisfy a curiosity whetted by reading an existing family history, I find myself now very deeply involved in researching my own family, and I seem to have acquired an insatiable curiosity which grows with every new piece of information I uncover.

It is certainly not family pride which feeds the fires of my curiosity, since every family—and mine is no exception—has its social rejects. Rather it is an obsession to learn how my ancestors fitted into the general scope of history, and by understanding the past, perhaps gaining an insight on my own contribution, however small it may be, to Canadian society.

The name "Taylor" is a commonplace one, an occupational surname found widely in the British Isles. In Scotland, the name is associated with the Clan Cameron. The story of the "Black Taylor of the Axe" is told in any good history of the clans' and it is not my intention to go into it here. The Taylors are widespread throughout Scotland and have played their part in its history.²

THE TAYLORS

James George Taylor was born 6 August 1814 in the parish of Latheron in the County of Caithness. Prior to James, little is known about the family, except that his father, who had been a soldier in the Napoleonic wars, was named George, and that his Mother's name was Anne Sinclair. The Sinclairs were the most prominent family in that part of Scotland. One so-called history of the family states that Anne Sinclair was the only child of Sir George Sinclair, Baronet of Dunbeath, a cadet branch of the Earl of Caithness. Inquiries to the office of the Lord Lyon of Scotland have not substantiated this, and as it enters the realms of conjecture, the story must be discounted.

James Taylor ran away from home at the age of 14 and tried to enlist in the army. He was found out, and sent back. However, on 4 February 1833, at the age of 18 he enlisted in the 93rd Highlanders, the famous Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. His attestation record reveals that he was a strapping lad, 5'11" tall, with dark eyes and dark hair—features no doubt reflecting the influence of the Picts who inhabited that area in ancient times. He was promoted to corporal in 1836, and in 1838 the regiment was sent to Canada as a result of the rebellion in Upper Canada.

The main body of the regiment left England on 23 January, 1838, aboard H.M.S. Pique. It arrived at Halifax on 5 March after a very rough crossing, then proceeded to Montreal and Lachine. During the threat of the "Patriot" invasion in November that same year, it was sent to various towns including Coteau du Lac, Cornwall, Kingston, Toronto, Prescott, and Beauharnois.

Windmill Point, near Prescott in the County of Grenville is noted for the obstinate four-day defence made there in November 1838 by insurgents from the United States belonging to a secret society known as the "Hunters". Their leader, "Colonel" Van Schultz, a native of Poland, hoped to surprise and capture the town of Prescott. However, due to a series of blunders by his officers, he was prevented from invading the town, and landed below Prescott. The Hunter force took up positions near a large six-story windmill, where it was surrounded and attacked by a force of British regulars, the 83rd Regiment, and local militia units.

An old family letter³ states that James Taylor took part in the Battle of the Windmill. However, having read every account of the battle available, I could find no reference to the 93rd Highlanders taking part in it. I had almost concluded the account in the letter was in error, when in answer to an inquiry to the Regimental Headquarters of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders in Scotland, I received a letter which stated that the Grenadier Company of the 93rd under a Major Arthur joined the 83rd in the attack on the windmill. Knowing that James Taylor was a Corporal in the Grenadier Company, I was then able to substantiate that he was, in fact, present at the battle. The battle was won by the British, and Van Schultz and several of his men were hanged for their part in the invasion. The name Schultz appears again, and plays a major part in this history, although 1500 miles to the West and 48 years later.

The 93rd Highlanders were stationed in Toronto, Drummondville, and Kingston until 1843, in Montreal until July 1846, and in Quebec City until they returned to Scotland in 1848. Corporal Taylor was promoted to sergeant in 1839, colour sergeant in 1845, and sergeant-major in 1851.

The only information that I have been able to uncover regarding James Taylor's military activities in Canada after the rebellion was obtained from the Dominion Archives in Ottawa, and consists of a petition for reimbursement of expenses to him. It appears that he was in charge of a party escorting prisoners from Kingston via the Rideau system to Bytown (Ottawa) when on the night of the 18 October 1844, a violent storm on Rideau Lake swamped their boat. James Taylor was obliged to provision the party out of his own pocket until it arrived in Montreal on 22 October. The record shows that he was granted 10 shillings.

James Taylor married an Irish Immigrant, Abigail Carlton Peel, on 30 July 1844, probably in Montreal, as that was where he was stationed at the time.

