While some of the WHITE families in Monmouth County go right back to the original settlers of the region, several distinct lines of the WHITE name are represented in the area today. They are reflected by the approximately 275 WHITE housholds listed in the current Monmouth Area Phone Directory.

We've included a variety of family groups in this issue starting on the next page. We hope that more WHITE families will become interested.

Page 10 is a bonus so we can begin to appreciate how many connections are out there for the WHITE family name in Monmouth County.

Miscellaneous

If you are interested in getting quality copies of some of your more fragile papers like old Bibles or deeds, we have had very good results in the careful hands at Ahern's in Manasquan. This is NOT the usual 5 cents per copy stuff, but they are reasonable for the type of work they do. Oversize pictures and cemetery layouts they handle with ease. They will tell you ahead of time what they can do regarding your project and what it will cost. They are quite friendly.

If you live near Deal, try the copier service department in the SHOPRITE store on Route 66 near Seaview Mall. They also have color laser equipment.

For our Monmouth Settlers descendants: If you want to borrow a copy of the VHS video highlights of the Reunion. send $3.00 for postage to your editor. We ask you return it so others can view it. Some of our family members at a distance who could not attend, have enjoyed it cross country already.

The Bible Record Project got off to a great start. However, we still want to give each of you the opportunity to get your family records included. Let us know if you need help in copying them. We will be glad to see them added and so preserved in the growing files to be shared in the community.

ELEVEN GENERATIONS IN ONE KENTUCKY COUNTY

Prepared by Michael C. Watson, Harrodsburg, Ky

Few families may be able to state they have eleven generations who have resided in the same county, even with the formation of new counties and line changes, for a span of eleven generations! Here is one such Kentucky family.

Generation 1:

Stephen White was born circa 1728 in Virginia, though the exact location is in question. He married Agatha "Aggy" Bramlett, likely a daughter of William Bramlett of Bedford County, VA, but no documentary proof has presented itself to date.

Stephen and Agatha resided in Bedford County, VA during the early years of their marriage and had several children who will be listed later. During early May 1771 twenty-four individuals organized a Baptist congregation in Bedford County, about thirteen miles south of Bedford City, under the direction of Nathaniel Shrewsbury. The charter members included Stephen and Agatha White and William Bramlett [probably Junior, brother of Agatha] and wife.

Stephen provided patriotic service during the Revolution and also provided several sons and sons-in-law to the fight. He continued to reside in Bedford County until circa 1790 when he moved with his son, Thomas, to Kentucky. The 1791 tax list of Bourbon County, KY lists, among others of the clan, Stephen White. By 1794 they appear on the Fayette County tax lists and then to Green County by the end of the decade. When Adair County was created by the Legislature in 1801 and was officially consecrated in 1802, the White family found itself in the new county--Adair.

The Whites and extended family had settled in that part of present Adair County that constitutes the Tabor Community. Stephen, Thomas, Jesse, Stephen, Jr., and others took up land in the vicinity and the old White Family Cemetery is located on the land that once belonged to Thomas White, son of Stephen, and markers for Stephen and others of the early generations still stand—or lay—in the quiet rural setting. Stephen's marker gives his death date as 30 Oct 1830, aged 102 years.

Children of Stephen and Agatha White were as follows, but not necessarily in birth order as some dates are not definitely known:

- 1. James White, fought in the Revolution, remained in Bedford County, VA.
- 2. Sarah White, born 1757 in VA, died 1814 in Adair County, mar first John Field [Sr.] prior to 1777. John Field left a will in Bedford County dated and probated in 1778, in which he names his wife and two infant sons, Thomas and John, and his father-in-law. Sarah mar second circa 1780, traditionally in Bedford County, but no record has been found, to William Hurt [Sr.], son of Moses and Rutha Turner Hurt of Bedford County. With her second husband, who reared John Field, Jr. [Thomas Field evidently died at a

BLUEGRASS ROOTS . VOL 30 . NUMBER 2 . SUMMER 2003 . PAGE 50

ORANGE COUNTY CALIFORNIA GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY very young age as he is not mentioned again], Sarah came to Bourbon County and later to Green, now Adair County, when this country was a true wilderness. She and William had nine children, whose descendants populated much of Adair and Russell Counties. [After her death in 1814, William married second to Elizabeth MacMurray in Barren County, KY and had an additional six children, one of whom was Young Elisha Hurt, father of Judge Rollin T. Hurt, chronicler of this family and a jurist of considerable repute.]

- Tabitha "Tabby" White, married Robert Rowland in Bedford County 9 Aug 1790, and were in Adair as early as 1807. They had at least one son, Henry, likely others.
- 4. William White, born 1761-1766 in VA, died before June 1860 in Franklin or Adair County, KY. William was married at least three times and had several children. He owned land in Adair County as early as 1803, but seems to have lived in or near Franklin County and Frankfort much of the time he was in KY. He left numerous descendants.
- 5. Ambrose White, born 1753 in Bedford County, died circa 1839 in Franklin County. He first married Elizabeth --?—prior to 1776, likely in VA, and had three daughters: Mary "Polly", born 9 Sept 1776, mar Thomas Church in Woodford County in 1793; Elizabeth "Betty", died prior to Feb 1830, mar John Hampton in Franklin Co in 1808; and Charlotte, died prior to Feb 1824, mar Henderson Church of Franklin County. Ambrose White was one of the men captured by Indians-while on a hunting trip in the wilds of Kentucky. This happened just after he and another man had been send to Boonesboro to deliver gunpowder. After the mission was accomplished, they went on a hunt with others and several were captured. Ambrose was prisoner for over two years and when he made it home to Bedford County, his wife and parents did not recognize him, as he looked so much like his captors. He was a Revolutionary War pensioner who resided in Franklin County and died there.
- Jesse White, born 1760-70 in VA, died 1831-1836 Adair County, mar Frances "Frankey" White—"one of the other Whites"—a daughter of John White who also settled in Adair, came to Adair County and settled. They had six or seven children.
- 7. Thomas White, Sr., born 1763 Bedford County, died 20 Oct 1844 Adair County, married Elizabeth Jane Lusk in Bedford County in 1783, was a Revolutionary soldier and pensioner, led the family to Bourbon and then Green, now Adair County. He was usually known as "Captain" Thomas White and some have believed he was a Captain in the War, but he was a Captain of the Militia in Adair County. He had seven children.
- Stephen White, Jr., born after 1765, died circa 1780, probably in Montgomery County, IL as he was on a trip there to purchase land preparatory to a move there with his family. He married Theodocia "Dosha" White—of the "other Whites"—daughter of John White. He was on the 1800 Green County tax list. He had six children, some of whom did move to Montgomery County, IL and descendants can still be found in that county and neighboring Bond County.
- Susannah "Susan" White, born 1767 VA, died in August 1844, married James Calloway in Bedford County in 1784. James Calloway, Jr. was a Revolutionary pensioner, born 1756, died 1835, probably in Howard County, MO where he settled his family.

