All information not held in brackets [] was actually copied on survey date. Information held in brackets [] was added to grave stone information.

Also note in the Albemarle Genealogical Society Newsletter of January 1999, page 4, Mr. Alton L. Waterfield, age 90, of Blue Ridge Summit, PA gave additional family information on the tombstones in the Aydlett Family Cemetery in Harbinger, Currituck County, NC. He stated that Fannie Tillett Aydolett, wife of Jacob Aydolett, married a Shaw after the death of Jacob and was not buried at the cemetery at Harbinger, but he did not know where she was buried. AGS is happy to report that her burial place has been found in Dare County.

HAVE YOU STARTED?

Please start writing your stories about families that have some connection to Currituck County for the new book we are planning to publish. Ask others to participate. Send the articles in as soon as you finish. We are accepting now. A deadline has not been set. When we get enough stories, we will be ready to publish. We will keep you informed through the newsletter. Don't put this off. If you wrote a story for the "Heritage of Currituck County", surely there is new material you have found, new dates to add, and you can write your story differently and add new facts of interest. If you did not write anything for the former book, now is the time to preserve your family information, do a real justice for your ancestors, and make your great-great-great-great grandchildren happy. Who knows what disasters can happen to your family papers, but if you record it in a book, one of them will surely surface 100 years from now. Think how happy you'd be today, had your ancestors had this opportunity to get a biographical sketch of their lives in a book, and you found a book with your great-great-great-great-grandparents written up! Now is the time to preserve what you have found out about them and later generations, and also the present generation. Everyone has something to write, and don't forget - people are interested in YOU.