Abigail Peel was born on 23 January 1820, at Hillsborough in County Down, Ireland, the daughter of Thomas Peel and Anne Green Peel. The family were of English origin, having received grants of land in Ireland after the Battle of the Boyne. Abigail Peel's Mother, Anne Green Peel was the daughter of John Green and Anne Wilkins of Hillsborough, who were married 1 May 1791. She was born 29 June 1795.

James and Abigail Taylor had two children born to them while he was stationed in Canada. Anne Sinclair Taylor was born in Montreal on 7 December 1845. George Taylor was born at Quebec City on 7 January 1848, shortly before the regiment returned to Scotland. This first George Taylor died as an infant on board ship, and following the Scottish custom, the next son, born at Sterling, Scotland, was also named George. Of this George Taylor we will hear more later.

Between 1848 and 1854 when the regiment next went overseas, it was stationed at Anglesey, England, and it was here that a second son, Thomas William, was born on 6 September 1852.

In 1854 the regiment left England, and sailed for Turkey and the Crimea where it was to gain fame as the "Thin Red Line" at the battle of Balaklava. James Taylor, however, was not to take part in those battles in Russia, or in the famous battles that took place in India afterwards. He landed with the regiment in Crimea, but went back on board ship the next day and was sent back to the depot where he was invalided out of the army on a pension. According to the report of the staff surgeon, he was suffering from "chronic rheumatism", due to "the effects of military service in Turkey during the last nine months."

Sergeant-Major James Taylor had spent a total of 21 years, 363 days with the 93rd, 11 years and four months of that overseas. The 10½ years he spent in Canada must have made a great impression on him, because in 1856 he and his family emigrated there, settling in London, Ontario. One more son, James was born in London, on 1 February 1862, and three daughters; Isabella, born on 15 January 1856, Charlotte, born on 8 October 1859, and Maria Florence, born on 18 January 1865.

James Taylor died in London, on 11 November 1897, and his wife Abigail Carlton Peel died on 7 February 1915, also at London.

We now turn to James Taylor's eldest son, George, who had been born in Sterling, Scotland in 1849. Following his schooling in London, he apprenticed as a harness maker. In 1866, however, the Fenians were causing a great deal of alarm in Ontario and threatening invasion of Canada, so George Taylor, at the age of 16, enlisted, as did a large number of other boys of his age, in the local militia unit, the 7th (London) Battalion. He was a private in Number 5 Company under a Major MacPherson, and when the Fenians finally did invade Canada, his unit was called out; first to Paris, Port Colborne, Thorald Camp, and to Ridgeway.

Most Canadian textbooks and histories of the Fenian troubles tend to dignify the clash between the Canadians and the Fenians at Ridgeway as an "engagement". In fact, however, after some initial successes particularly by the Trinity College and University companies, and by the Highland Company, a few mounted Fenians were sighted, and in the ensuing call to "Form Square" and "Prepare for Cavalry" there was confusion in the ranks which eventually resulted in a precipitous retreat. Fortunately, the Fenians, most of whom were trained soldiers, veterans of the U.S. civil war, chose not to pursue the Canadians past the village of Ridgeway, and realizing that with the arrival of regular troops, artillery and cavalry, that they would not stand much of a chance they retreated back across the river.

This initial taste of military life and the excitement of the campaign no doubt impressed young George, for when the Red River Rebellion broke out in 1869, he enlisted in the 1st Ontario Rifles. He was 20 years old when he was attested on 3 May 1870.

Due to the anticipated rigours of the expedition, only the strongest and healthiest young men were recruited for the Red River Expedition. Three regiments, all under the command of Colonel (later General) Garnet Wolseley, were to take part: a force of British Regulars, the 60th Rifles (including a detachment of Royal Artillery and Engineers); the 1st Ontario Rifles; and the 2nd Quebec Rifles.

The 1st Ontario Rifles trained at the Crystal Palace in Toronto, and it became fashionable for the local citizenry to make a holiday out of watching the volunteers train. Even before it started for Winnipeg, the expedition took on the aspect of a crusade to rescue the English-speaking Protestant minority at the Red River from the French-speaking, Catholic insurgents. This attitude later led to a great deal of trouble between the Canadians and the Metis.

The expedition itself has been described many times, and was significant in military history because it was successfully concluded in the face of tremendous difficulties transporting men and equipment across the hostile Canadian Shield between Thunder Bay and the Red River.

When the expedition arrived at Fort Garry,⁵ Riel had decamped, and since there was no further need for their services, the British Regular troops returned to Ontario, while the volunteer troops stayed on in Winnipeg. Soon, however, the 1st Ontario Rifles was sent to Fort Pembina near the U.S. Border, and stayed there until disbanded in 1871. It is likely that it was the need to keep the Canadians and the Metis apart as much as the threat of a Fenian invasion from Minnesota that prompted the Government to send the militia to Pembina. The Fenian threat, however was real, and only the prompt intervention of the U.S. Cavalry prevented an invasion and probably bloodshed.