Generation 2:

Sarah White Field and John Field resided in Bedford County and may have been married there, but no record has been found. John died at a seemingly young age, with two children under age 5 or 6. Since he died young and left a will, it has been surmised he died as a result of injury or illness contracted in military service. This seems a possibility, as his brothers-in-law, the Whites, were certainly active in service as well. Several John Fields resided in the Bedford County area at this time and researchers have yet to determine which is which. After his death and the remarriage of Sarah to William Hurt, the family moved to KY. With small children and his wife, Hurt moved the family from Bourbon County to what is now Adair County when there were no roads to use. In the spring of 1794 he came with an ox drawn cart with all their belongings packed inside, escorted by a group of friends who literally cut a path for the cart into Adair.

Generation 3:

John Field, Jr., born September 1777 Bedford County, VA, died 15 December 1857 Adair County, married Martisha Stapp in Green County in 1801. She was a daughter of Joshua Stapp, Jr. and Hannah Durham, likely their last child as Hannah was getting quite along in years when Martisha was born in 1777.

John Field, Jr. came to what is now Adair County with his step-father, William Hurt, the man who reared him from about the age of three, to find land in 1793. Barely sixteen, Field was left behind with a trusted slave and his wife to guard the land claim until Hurt could return in the spring with the family. Stories were handed down about the harrowing winter, fear of Indians, and solitude of this particular winter, but spring came and so did the family. Some are still here!

John Field grew up in the gradually tamed wilderness of Kentucky. He prospered under the watchful eye of his step-father. When Adair County needed its first jailor, he was commissioned by the Governor, after being recommended by the Justices of the Peace. He was first postmaster of Columbia. He was an early merchant and owned a nail factory in Columbia. He built a fine home in Columbia in 1812, one in the Federal style, and one still standing proud today. He was prosperous enough to purchase furniture in Philadelphia and have it shipped to Louisville, then hauled overland to Columbia. It was in this house that John Marshall Clemens had his first law office. Clemens would later marry Jane Lampton, granddaughter of pioneer Colonel William Casey, and spend his first months living here. Later, after they had moved from Kentucky, the Clemens would have, among other children, Samuel Langhorne, better known to us as "Mark Twain". [And no, he was never in Adair County for a visit or otherwise!] He shipped flatboat loads of tobacco and other produce to New Orleans for many years. After being hit hard and losing much of his property in the catastrophic economic panic of 1819, John moved his family to a farm at Glensfork, remaining there, farming and amusing his grandchildren, until his death.

He and Martisha had seven children: Ann Eliza; Durham, died young; Robert Oliver, died fairly young; Dr. Samuel Brents, born 1804; William Buford, born c1807; John F., born c1808; and Dr. Elijah Creel, born 1814.

Generation 4:

William Buford Fields, born circa 1807 in Adair, died 1866-1870 in Adair, married first Sarah "Sallie" Powell, daughter of John and Sarah Kelso Powell, in 1841 in Adair. He married second to Mary "Polly" Watson, likely daughter of Stephen Watson, in Adair in 1850. William was a farmer, was regularly appointed tax assessor for Adair, and was an early school commissioner. He is remembered by many today for his thoughtfulness in taking the 1860 Adair County census—he filled in the full county and state of birth for those in his half of the county! After

BLUEGRASS ROOTS . VOL 30 . NUMBER 2 . SUMMER 2003 . PAGE 52

William's death, Mary remained in KY for some time, but later moved with some of her children to Wilson County, Kansas where she died and was buried.

William and Sarah had five children: John B., Silas Stapp, Martisha O., Harriett Anne, and William Buford, Jr. William and Mary had an additional seven children: Ann E., Sarah Buford, Robert Stephen, Samuel Brents, Emily J., James H., and Elijah Durham.

Generation 5:

Martisha O. Field, born 4 April 1844 in Adair, died 11 May 1875 in Adair, married Jonathan L. Watson [c1838-1915] in Adair in 1862. Jonathan was a son of Allen Watson who migrated to Adair from Johnston County, NC in the early 1830s. Martisha and Jonathan had four children: William Allen, Sarah Belle, Harriett Ella, and Finis D. Jonathan was a famer and cattle drover.

Generation 6:

William Allen Watson, born 25 January 1863 in Adair, died 25 January 1850 in Adair, married Araminta "Minnie" Bunch, daughter of Milton Bunch and Mary "Polly" Blankenship of Russell County, married in Russell County in 1886. Their children were: Milton, Ella, Lillie, Lela, and an infant not named. "Bill" Watson was a farmer.

Generation 7:

Milton Watson, born 11 Jan 1887 in Adair, died 15 Dec 1970 in Adair, married Mary Lee "Mollie" Reeder, daughter of Hezekiah Reeder and Nancy Josephine Piercey of Russell County, married in Russell County in 1909. Milton was a farmer. Their children were: Mae Gertrude, Minnie Lee, Josie Beatrice, Bessie, Cameron Allen, James Hugh, Carl, William Milton, and an infant not named.

Generation 8:

Carl Watson, born 5 Dec 1922 in Russell County, died 14 April 1975 in Adair County, married Ruby Cape, daughter of Woodie Alva Cape and Mattie Lee Morrison, in Russell County 1946. Carl was a farmer and builder. Their children: Larry Steven, Stanley Allen, and Michael Carl.

Generation 9:

Stanley Allen Watson married Gennie Lou Grant in Adair County 31 Dec 1968 and have one daughter, Melissa Renee "Lisa". Stan is a minister and farmer.

Generation 10:

Lisa Watson married Mitchell Burton in Russell County in 1988. They are the parents of two children:

Generation 11:

Kyle Evan Burton, born 1995, and Devon Lynn Burton, born 2000.

Eleven generations all lived in Adair County from its formation until today! Life spans cover a total of 375 years—from 1728 to 2003!

I encourage other families to submit similar genealogies for publication here!-Editor.

MILITARY GRAVE IN ALASKA

Thanks to Mrs. Polly Dixon, 9400 Doliver #23, Houston, TX 77063-1054, email: pollyd@ix.netcom.com; for the following: "About ten years ago, my husband and I were on a birdwatching tour to St. Paul, an island in the Pribilof Island group off the coast of Alaska. During our stay on the island, we saw a grave marker for a young U.S. Navy sailor. In June of last year [1999], we returned to St. Paul and this time we photgraphed the gravestone. The inscription reads: JAMES HEATH, Gunner's Mate, 1st Class, USS Concord, Born 1864, Died 1894.

The grave is on a hill on the northeast point of the island. It is enclosed within a low concrete fence. No other graves are near, although the grave is not far from the site of the original Russian Orthodox Church which was built in the 1800s.

We were unable to learn anything about the circumstances of the young sailor's death, but we know that several U.S. Navy ships patrolled the turbulent waters of the Bering Straits around the Pribilof Islands during the late 1890s. These naval vessals were in the area to protect the people who were engaged in harvesting fur seals. There was a high incidence of piracy of fur pelts in those days.

Heath could have become ill and died in the small clinic which was located at that time in the village of St. Paul. His death and buriel may have been written in the record book of the original church, which I believe is still kept in the present church.

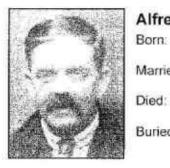

It would probably not be difficult to learn something from Naval archives about the U.S.S. Concord's presence offshore of St. Paul

Alfred Albert White - Titanic Survivor

By Jill Kathleen Kirby

Jill Kirby is a BIFHS–USA Board Member at Large. She wishes to dedicate this article to her father, William Harry Kirby, nephew of Alfred Albert White, who died on June 7th 2003 at the age of 91 years, and to her sister Anne Patricia McGowan Tiplady, née Kirby, who died on October 18th 2005. They were very interested in the research that she had been doing.

Alfred Albert White

Born: March 25th 1880 Southampton, Hampshire Married: September 29th 1902 Southampton, Hampshire Died: January 7th 1922 Age 41 years Buried: January 12th 1922 Southampton, Hampshire

When I was a child growing up in Southampton, Hampshire, England I recall my father William Harry Kirby¹ telling us of his Uncle Alf. "Uncle Alf, he survived the Titanic, did Uncle Alf" is about all he said. As a very small child, I would also visit a dear couple who lived in a pre-fab (like today's mobile homes) not far from us, in Sholing, Southampton — I remember them fondly as Aunty Doris and Uncle Jim, as my sisters and I would call them. They would give us a sixpenny piece when we visited. They in turn had two children named after them Doris and Jim Lister who would call my father "Uncle Bill". Only many years later did I know that Doris was my father's first cousin and the daughter of Alfred Albert White.

I visited Doris about ten years ago when she lived at Weston Shore near Southampton, her husband now gone and she in her 86th year. I was curious and asked what her father had told her about his Titanic experience; how disappointed I was when she shook her head and said nothing.

It was only last year (2005) when I finally discovered why so little was known about this Alfred White. He had died in 1922, at the age of 41, just ten years after the disaster that changed his life and the lives of countless others in Southampton. My father, the oldest of his nephews, was only 11 years old at the time of his uncle's death. Alfred's daughter was only a small child and had only vague memories of her father. Alfred White's widow, the former Florence Ada Watson, lived until 1965, but was long gone by the time I began my research. She died at the age of 90 and was buried on 15th April 1965 in The Old Cemetery at Southampton Common along with her husband, who had been buried on January 12th 1922. Alfred and his wife are together in Grave Number 141 246 in this cemetery.

Yes, I did have an opportunity to tell Prince Charles that my father was honoured that he named his two sons after him!

Over the past several years, I have succeeded in piecing together information about Alfred Albert White, who, but for his connection with the Titanic, would most likely have passed obscurely into history with barely a mention apart from appearing in records relating to my family.

Most recently I have obtained a copy of the photo you see at the beginning of this article. On August 18th 2006, I had but one hour to spend at the Southampton Archives (in Hampshire, England). The Titanic sailed from Southampton in 1912, and the Southampton Archives contains extensive records relating to the ill-fated voyage. Of particular interest to me was "The Central Index Register of Merchant Seamen 1918-1941", a card index containing over 1.25 million identity cards. There I found photographs of my never-beforeseen grandfather and his brother-in-law Alfred Albert White. From Alfred's photo, I have been able to identify him in other family photographs.

A number of surviving Titanic crew members who went on to serve on other merchant vessels from 1918 onwards have been identified in the CR10 series of identity cards held at the Archives.

Alfred's Life and Family

Alfred Albert White was born on March 25th 1880. His parents were Alfred Samuel White, a French Polisher, and Charlotte Harriet White (formerly Light). He was born at 17 Northam Street, Southampton and was the eldest of seven children. My grandmother Kate Ellen White was born on May 11th 1892, the second to youngest child, the youngest being Margaret Louise White, born January 11th 1896. I mention these last two children since these are the ones I knew personally. My grandmother Kate (Alfred's sister) died in Scotland at the age of 92 in 1985. Margaret married and moved to Vancouver, British Columbia, where two of her three sons still live.

The 1881 census lists Alfred A. White as being one year old and living with his parents at 13 York Square, Southampton in the Parish of St Mary's.

The 1891 census lists Alfred as being 11 years old and living with his parents at 33 Orchard Lane,^a Southampton, still in St Mary's Parish; there are now another four siblings, namely, Annie, Emily, Edwin and Henry.

In 1901 the family is still living at 33 Orchard Lane, Southampton; however Alfred, the oldest son, is not listed. I have, however, found an Alfred White, age 20 years, living as a boarder in Birmingham, Warwickshire; he lists Southampton as his birthplace.

On September 29th 1902 Alfred married a Florence Ada Watson (a widow, aged 26, who was know as Ada). Her father is listed as William Powell. They were married in St James Church, ² My father was born at 33 Orchard Lane, Southampton, in 1911. The home appears to have been in the White family for many years. It belonged to Charlotte Harriet White, Alfred's mother. Southampton. On the marriage certificate it says that Alfred is 24 years old (his actual age would have been 22 years). I know this marriage to be correct as Alfred's residence was 33 Orchard Lane. From information from Alfred's cousins who lived their lives in Hampshire I was told that Alfred and Florence had six children, Lottie, Florence, Doris (my Aunty Doris), Maud, Millie, and Alfred.

I know that Alfred White signed on to the Oceanic, another liner that was due to sail out of Southampton about the same time as the Titanic — on April 6th 1912. I have a copy of the crew list from this time.

In 1912 in Southampton there was a coal strike and the much anticipated sailing of the "Unsinkable Titanic" seemed doomed not to happen, so coal from other ships and, I am assuming, crew were transferred from the Oceanic to the Titanic to make sure that the much hyped up sailing would be able to go ahead on April 10th 1912 (the ship sank on April 15th). Alfred White appears in the book Titanic Names under The Crew List. He is listed simply as Alfred White — Greaser — Engineering Department — rescued in lifeboat 4 — having been pulled from the water.

Just recently I've learned that almost six years later Alfred survived the sinking of another ship during World War I. In Section IV (Southampton) of the National Roll of the Great War he is listed as a baker in the Merchant Service. About his service it says;

Already in the Merchant Service when war was declared, he served in the "Aragon" and various other vessels, and was engaged on hospital and transport duties throughout. He was in the "Aragon" when she was sunk off Alexandria (Egypt),³ but was picked up after being several hours on a raft. He was still at sea in 1920, and holds the Mercantile Marine War Medal and the General Service Medal.

Alfred lived only four years after surviving the sinking of the Aragon. In the Hampshire Advertiser dated January 14th 1922, under "Deaths" it reads simply:

WHITE — January 6th at Grove Inn, Grove Street, Alf, the dearly loved husband of Florence White aged 41.