THE MAGUIRES

It is necessary at this point to backtrack to the year 1825 and to Ireland, where an event that later would affect future generations of Taylors was taking place.

Philip Maguire, our second Gael, was born in 1825 in the parish of Fieldstone, near the town of Drogheda, in the Irish County of Louth. He was a Roman Catholic and his Father's name was Patrick. During his early days, Philip must not have had the opportunity to attend school, because when he enlisted in the 9th Regiment of Foot, 25 May 1843, he could not write his name, and had to mark his "X" on the oath. The record shows that he received an enlistment bounty of £3.17.6. At the time of enlistment, he was classed, as James Taylor had been, as a labourer.

The Regiment left England in 1844, and arrived in India on 4 February the same year. The Sikh wars broke out in 1845, and during a campaign known as the Campaign of the Army of the Sutledge, several battles were fought in which the British were successful, although casualties were heavy on both sides. The first of these battles was the Battle of Moodke (or Mudke) on 18 December 1845. Philip Maguire was severely wounded by grape shot. One ball penetrated his left knee and had to be extracted from the inside of the joint. In the process, gangrene set in, and Maguire had to be left behind in hospital when his regiment marched down to Calcutta. He subsequently returned to England with a division of the 21st Regiment, and on inspection was declared unfit for further service. He convalesced in hospital in England until August 1848, at which time he was discharged on pension.

About that time, Philip Maguire returned home to Ireland and took as a bride a girl named Mary Hughes, whose father's name was Patrick Hughes.

In 1849, the Hudson's Bay Company, concerned over the free trade issue at the Red River, decided to recruit a force of British Army pensioners to act as a guard at Fort Garry. Philip Maguire joined this force (known as the Chelsea Pensioners, after the Chelsea veteran's hospital in England). The pensioners who went to Fort Garry were expected to be recently pensioned and reasonably fit, and presumably Philip was considered reasonably fit in spite of his wound.

He arrived at Fort York on Hudson Bay in 1850, with the second contingent of pensioners, accompanied by his wife who gave birth to a baby boy during the voyage. But the infant died as the ship approached Fort York and was buried there. The pensioners travelled by York Boat to Lake Winnipeg and the Red River, and to Fort Garry where they were granted plots of land on the Assiniboine River, near where the Manitoba Parliament Buildings now stand.

The first daughter of the Maguires, Mary Anne, was born at Fort Garry in 1851. Two more children were born in the next two years, Elizabeth in 1852 and Francis in 1854.

In 1854, a disastrous flood hit the Red River, causing widespread damage. Philip Maguire, perhaps disheartened because of the flood, and somehow hearing that a force of pensioners was being raised for Fort Malden, near Amherstberg, in Ontario, set out on the long journey to St. Paul, Chicago, and Amherstberg. Travelling by Red River cart and train, the family reached Fort Malden that same year. Two children were born in Ontario; Philip in 1856, and Catherine in 1858.

In 1859 the pensioner force was disbanded, and the Maguires, hearing that a measure of prosperity had returned to the Red River settlement, started the long journey back. Philip acquired a farm in St. James Parish, and took up farming to supplement his pension. Four more children were born in the next few years, Thomas in 1860, Marguerite in 1862, Richard in 1864, and James in 1869.

In 1869 the Red River Rebellion broke out, and Louis Riel raised the Fleur de Lis flag of the Provisional Government over Fort Garry. There was some bitter opposition to the Metis from the English-speaking minority, and a group of Riel's opponents set about trying to ensure that a quantity of government supplies stored in a brick store owned by a Dr. Schultz, did not fall into Riel's hands. However, on the night of 7 December, 1869, the Metis surrounded the store and took a number of prisoners who were placed in confinement in the fort.

After the rebellion was over, Philip Maguire was accused of aiding the Metis in the capture of Dr. Schultz' store, and of being armed and in the service of the Provisional Government. In 1872, an investigation was held and as a result Philip Maguire was stricken from the list of pensioners, and in spite of repeated petitions to the Imperial War Office, Maguire did not have his pension reinstated. The transcripts of the testimony given at the investigation make fascinating reading and give an insight into the troubles of the time.

It is interesting to note that the first flag raised by the Provisional Government at the Red River had only a Fleur de Lis on it, but later added a shamrock. It is difficult to resist speculation about whether Philip Maguire's wife Mary may have had a hand in sewing the shamrock on, although there were known Fenian sympathizers among the rebels, and one of the rebel generals was named O'Donahue.

After the rebellion and the trial, Philip Maguire and his family settled in Lorette, a small town just east of Winnipeg. I have not yet determined when and where Philip died, although as a relatively old man in 1900 he was still living in Lorette and making representation to the Governor to have his pension reinstated.

Of the many sons and daughters of the Maguires, other than Mary Anne Maguire, my great-great-Grandmother, I have no information, although presumably some of them stayed in Manitoba and raised families there.

GEORGE TAYLOR AND AFTER

George Taylor, Private of the 1st Ontario Rifles, married Mary Anne Maguire in Winnipeg, sometime during the early 1870's. The records of Marriages in Manitoba go back only as far as 1882, and I have not yet discovered the church records that would give the exact date of the marriage. It was obviously unpopular with the Maguires, because Mary Anne was disowned by the family for having married a Protestant.

George Taylor invested in a farm near Winnipeg and settled there until 1882, at which time he sold out and returned to London, Ontario. Winnipeg was enjoying a boom in the 1880's and undoubtedly he profited from the sale of the farm.

George and Mary Anne Taylor eventually had a total of nine children, four girls and five boys, a number of whom were born at the farm in Winnipeg. The eldest daughter, Emma Jean Taylor was born in 1879, was an honour graduate of the University of Toronto in 1899, and is the author of several historical novels, the best known of which is "The Lily of Fort Garry", written under the nom de plume of Jane Rolyat (Taylor spelled backwards). She also wrote "Wilderness Walls" a novel about pioneer life in New Liskeard, Ontario. Emma married Neil MacDougall in Toronto and died in 1956.

It is not my intent here to follow the fortunes of George Taylor's children, as this is obviously a formidable task. All of them, however, made their Cockerham) families in Halifax Co., VA between 1790 and 1805. She descends from MALICHIAH COTHRAN, b. ca. 1802 in SC, d. June 19, 1875, and his wife Nancy ?, b. ca. 1814 in SC, d. Dec. 13, 1879. They are buried at Friendship Methodist Church in Seneca, Oconee Co., SC. He is believed to be the son of LUDY COTHRAN or CAUTHORN and MARY BUSH who m. Aug. 1798 in Halifax Co., VA. Mary was the dau. of THOMAS and MARY BUSH of Halifax Co., VA. The will of Thomas Bush was proved in Halifax Co., VA on Feb. 25, 1805 and lists as an heir his daughter, MARY CAUTHORN.

JOSEPH MICHAEL MAY TAYLOR
BRIGADIER-GENERAL, CONFEDERATE MILITIA OF FLORIDA

Researched and submitted by Ann O. Huddart and Robert Dean Taylor

One of the most intriguing figures in Florida's struggle during the Civil War is Joseph Michael May TAYLOR. Born in Louisville, Kentucky in 1826,¹ he graduated from the University of Louisville (KY) Law School² and in 1850 was sharing rooms with another young attorney David PROVINCE, at a Boarding House in Ocala, Florida.³

By 1853 Joseph M. TAYLOR had established himself as a surveyor and lawyer in Hernando County.⁴ He was a member of the convention of April 6, 1853 to work toward building a railroad from St. Johns River through Hernando County.⁵ He served as a County Judge and a County Commissioner for several years. In 1855 he was a 2nd Lieutenant on the Staff of Colonel M. Whit SMITH during the Seminole War of that period. At age 32 he married Sarah Jane, the 19-year-old daughter of Major Aaron Taylor FRIERSON. They were the parents of Felix Elam TAYLOR and Hester Merina TAYLOR by 1860. They were active members of the Union Baptist Church of Brooksville⁶ but life was to change as the Civil War loomed.

In 1861 a State Convention was held in Tallahassee for the purpose of voting on secession from the Union. The Hernando County delegate, Dr. F. W. SAXON⁷ died of diphtheria during the proceedings. The Honorable Joseph M. TAYLOR was elected to replace him⁸ and on January 10, 1861 was one of the 67 delegates (out of 74) who voted to secede from the Union, making Florida the third state to join the Confederacy.⁹

In order to preserve civil order, many communities established military units. In Hernando County Captain Joseph M. TAYLOR mustered the Old Guards Mounted Rangers under Captain James H. BREAKER into service on March 29, 1862 at Brooksville, Florida. They were mustered out three months later under General Order IX.¹⁰