The published information was incorrect, however. Alfred's death certificate states the date of his death as January 7th 1922, the place of death as the City and Midland Bank, High Street, Southampton, and his residence as 12 Grove Street. The cause of death was shown as Angina Pectoris and Gastritis. My father always told me that his Uncle Alf dropped dead in a bank while making a transaction across the counter, and now I know this to be true as the certificate states the "when and where" he died. After surviving the Titanic and the Aragon, he dropped dead in a bank at the young age of 41.

Alfred's Titanic Experience

Alfred White is mentioned in a number of accounts about the Titanic, but is missed from many significant books and articles that have been written. I believe the reason for this is his untimely death just ten years after the sinking of the Titanic. It also seems that talking about the Titanic became taboo, as it was just too unbearable and painful for the families and associates of the numerous lives that were lost from my hometown of Southampton. Well over five hundred souls lost their lives, but that is another story in itself.

One book that I definitely felt should have included him is Titanic Voices. published by Southampton City Council in 1994, but his hometown missed including him in this classic book of memories from the fateful voyage. Many books lack complete information, and others include contradictory statements. There are two books of which I am aware that claim to document White's experiences: A Night to Remember, by Walter Lord, first published in 1955,4 and The Sinking of the Titanic - Eyewitness Accounts, a compilation of contemporary newspaper reports edited by Jav Henry Mowbray and originally published in 1912.5

The latter book includes information that is supposedly derived from an interview with Alfred White, but it includes information that could not have come from him, and it appears that either Mowbray, or the reports he was using, conflated information given by several survivors.⁶ The book tells a coherent story, but from other information it is clear that some of the information is either incorrect or wrongly attributed. The book related first that, standing on the whale deck in the bow, White had seen first hand the iceberg that had struck the ship, describing it as "a black berg", a lump of black ice that could not be seen at night. Because he had been one of those who had lowered a lantern over the side to examine the damage, he related that seams below the waterline had been opened, but he reported that it was not considered serious, and that he had returned to his station in the light engine room where they were making coffee with no thought of danger. An hour later, however, things appeared to be more serious as the ship was "far down by the bow", and he heard the chief engineer in the light engine room tell a subordinate that the No. 6 bulkhead had given way. He was then sent up to see how things were going. He made his way up through the dummy funnel (the fourth smokestack) to the bridge deck and found that, despite the fact that everyone in the engine room remained at his post, all the lifeboats had already left the ship. He is reported as saving that he had heard the Captain say, "Well boys, I guess it's everyman for himself now", and that he had then slipped down some loose boat falls into the water before being picked up by a nearby boat crewed by five firemen (none of them officers) that contained 49 women and 16 children.

Alfred White is said to have watched the ship go down from this lifeboat, and was therefore able to describe it in detail. The book claims that not long after he had gone over the side, about two o'clock, White was sitting in the boat about a mile away when an explosion was heard. He did not know what the explosion was, but immediately afterwards the lights on the ship went out — not all at once, but as the ship slowly settled, the rows slowly winked out one after the other as they dipped below the surface. He reported that some

One good thing about the White name, it is almost impossible to misspell. But from there on in our work is cut out for us. How did there get to be so many Whites, so early in the game? Whatever the reasons, the name is ours and we're proud of it.

My White family, on my dad's side, was first found in Ohio in an 1850 census. She was my great-great grandmother Mary Fulton White. She was 88 at that time and living with my great grandfather Burningham Clark Cochran and his wife Margaret Almira (Pepper) whose mother Catherine was my Mary White's daughter. (Only a genealogy nut could follow that last sentence!)

Mary was born in Maryland in 1761. She was of Scotch-Irish descent, but I have not found her parents or siblings. She married in 1793, Frederick City (and county) Maryland, Joseph White. Joseph of Scotch descent, settled in Maryland before 1775 but I have no parents or siblings or earlier information on him. He did serve in the Revolutionary War as a private for three years. He was in the llth Virginia Regiment commanded by Col. Daniel Morgan.

Mary and Joseph had four children including Joseph White who became a U.S. Senator from Ohio. Most of the information I have on my White's is from public records of Senator White, and the good old pension records of Mary's.

Then on my mother's side of the family, "family tradition" has it we descend from the Mayflower's famous White Family-but I haven't found it yet!

There seems to be a great deal of interest in the Mayflower line, and in a later edition we'll try to follow through on that pedigree and/or family chart.

In the meantime, it is our hope to help all the White searchers follow through on his and her work. This publication is dedicated to that one purpose. I hope all of you will share your research with us, and certainly let us know what you would like to see here.

We need your queries, pedigrees and family charts; Bible records, biographies, obituaries--anything and all things relating to The Family. And through THE WHITE TREE you'll be talking to a lot of other folks who are very interested in the very same subject.

And above all, keep us posted on your ideas of what should and should not be in THE WHITE TREE. It's your publication, so enjoy.

OBITUARY OF MRS. MARY PRICE

Richmond Enquirer, March 18, 1806.

"Departed this life suddenly, a few days since, at her seat near Richmond, Mrs. Mary Price, relict of Capt. John Price, dec'd, in the 86th year of her age.

This revered sage, had lived to see the fourth generation descendant from herself, and upon an accurate calculation found to amount to 181 in number.

She possessed in a very eminent degree all the amiable and Christian virtues--as a wife and mother; always tender and affectionate; a friend, most sincere; a mistress, just and kind.

She was a woman of fine understanding, which she retained till within a few hours before she expired; which was a source of many solid enjoyments to her friends.

Christianity which she had for many years been attached to and benevolence, were the leading features in her character. The poor of her neighborhood as well as her friends and relations, will feel sensibly her loss.

> "Oh what a sad delusion here So frail, so vain are human things, To every bliss succeeds a tear Our frailest hopes, but sorrow bring."

(Mrs. Price was a daughter of Col. White, of Hanover County. She lived at "The Grove", Henrico County.)

AMERICA IN 1800

The census of 1800 shows a healthy 35 percent increase in the population, to about 5,300,000, of whom more than 1,000,000 are Negroes (nine-tenths of these enslaved). Virginia, with 900,000 inhabitants, retains first place despite the loss of Kentucky. Within a narrow range just above or below 600,000 each are Pennsylvania, New York, and Massachusetts; North Carolina slips to fifth rank with the loss of Tennessee. Newcomers to statehood are, of course, Vermont, Kentucky, and Tennessee.

On 24 Apr 1800 the Library of Congress is established, using a fund of $5,000, and a donation by Jefferson of his entire private library.

On 7 May, a bill is passed in Congress to divide the nine counties of the Northwest Territory into two parts divided by a line running due north from the Kentucky River confluence with the Ohio River. The sparsely populated west part becomes the Territory of Indiana, with its capital at Vincennes and William Henry Harrison as governor. The east part, the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio (usually also called the Northwest Territory), has Chillicothe as its capital.

On 17 Nov Congress opens its first session in the new capital City of Washington.

On 3 Dec, in the Presidential election, the Federalists run John Adams and Charles C. Pinckney against Republicans Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr.

NOTE:

We will be using a fairly standardized numbering system for our Pedigree Charts. If not standardized, it is at least used a great deal-and seems to work.

Number one on the chart can be anybody, male or female, from there on in even numbers will represent men, odd numbers for women. A man's even number plus one will always be his wife.

To determine the father of any person on the chart, simply double the number of that person. For instance: number three on a chart is Mary White. By doubling her number to six you find her father. Add one to that number and you have Mary's mother as number seven.

MARY WHITE-MRS. ROBERT MORRIS.

ADDRESS DELIVERED BY REQUEST, AT SOPHIA'S DAIRY, HARFORD CO., MARTLAND, JUNE 7TH, 1877, ON THE OCCASION OF THE REINTERMENT I OF THE REMAINS OF COLONEL THOMAS WHITE, BEFORE A REUNION OF HIS DESCENDANTS-HALLS.

WHITES, MORRISES.

BY CHABLES HENRY HART.

I have been invited here to-day to perform not an easy task. The life of a woman whose chief distinction is the prominence sther husband, is not likely to be possessed of characteristics and events, apart from him, of sufficient moment and interest to be preserved alive for half a century after her decease, and bear repeating at the end of that time. And yet this is a crateful task; for by performing it I hope to gratify that most laudable desire of man's heart, to know something of his progenitors, that, by imitating their virtues and transmitting the same to his successors, he may help to improve and beneat the human race. With this end and aim in view, I will mate all I know of Mrs. Robert Morris-Mary, youngest child of Thomas and Esther [Heulings] White. She was born in the city of Philadelphia on the 13th day of April, 1749, and on the 21st of May was baptized at Christ Church. Wher maidenhood, no incidents, even by tradition, are preserved, save in the opening verse of Colonel Shippen's " Lines written in an Assembly Room," to commemorate the beauty and charms of Philadelphia's belles, where he says :---

> "In lovely White's most pleasing form, What various graces meet!

How blest with every striking charm I How languishingly sweet !"

She must, however, have been carefully trained and educated mall womanly accomplishments to have enabled her to fill, with so much case, and dignity, and grace, the position in which she was afterwards placed.

On the second of March, 1769, before she was twenty, she was united in marriage by the Reverend Richard Peters, to Robert Morris, the future financier of the American Revolution. Mr. Morris was a native of Great Britain, having been born in Liverpool on the 31st of January, 1734. His father. also Robert Morris, came to this country and settled at Oxford, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, where he died July 12th, 1750, when his son was in his seventeenth year. Robert came to Philadelphia, and entered the counting-house of Mr. Charles Willing, the first merchant of his day; and in 1754, at the age of twenty, formed a copartnership with his son, Thomas Willing, which lasted a period of thirty-nine years, and the firm of Willing & Morris became the best known and largest importing house in the colonies. Early taking an active interest in the welfare of the colonies, Mr. Morris was appointed by the Assembly of Pennsylvania one of the delegates to the second Congress, and entered upon a public career so well known as to render a relation of its details on this occasion unnecessary.

Towards the close of the year 1776, when the British approached Philadelphia, and Congress retired to Baltimore, Mr. Morris remained in the city as one of the committee intrusted with plenary power to perform all public acts. Mrs. Morris followed the Congress, and took up her abode at this very house where we are now assembled, and where her mother and father were visiting her step-sister, Mrs. Hall, and here she remained until the early part of the following March. On the 20th of December she writes to Mr. Morris: "I long to give you an account of the many difficulty's and uneasyness we have experienced in this journey. Indeed, my spirits were very unable to the task after that greatest conflict flying from home; the sufferings of our poor little Tom distressed us all, and without the affectionate assistance of Mr. Hall and the skilfulness of Dr. Cole, whose services I shall never forget, I don't know what might have been the consequence, as it was a boil of an uncommon nature, and required the surgeon's hand. We had reason to apprehend, too, we should lose our goods; the many circumstances of this affair I must leave till I see you, as neither my patience nor paper will hold out. Only that Mr. Hall was obliged, when in a few miles of his house, to return to Christiana and retake his ressel, which he accomplished by the assistance of Mr. Hancock ; but after all the dangers, I've the pleasure to inform you we are safely housed in this hospitable mansion." In another part of the letter she writes: "I thought I was prepared for every misfortune; for, as you observe, of late we have little else. Yet when Lee is taken prisoner, who is proof against those feelings his loss must occasion, and add to that the triumph of our enemy's and the mortification his consibility must suffer. Mr. Hall has heard it contradicted at Bush, and that Mr. Hancock thinks from the circumstance it's a false report. God send it may be so, but I've observed pieces of bad news are seldom contradicted."

On the 30th of the same month, upon receipt of the news of the victory at Trenton, she writes to Mr. Morris: "We had been for many days impatiently wishing for a letter from you, as the news we hear from any other quarter is not to be depended on; but when the welcomed one arrived, which brought those glad tidings, it more than compensated tor what our late unfortunate circumstances prepared our minds to expect, which was nothing more than our Army's being on the defensive, and fearing least their numbers were not even equal to that, but retreat as usual ; but I hope, indeed, the tide is turned, and that our great Washington will have the success his virtues deserve, and rout that impious army who, from no other principle but that of enslaving this once happy country, have prosecuted this Cruell War. My father was greatly, the' agreeably, affected at such good news, and I was the happy means of making many joyfull hearts, as we had many guests added to our large Family to celebrate Christmas, Mr. Hall is surprised he has not received orders to March with his Battalion, but only to hold himself in readiness." She again writes to him on the 15th of January, after hearing of the Battle at Princeton: "I have received five of your letters since my last, besides Mr. Hall's, the contents of which allmost petrified us ;-happy had we been had the petrifaction reached our hearts, and made them proof against our feelings in this day of Triall. I suppressed mine all in my power, as I wish to make myself as agreeable as possible to this family, and as they had invited a party of young folks to a Twelfth Cake, I tryed to be cheerful; how could I be really so when hourly in expectation of hearing the determination of so important a Battle, and when the express arrived and pronounced Washington victorious, would you believe it, your Molly could not join in the general rejoicing? No! nor never can at a victory so dearly bought." In her last letter to him before her return, written on the journey, she writes: "We are all well in health, and in want only of your Dear Company to be as happy as the state of our country will admit off."

On March 15th, 1777, she writes to her "mamma" from Philadelphia, addressed "To Mrs. White, at Aquila Hall's, Esqr., near Bush Town, Maryland."-" Last Wednesday noon I had the pleasure to arrive safe in dear Philadelphia, after a much pleasanter journey than I expected from our setting off, and it made me very happy to find myself at home after so long an absence, with the terrible apprehensions we fled with of never seeing it again." In the same letter she writes: "I suppose Jemmy Hall has told you how everybody exclaims at my thinness; several of my acquaintances did not know me till they had time to recollect, and then declared there was very little traces of my former self." She concludes with: "Duty to my father, and love to sister and Mr. Hall and all the Hospitable Family, whose kindness to me and my exiled family I shall never forget." In a postscript she adds: " Billy has been told that the Congress appoint'd him their Chaplain when in Baltimore, but has not yet heard it from them, and begs it may not be mentioned." The "Billy," here referred to was none other than her brother, the future eminent prelate and father of the Protestant Episcopal Church in this country, Bishop White. In a letter on April 1st, she writes: "Mr. Haucock intends resigning his seat in Congress, and going home; it is imagined he will be appointed Governor of Boston. They meant to have complimented Mr. Morris with the Presidentship, but he told the gentlemen who informed him of it he could not serve, as it would interfere entirely with his private business, and so begged it might be dropped. . . . Don't you feel quite important? I assure you I do, and begin to be reconciled to Independence."