From this point, General Taylor was crisscrossing the State, serving in various positions. In July 1861 he replaced Colonel William L. TURNER as commander of troops at Fort Brooke, near Tampa. It was a short-lived post, as Captain John T. LESLEY replaced him in August of that year.¹¹

We find Brigadier-General TAYLOR calling two detachments of Confederate Coast Guards to active duty in July 1861 and releasing them in September 1861. He served as a Florida State Senator from District 20 in 1863 and 1865.¹² He traveled constantly, and when he could visit his wife in Hernando County, he would bring extravagant gifts. In a letter dated April 1862, his mother-in-law writes "Judge TAYLOR came home two weeks ago and brought Sarah a most handsome silk dress." Later she writes, "Around Christmas he came home and he then brought her $100 worth of goods."¹³

Dashing, dependable, a Southern gentleman serving The Cause, he was denied amnesty when the Confederacy fell. President Andrew JOHNSON's Amnesty Proclamation of May 29, 1865 was more severe than President LINCOLN's of December, 1863. JOHNSON disenfranchised all former military and civil officers of the Confederacy and all those who owned property worth $20,000 or more and made their estates liable to confiscation.¹⁴ There were threats of hangings, imprisonment and confiscation of property. In November 1865 the commandant of the notorious Confederate prison at Andersonville, Georgia was hanged but imprisonment was the general punishment.¹⁵ Not all Southerners acquiesced obediently.

Here is a vivid image of Joseph M. TAYLOR as he wrote to the Attorney General of the United States,

JOSEPH MICHAEL MAY TAYLOR, Cont'd.

James SPEED. This is a verbatim transcription of correspondence between what seems to be old acquaintances if not friends:

"Hon. James SPEED

"I have been informed that you were called to a place in the council of the United States. Permit me to tender my congratulations. The office of the Attorney General of the United States was never a sinature. Now questions arise before you that the Framers of the Constitution could have prevented had they foreseen; questions that will employ their solution all the knowledge of the Law that you possess.

"You are master of the situation and your opinions will shape the course of a party that seems to defy the elements of defeat. Being a believer in the doctrine of accomplished facts, I seek to accommodate myself to the new order of things, if I had lived in the times of Cato, I would have bowed to Caesar and justified myself by the reflection that in the political horizon there was not a solitary point in sight where the banner of opposition still floated against him. Yet Caesar was merciful, it was reserved for Marat, Danton, Robespierre,¹⁶ those high priests of progress to make blood a lever of power. True, the reaction swept them to bloody graves and prostrated their party.

"Yet though willing to bend my sail to a favoring breeze, I dare not take the oath prescribed because I regard the Pres-proclamation and the Constitution to be inconsistent and repugnant to each other. The rights which a state of war may grant to the Executive are determined, or rather ended, by peace.

"I am willing that slavery, the cause of difference between north and south, should be removed. That was the stake and we lost, but I cannot swear that the mode and manner in which you have accomplished its removal is in accordance with the Constitution which governs you. To me it is a matter of indifference how you have done (?). Do not make me swear to it. When you swear me to abide a measure and give me constitutional privileges, you deny me the exercise of these privileges which you affect to concede to me. The mother says to the child, Here is some money dear. I give it all to you. It is yours, but you must not spend it.

"Settle the abolition of slavery among yourselves; we have lost; all the rights that survive to us were secured only by the laws of nations applicable to a conquered people, but do not ask us indirectly to swear that you are acting in accordance with your own organic law. The death of those whom you may deem the leaders of the Rebellion will not be conducive of peace and harmony in the south once blood begins to flow on the scaffold. The Yankees in the south, having nothing to loose but their lives may not submit like pampered capons to be killed at the will of their masters. We sought to shape the war so as to avoid the guerilla system. As a civilian you can but little comprehend a system so frightful in horrors to friend and foe. Nor do I over-estimate the recourses of the country when I say – but that is foreign to the purpose of this letter.

"I want a special pardon. I was a member of the convention that voted Florida out of the Federal, and into the Confederate, Union; then an aid-de-camp to Gen. R. F. FLOYD then an aid-de-camp to Governor CHILTON, then a Brigadier General Commanding state troops, then a senator in Florida Senate, then a private in Confederate states service to repel a raid; then a paroled prisoner of war under the Johnson Sherman Capitulation.

"I regard the slavery questions as settled by our defeat and as it was the only question which gave rise to others that divided the north and south I see no reason why I could not become a good and loyal citizen of the United States not in name merely.

"Direct your reply to Joseph M. TAYLOR care of John PARSONS, New York City, who will send it to me. We have no mails.