Mrs. Morris had not been at home a month before fears of the approach of Howe necessitated preparations, at least, for seeking safer refuge. She writes to her mother on the 14th of April: "We are preparing for another flight in packing up our furniture and removing them to a new purchase Mr. Morris has made ten miles from Lancaster, no other than the famons House that belonged to Stedman and Steigel at the Iron Works, where, you know, I spent six weeks; so am perfeetly well acquainted with the goodness of the House and situation. The reason Mr. Morris made this purchase, he looks upon the other not secure if they come by water. I think myself very lucky in having this Asylum, it being but 8 miles, fine road, from Laneaster, were I expect Mr. Morris will be if he quits this, besides many of my friends and acquaintances. So I now solicit the pleasure of your company at this once famous place, Instead of Mennet, where, perhaps, we may yet trace some vestages of the late owner's folly, and may prove a useful lesson to us his successors." A fortnight later she writes: "I am yet on dear Philadelphia ground, but expect soon to inhabit the Hills, where we shall remain, if possible, in the enjoyment of all that's beautiful to the cye and grateful to the taste; for, as if to add to our mortification, are we obliged to leave it; nature never appeared there so lovely, nor promised such a profusion of her gifts. We intend sending off our best furniture to Lancaster, with all the linen we can spare, and stores of all kind, that our flight may be attended with as few incumbrances as possible."

"The Hills" spoken of by Mrs. Morris in this last letter, with so much fervor and admiration, was her summer residence which Mr. Morris had purchased in 1770, and laid out in a style and manner unknown in this country at that day.

A HAS BEERE

After it passed out of his hands, it was called Lemon Hill. and now forms that part of Fairmount Park, situate on the east side of the Schuylkill river south of the Girard Avenue Bridge, and north of the old water-works. Here he erected the large house still standing on the knoll of the hill overlooking the boat houses of the Schuylkill Navy, together with extensive hot-houses where he raised all kinds of tropical fruit, a fish-pond, and an ice-house. The "hot-houses" and the "ice-house" were the first introduced into the colonies. The "famous house" near Lancaster, which Mr. Morris bought, was none other than that built by the eccentric and doubtful Baron Henry William Steigel, who came to America about 1757, from Manheim, in Germany, and the following year purchased from Charles and Alexander Stedman, of Philadelphia, a portion of a large tract in Lancaster County, where he laid out a town which he called from his native city. Manheim. Here he built an iron furnace and extensive glass works, and erected the magnificent mansion which Mrs. Morris mentions as her proposed refuge from the enemy should they enter Philadelphia. "The Castle," as it was called, was very large, and contained a chapel, where the "Baron" held daily service. The wainscotings, mantel-pieces, and cornices are described as having been very massive and rich, while the arras-tapestry which covered the walls of the parlor, and the porcelain tiles encircling the fire-place, were of the finest order, specimens of each of which have been preserved to the present time. To this "famous house," then, Mr. and Mrs. Morris repaired, when in September, 1777, the near approach of the British army obliged Congress to remove from Philadelphia, first to Lancaster, and afterward to York as a more convenient place, and here they remained until after the evacuation of the city by Sir Henry Clinton and his troops early in the summer of 1778.

On the second of July, 1778, Congress reassembled in Philadelphia. At this period Benedict Arnold had command in the city. Mrs. Morris, writing to her mother in November, says: "I know of no news, unless to tell you that we are very gay is such. We have a great many balls and entertainments, and soon the Assemblys will begin. Tell Mr. Hall even our military gentlemen here are too liberal to make any distinctions between Whig and Tory ladyes—if they make any, it's in favor of the latter, such, strange as it may seem, is the way those things are conducted at present in this city. It originates at Head-quarters, and that I may make some apology for such strange conduct, I must tell you that Cupid has given our little General a more mortal wound than all the host of Britons could, unless his present conduct can expiate for his past—Miss Peggy Shippen is the fair one." This lady, I need hardly say, became Mrs. Benedict Arnold, and suffered with her husband all the ignominy his subsequent actions heaped upon his wretched head.

In the month of September, 1779, Mrs. Morris was called upon to mourn the loss of her father,—Col. Thomas White, who died on the twenty-ninth instant, and to do reverence to whose memory we are assembled here to-day. The event was communicated to her in a letter⁴ enclosed in the following from her brother to Mr. Morris:—

MY DEAR SIR—The event wh. I prepared you to expect in my letter of this morning took place at 8 o'clock this evening. My dear Father's stupor returned at 4, and when he expired it was without ye least pain. The enclosed you will deliver whenever you think proper. You know your presence would be a consolation to us; but should you have leisure, there will hardly be time for you to pay your respects to his retmains. They talk of Saturday.

I am, Dear Sir,

Your affectionate Friend and Brother,

W. WHITE.

WEDNEBDAY EVENING, 10 o'clock.

Three weeks later her mother wrote to her :---

Mr DEAR CHILD-Yr. letter was doubly welcome, as it is a long time since I had one from you, and my much altered circulastances makes the filial notice of my children more acceptable to me than ever, but you don't tell whether yr. little fellows are come from Frederick. I think you said last summer they were to come home in October. I should be very sorry to miss seeing them, as it is not likely I shall go up so soon as was expected, for Tommy Hall will not be ready. It seems repugnant to ye laws of nature for me to seek a home out of Philadelphia, and yet it is natural for me to enquire how I shall be able to live there, the necessaries of life here are exorbitant, and with you we are told they are much higher, the two articles of house rent and firing would be saved here, which is a great matter; but there is a providence who governs the world, and to be told we may have a reliance on it, is so great a privilege that nothing but its being a Duty, could cause mankind to revolt from it.

I did not think that the late great event, as it was so long expected, would have affected my spirits so much as it has done. I don't know whether it is most wise or foolish to wish you may never experience the same trial, as it is the general lot to one to be the survivor. I would not have anybody see the above, as it may cause a laugh at what was wrote by one in tears. I was afraid some time ago yr. sister would not long survive Mr. Hall, but she seems now out of danger, tho' in a bad state of health. May you have all the blessings this world can bestow, and when it has an end ten thousand times ten thousand more than it is capable of giving, is the prayer

Of your affectionate,

E. WHITE.

23 October, 1779.

Give my love to Mr. Morris, yr. brother, and Polly White.