Your friend,
Joseph M. TAYLOR" 17

No record of a reply or action against Joseph M. TAYLOR has been located. We know that he served on the Board of County Commissioners in December 1865 certifying the election of November 29, 1865. He and Sarah Jane looked to Kentucky after the war, but were drawn to the West. In 1870 their son William May TAYLOR was born in Rusk County, Texas and their last child, Julia Olivia TAYLOR was born in Young County, Texas in 1873.

Joseph M. TAYLOR prospered. He owned a cattle ranch south of the Brazos River,¹⁸ surveyed and worked with the railroads¹⁹ as they reached across the continent. Later they settled in Moore, Oklahoma where he and Sarah Jane are buried in the Smith Cemetery.²⁰

The Taylors: Pilgrimage to the Past

Few families gather more religiously for family reunions than the descendants of the Reverend Howell Taylor of Brownsville, Tenn. That's because for about 150 years, the Taylor family reunion has rung the rafters as a seven-day, old-time camp meeting, complete with country preaching, hymn singing, and baby baptizing.

This holy heritage has been nurtured by a family that has produced dozens of Methodist ministers, spread across the United States and Canada. "The original Reverend Taylor wanted his children to know the Lord and know each other," says 79-year-old Averil Taylor, current matriarch of the annual event. "And they keep coming back, almost every year, most of them."

About 400 relatives cram into 30 camp cabins on what once was part of a Taylor antebellum plantation. Unlike some families, Taylor members know exactly what to expect from their reunion because little has changed in seven generations.

"We always do the same thing, at the same time," Taylor notes. "It's up to them to let me know that they're coming."

And they arrive in droves, not only for inspiration from the pulpit, but for the divine meals whipped up in the camp's several kitchens, featuring such family favorites as whole wheat muffins, plum pudding, and fried chicken. One of the regulars is cousin Craig Claiborne, well-known New York Times food writer.

There's reminiscing aplenty during the week. The first regular event is a "heritage walk" through the old Taylor graveyard, where family father Howell, Claiborne's grandparents, and other kinfolk are buried. But most of the other services take place in the Tabernacle Methodist Church, which fills alternately with song, solemnity, and an overall sense of unity during the week. Among the most moving days is Sunday, when new Taylor babies are baptized in the morning, and candles are lit later in the day for each family member who died during the year. The most joyful noise comes from the gospel sings conducted by a relative from just down the road.

When the Taylors splinter into smaller parties between the group gatherings, they gravitate toward others in their generation. The children might play ball in one corner of the campsite, while the older men whittle and congregate somewhere else. But any family feuds or religious differences are overshadowed by the stronger family consciousness during the week.

"We're all Taylors during camp meeting," Taylor maintains. "The in-laws feel it as much as the blood relatives." She should know: She entered the family when she accepted the offer of a man who took her to the graveyard and asked, "How would you like to have the name Taylor on your tombstone?"

J.D.

New York Times food critic Craig Claiborne, a Taylor cousin, revisits the family plot at the annual reunion.

EXPLANATION OF ORDER FOR PHOTOCOPIES

Please use the other side of this form to order photocopies of records relating to a person who served in the United States or Confederate Armed Forces. We can furnish photocopies relating to the following subjects:

- a. United States (not State) pensions claimed on the basis of service before World War I;
- b. United States (not State) bounty lands claimed on the basis of service before 1856;
- c. United States military service performed after 1774 and more than 75 years ago and Confederate military service. (NOTE - We do not have information relating to military service rendered before the Revolutionary War.)

Send us the completed form with one dollar. If you send more than one form at one time, your remittance should be for as many dollars as you send forms. Each order will be handled separately; so you may not receive all your photocopies at the same time. Be sure to enter your name and address on each form.

If we find a pension or bounty-land warrant application file which we believe relates to the person in whom you are interested, we will send photocopies of the documents we think most likely to be of interest to you. If no pension or bounty-land warrant application file is found, we will furnish copies of the military service record if one is available. If we do not find a file that appears to pertain to the person in whom you are interested, we will refund your money.

The military service records rarely contain family information. Furthermore, the record of a man's military service in any one organization is wholly separate from the record of his service in any other organization. We are ordinarily unable to establish the identity or nonidentity of men of the same name who served in different organizations. If you know that a man served in more than one organization and you desire copies of his military service record, a separate form and one dollar fee should be submitted for the service record in each organization.

Additional copies of this form will be sent to you on request.