Early in the year 1781, Congress became sensible of the necessity of erecting the several departments of the government, similar to those which now exist, in order to give greater strength and efficiency to their executive authority, and Robert Morris was placed at the head of that of finance, with the title of Superintendent; which position he filled until the first of November, 1784, when he resigned. Mrs. Jay, on hearing of the appointment, wrote to Mrs. Morris from Spain: "No circumstance of a public nature since my absence from America has given me greater satisfaction than Mr. Morris's acceptance of that important office which he at present holds; nor would you, my dear madam, even regret being so frequently obliged to dispense with his company, if you could be witness to the universal satisfaction it has diffused among the friends of our country, but w'd (were you as malicious as myself) even enjoy the confusion of our enemies upon the occasion. Besides the public utility which must arise from the measure, I have a peculiar pleasure, which results from the more frequent mention of the person, from whose abilities and integrity so much is expected, in terms the most grateful to friendship. Your fears for Mr. Morris's health are, I own, too well founded, and I think a little address to draw him into the country, at least of evenings, would be patriotic."

This is not the place to depict the arduous duties which this appointment imposed, but the wisdom of the choice was amply justified by the result; for it is very certain that no other individual in the country combined so comprehensive a knowledge of the subject with which he had to grapple, with that firmness and decision of character and keen sense of honor, which at once attract universal confidence. In conwating to accept the office, Mr. Morris made it a condition that he should have the power to appoint and remove at his pleasure all subordinates connected in any way with his department, and it is a strking evidence of the respect in which his personal qualities were held, that these terms were readily complied with. No one requires to be informed of the effect of his efforts in restoring the public credit,-no person could have accomplished more than he did ; the only real cause of wonder is, that with means so limited-in fact without any reblic means at all-he could have done so much ; but he put his shoulder to the wheel, and the much needed end was gained.

The prominence which this appointment gave to Mr. Morris, his wealth, ability, and social position, made his home the centre of all the amenity and civility of the day, and it is as the hostess presiding over this establishment that we have some of the most pleasing pictures of his wife.

Vol. 11.-12

After the alliance with France, this country was visited by many Frenchmen of distinction, diplomats, officers, and citizens, and all of them brought letters of introduction to Mr. Morris, who was esteemed the representative man of the citr. From many of these foreigners we have published accounts of their travels, and from them gain vivid pictures of society in Philadelphia and other cities. There were Le Marquis de Chastellux, L'Abbé Robin, Citizen Mazzei, Le Prince de Broglie, Le Chevalier de la Luzerne, and many others. The first of these, who was here in 1780, in speaking of Mr. Morris says: "Mr. Morris is a large man, very simple in his manners, but his mind is subtle and acute, his head perfectly well organized, and he is as well versed in public affairs as in his own. Ilis house is handsome, resembling perfectly the houses in London. He lives there without ostentation, but not without expense, for he spares nothing which can contribute to his happiness and that of Mrs. Morris, to whom he is much attached." In another place, in describing an entertainment at the Chevalier de la Luzerne's, he says: "On passing into the dining-room, the Chevalier de la Luzerne presented his hand to Mrs. Morris, and gave her the precedence, an honor pretty generally bestowed on her."

The second second

The Prince de Broglie, whose narrative was procured recently in France by the late Mr. Thomas Balch, describes a visit he made to Mrs. Morris in 1782, with considerable minuteness. " M. de la Luzerne conducted me to the house of Mrs. Morris to take tea. She is the wife of the Comptroller General of the United States. The house is simple but well furnished and very neat. The doors and tables are of a saperb mahogany, and beautifully polished. The locks and hinges in brass were curiously bright. The porcelain curs were arranged with great precision. The mistress of the house had an agreeable expression, and was dressed altogether in white; in fact, everything appeared charming to me. I partook of most excellent tea, and I should be even new drinking it, I believe, if the Ambassador had not charitably notified me at the twelfth cup that I must put my sport across it when I wished to finish with this sort of warm water. He said to me: it is almost as ill bred to refuse a cup of ten when it is offered to you, as it would be for the mistress of the house to propose a fresh one when the ceremony of the spoon has notified her that we us longer wish to partake of it."

The Chevalier de la Luzerne spoken of in each of these narratives, who was the Ambassador from France, was on terms of most familiar intercourse with the family of Mr. Morris. I have before me an evidence of this in an invitation to Mr. and Mrs. Morris and Miss Livingston, "together with the young family of Mrs. Morris," to dine at Shoemaker's Place on the following Saturday afternoon; and it was from this nobleman that Mr. Morris, on his personal credit, obtained the twenty thousand pounds in specie which he sent to Washington, and enabled him to compel the capitulation of Cornwallis at Yorktown. The Miss Livingston mentioned in the invitation was Catharine, daughter of Governor William Livingston, of New Jersey, and younger sister of the beautiful Sarah Van Brugh Livingston, who became the wife of John Jay. She afterwards married Matthew Ridley, an Englishman residing in Baltimore, a particular friend of Mr. Morris, and under whose roof she most probably met him, as she made one of the Morris family for several years, during the alsonce of her sister in Europe, when Mr. Jay represented the Confederation, first as Minister to Spain, and subsequently in Paris as one of the Commissioners to arrange the definitive truty of peace. Mrs. Jay, writing to Mrs. Morris from Madrid, under date of Sept. 1, 1780, says: "When I left Philadelphia I did not also leave the remembrance of the repeated instances of friendship which has endeared you to toe; but had I been less sensible of them, surely your recent kindness to my dear Kitty could not fail of awakening my pratitude. Accept, my dear Mr. and Mrs. Morris, of my sinsete thanks for your kindness to my sister; believe me, withing has given me more pleasure than the happiness she has enjoyed under your hospitable roof."

These heartfelt words of Mrs. Jay were doubtless called inth by the letter she had received from her sister written the previous July, in which she says: "In our last distresses from the invasion of the British troops, Mr. and Mrs. Morris sent for me to come and live with them. It was exceedingly friendly; and it is certainly no small alleviation to our infelicities to have such friends as can feel for us, and by their kind endcavors soothe our troubled bosoms to peace and tranquillity. They have at present a delightful situation---Springsberry. Mr. Morris has enlarged the buildings, and converted the green-house into a dining-room, which far exceeds their expectations in beauty and convenience."

The last day of summer, 1781, was a gala day in Philadelphia. The military were out and the whole city astir. General Washington was coming, and with him the Count de Rochambeau and other foreign and American officers of consideration, who were all on their way to join Lafayette near Yorktown, hoping, with the aid of De Grasse, who was hourly expected with his fleet, to capture Cornwallis and his army. At mid-day the general reached the suburbs, where he was met by a large number of people and escorted to the City Tavern, where he held an impromptu reception. From thence he went to the residence of Mr. Morris, who entertained the eminent officers and their staffs, together with many citizens, at dinner. In the evening the city was illuminated in honor of the distinguished visitors. A recent writer has said: "Justly fell to Robert Morris the honor of entertaining General Washington on this occasion; for it was to him the general owed the possibility of this sudden transfer of the army to Virginia. . . . Next to Washington the country owes the triumph at Yorktown to Robert Morris."