EXPLANATION OF ORDER FOR PHOTOCOPIES

Please use the other side of this form to order photocopies of records relating to a person who served in the United States or Confederate Armed Forces. We can furnish photocopies relating to the following subjects:

- a. United States (not State) pensions claimed on the basis of service before World War I;
- b. United States (not State) bounty lands claimed on the basis of service before 1856;
- c. United States military service performed after 1774 and more than 75 years ago and Confederate military service. (NOTE - We do not have information relating to military service rendered before the Revolutionary War.)

Send us the completed form with one dollar. If you send more than one form at one time, your remittance should be for as many dollars as you send forms. Each order will be handled separately; so you may not receive all your photocopies at the same time. Be sure to enter your name and address on each form.

If we find a pension or bounty-land warrant application file which we believe relates to the person in whom you are interested, we will send photocopies of the documents we think most likely to be of interest to you. If no pension or bounty-land warrant application file is found, we will furnish copies of the military service record if one is available. If we do not find a file that appears to pertain to the person in whom you are interested, we will refund your money.

The military service records rarely contain family information. Furthermore, the record of a man's military service in any one organization is wholly separate from the record of his service in any other organization. We are ordinarily unable to establish the identity or nonidentity of men of the same name who served in different organizations. If you know that a man served in more than one organization and you desire copies of his military service record, a separate form and one dollar fee should be submitted for the service record in each organization.

EDWARD HENRY TAYLOR (1835-1907).

These few sheets give the genealogy of Edward Henry Taylor who was born in 1885 and died in 1907. There are a few items still to be filled in. If you find any mistakes, kindly let me know. I have also written the genealogy of Edward Taylor's eleven brothers and sisters. Hope to have it printed within a year.

The figures before the names show the number of the generations starting with Edward Taylor who came over from London and settled in New Jersey in the year 1692.

Vernon Taylor.
Long Beach, Calif.
Jan. 1930.

EDWARD HENRY TAYLOR(1835-1907).

EDWARD HENRY TAYLOR was born at Ballston, Saratoga County, New York, Feb. 20, 1835. Died in Nebraska, Aug. 22, 1907, from injuries received in a fall. He married Elisa O'Bryan in New York, Nov. 26, 1855, (she died June 26, 1901) and shortly after moved to Wisconsin, and four years later to Minnesota where they lived on a farm near the present site of Wells. Later they lived in Wells and in Delevan. As one of the early pioneers, he was closely identified with the early struggles of Minnesota, and took an active part in all of the state's conflict with the Indians. At the time of the Indian Massacre(1862), he was a member of the First Minn. Mounted Rangers. In 1864 he enlisted in the 147th, Ill. Infantry, and served with that regiment until the close of the war in 1865. In 1876 he moved to Nebraska, and helped build Fort Hartsuff, in Valley County. The next year he took a pre-emption claim on the North Loup River, three miles East of the present County Seat of Loup County, which place was named "Taylor" in his honor. Edward and Elisa Taylor had five children; *May Louisa, 1857; *Jay R., 1864; *Kitty Bell, 1867; *Luzerne Curtis, 1869; and *Edward Henry Jr., 1872. In Aug. 1902, Edward Taylor married Marie Cole.

TAYLOR FAMILIES

During the past 3 months, Linda Hanabarger and Dick Paul have carried out a research project on the TAYLOR families of Fayette County, with special attention to those in Seminary Township. Much work had been done when Virginia Hopkins of Alexandria, VA sent a packet of family data that took the family back another 3 generations and filled in many blanks!

The family begins with ISAAC TAYLOR born County Antrim and came to Virginia about 1731 when his name appears as an early land buyer in Borden's Great Tract. His wife was Isabella WILSON. They were Scotch Covenanters.

1. Andrew TAYLOR I b ca 1732 Rockbridge Co., Virginia (Rock Creek Settlement)
2. George TAYLOR, had a daughter Sarah and 10 sons - it is said all sons were in the Revolution.
3. Isaac TAYLOR died 1787, a surveyor, lived on the Nolachucky River, VA.
4. William TAYLOR
5. Lottice TAYLOR m James CAMPBELL. Isaac deeded land to all of his sons and then moved in with his daughter where he died in 1780-1781. Most of his remaining estate was left to Lottice and her daughter Elizabeth CAMPBELL.

ANDREW TAYLOR I born ca 1732 Rockbridge Co., VA d 1787 Washington Co., NC, now Carter Co., TN. Andrew's Will was dated May 11, 1787. He m 1) ca 1750 Elizabeth WILSON, his first cousin. They moved from Rockbridge Co. in 1778. He m 2) Feb. 1779, Augusta Co., VA, Ann WILSON, sister to Elizabeth.

Andrew served from Virginia under Col. BURRELEY at Albemarle Barracks and others. He was at the Watauga Settlements 1773-4 and 1777-8.

Children of Andrew and Elizabeth WILSON TAYLOR:

TAYLOR FAMILY

ANDREW TAYLOR FAMILY IN FAYETTE COUNTY

The TAYLOR family first appears in this area on the 1820 Census in DuBois Twp., Bond Co., IL. James TAYLOR was head of the family and among those in his household were 3 males 1-5; 1 male 6-10; 1 male 11-15; 2 males 16-20; 1 male 20-30. There were only 2 females in his household - 1 female 0-5 and one 15-20.

Fayette Co. was formed in 1821 and on the next Federal Census, the 1830 Fayette County Census - we have only one family by that name, that of Andrew Taylor.

By 1840 another family has moved in next to Andrew - that of T. TAYLOR - the oldest male in the household was born between 1770 and 1790 and the oldest female born between 1780-1790. In this census we have heads of families as T. TAYLOR, A. TAYLOR, born North Carolina, William TAYLOR, born Kentucky and James TAYLOR who appears to be the same James in the 1820 Bond Co. Census.

ANDREW TAYLOR III was born 1795 Carter Co., TN (In 1795 this was a part of North Carolina) d 13 Feb 1859 Fayette Co., IL m 1) Charlotte MATHENY she b 1799, North Carolina died 18 June 1857 bu Taylor Cem., m 2) 31 Mar 1854 Annis MATHENY COOK she b 1802 NC, the widow of John COOK.

Andrew's estate was filed in Fayette Co., widow Annis relinquished her right to administer the estate to Columbus C. Taylor and John Cook. A.J. Taylor was on their Bond.

A biographical sketch of son, Andrew J. in the History Of Fayette County, Illinois 1878 stated that the parents were buried at the family burial ground near the home place. Neither Andrew nor Charlotte have a headstone.

Note from Virginia HOPKINS: All these children are buried with their parents near the entrance of Taylor Cem. My mother who is a DAVIS descendant told her of a family in which the first several children died and were buried together in a row. Their death was caused by their mother's belief that a draft was unhealthy for them so they were kept in a deep trunk. Instead of keeping them alive, the situation apparently caused their death.

Alice Taylor Davis, fourth child of Sarah Dugan Taylor and Levi Jasper DeCalve Taylor, was born August 21, 1866, in Seminary township, Fayette County, Ill. She died on June 20, 1955, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Adolph Wehrle, in Bear Grove Township, at the age of 89.

She was married on July 16, 1883, to John William Davis, who died February 13, 1945. They were married 62 years and lived on the same farm in Seminary township during their entire married life. Two daughters, Mrs. Adolph Wehrle, of Bear Grove township, and Mrs. Gordon Bunge, of Downers Grove, Ill., survive. Seven children preceded her in death, Mrs. Anna Morris and Dr. George Carlin Davis, who grew to maturity; and five children who died in infancy: Lillian, Luther, Edith, Mildred and Ollie. She is survived by eleven grandchildren, sixteen great-grandchildren; one sister, Mrs. Alfred Hagy, of Sullivan, Ind., and many nieces and nephews.

Her grandfather, Andrew Taylor III, originally from Carter county, Tennessee, came to Illinois in 1831. The fact that Vandalia was the State Capital was doubtless a factor in choosing this region of the state. The Taylor family was not only a prominent family of Tennessee, but one of the most noted of the South; the family came from Rockbridge county, Virginia, to Tennessee at about the close of the Revolutionary War. Her great grandfather, Andrew Taylor II, served in the Revolutionary War as a spy, with the King's Mountain Men of North Carolina. Her great-great-grandfather, Andrew Taylor I, was also a soldier in the Revolution, having served with the Virginia forces. Her great-uncle, General Nathaniel Taylor, of Tennessee, served with Andrew Jackson, at the Battle of New Orleans, during the War of 1812.

Two of her second cousins served as governors of Tennessee, Robert Taylor from 1887 to 1889; and his brother, Alfred Taylor, from 1921 to 1925. Her uncle, Andrew Taylor IV, was active in Fayette county political life, having been supervisor of Seminary township in 1873; sheriff of Fayette County in 1877; and county supervisor in 1882. Her father, Levi Jasper DeCalve, served with the Union forces during the Civil War from 1862 to 1865, under Lt. William Carpenter, Company F.

Funeral services were held at Runnels Funeral Home in Mulberry Grove, Wednesday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. Burial was in the Taylor cemetery, the land for which was given by her father, one hundred years ago, in 1855.