In the fall of this same year Mr. Morris sent his two elder sons, Robert and Thomas, aged respectively twelve and ten years, to Europe, under the care of Mr. Mathew Ridley, before mentioned, for the purpose of being educated. They took with them a letter from their father to Dr. Franklin at Paris, in which Mr. Morris gives his reason for sending them to be that "the interruption given to the progress of learning, the distresses which the several seminaries in this country have undergone the various lucrative employments to which masters and tutors have been invited in the progress of the present war, are circumstances which operate powerfully to the disadvantage of the present race of American youth, and which have induced me to take the determination of educating my two eldest sons, Robert and Thomas, in Europe." They carried with them also a letter from Mrs. Sarah Bache, Dr. Franklin's only daughter, to her son Benjamin Franklin Bache, who was being educated abroad, at the tender age of twelve, under his grandfather's care. In it she says: "My dear Benny :--- This letter will be handed to you by the Master Morris's, who, you may remember, came to take leave of you the morning you left us. I am particularly happy in their going to Geneva, as I am sure it will give you great pleasure to see two old Friends, and have them go to the same school with you. Their Father and yours have the strongest Friendship for each other. I hope it will be the same with their sons, and that you will let them have a share in your heart with [unintelligible]. You will, I make no doubt, do everything in your power, to make Geneva agreeable to them; they are very clever boys, and will be strangers there compared with you."

They were placed to school in Geneva, where they remained five years, making during the vacations brief visits in the vicinity. One of these visits was to Paris the next year, which they passed with their mother's friend, Mrs. Jay, who wrote: "Your little sons, by passing their holiday with me, made me very happy. Robert so exceedingly resembles Mr. Morris, that I feel for him a respect mingled with my love; tho' at the same time I regret his distance from his father's example and counsel. Tommy (who is likewise a fine boy) told me that his last letters mentioned Hetty's and Maria's illness. I hope they are now quite recovered, as well as my dear Kitty. Will you embrace them for me?"

In the summer of 1786, under the tutelage of M. de Basseville, they went to Germany, and entered the University of Leipsic, where they remained nearly two years, returning home in the spring of 1788. The letters written during their science, to them and to their tutor, by their father, are not only fraught with good parental advice, but indicate and lay down a course and system of study, showing mature consideration, and a knowledge of the subject truly remarkable.

On the 25th of May, 1787, there met in Philadelphia the memorable Convention called together to frame a Constitution for the United States. To this body Mr. Morris, who had eleven years before affixed his bold signature to the Declaration of Independence, was a delegate, and it was upon his motion that George Washington was unanimously chosen to preside over its deliberations. To his sons at Leipsic Mr. Morris wrote June 25: "General Washington is now our guest, having taken up his abode at my house during the time he is to remain in this city. He is President of a convention of Delegates from the Thirteen States of America, who have met here for the purpose of revising, amending, and altering the Federal Government. There are gentlemen of great abilities employed in this Convention, many of whom were in the first Congress, and several that were concerned in forming the Articles of Confederation now about to be altered and amended. You, my children, ought to pray for a successful issue to their labours, as the result is to be a form of Government under which you are to live, and in the administration of which you may hereafter probably have a share, provided you qualify yourselves by application to your studies. The laws of nations, a knowledge of the Germanic System, and the constitutions of the several governments in Europe, and an intimate acquaintance with antient and modern history, are essentially necessary to entitle you to participate in the honor of serving a Free People in the administration of their Government."

Soon after the adjournment of the Convention, Mr. Morris visited Virginia in company with Mr. Gouverneur Morris, ou matters of private business, where he was absent more than six months. The letters which passed between Mr. and Mr. Morris during this period have fortunately been preserved, and show a cultivation and ease in epistolary composition now comparatively unknown. His first letter, written from Baltimore on his journey southward, contains a reference of considerable interest on this occasion. He writes: "We arrived here last night all well, after a pleasant journey without any accident, and with fine weather and good roads. . . . I saw J. Hall at Havre de Grace. Charlotte Hall was at his house, but being dark and our journey having fatigued, we did not go thither. They were all very well, and next mornning we visited the mansion of Mr. Hall; unluckily he had rone off (half an hour before we arrived) to a Plantation of his on the other side of Bush River. We were very graciously, I may say affectionately, received by three charming young ladies, Miss Molly, Patty, and Sophia. They gave us good breakfast and a hearty welcome, inquired particularly after you, and I pressed Molly to go up immediately with one of her sisters, and pass the winter with you, assuring them that was your wish, and that you would be exceedingly glad of their company. I flatter myself you will have them for companions for this winter, and I need not tell you how much I bid them welcome on my part. If Molly Hall does go up, I desire that you will engage Mr. Reinagle to teach her on the Harpsichord, and that you pay the expense; do this in the most delicate manner, such as I am sure your readness of heart will dictate."

During her husband's absence, Mrs. Morris was made glad by the return from Europe of her sons Robert and Thomas, and it was during this same period that the clouds began to gather around the horizon of Mr. Morris's successful financial. onver. In October, 1788, he was again called into public life, by being elected by the Assembly to represent Pennsylvania in the first Senate of the United States, which was convened in New York on the 4th of March, 1789. On the very day of the meeting he writes to Mrs. Morris: "I arrived safe have at 7 o'clock this morning, before Mr. Constable was up. We met the members that are now in this city from the other States, opened the two houses by entering on the minutes the names of those who appeared, and adjourned entil to-morrow at Eleven O'clock. There were only Eight 8-nators and thirteen assembly men, and before we can procod to business there must be twelve Senators and thirty members of assembly. . . . Last night they fired 13 cannon from the Battery here over the Funeral of the Confederation, and this morning they saluted the new Government with 11 Cannon, being one for each of the States that have adopted the Constitution. The Flag was hoisted on the Fort, and Federal Colours were displayed on the top of the New Edifice and at several other places of the City; this, with ringing of Bells and Crowds of People at the meeting of Congress, gave the air of a grand Festival to the 4th of March, 1789, which, no doubt, will hereafter be celebrated as a new Era in the Annals of the World."

Congress did not organize for business until the eighth of April, and on the thirtieth, Washington was inaugurated the first President of the United States. Mrs. Washington did not accompany the general to New York, but on Tuesday, the nineteenth of May, accompanied by her grandchildren Eleanor and George Washington Parke Custis, set out in her private carriage for the seat of government. She received ovations all along the route, and on Thursday, when she reached Gray's Ferry, just outside of the city, she was met by Mrs. Morris, whose guest she was to be, and accompanied by her, entered the city escorted by a large concourse of military and citizens. On reaching High (Market) Street, near the residence of Mrs. Morris, she was greeted by the ringing of bells, the discharge of thirteen guns from a park of artillary, and the cheering shouts of an immense concourse of joyous people. Mrs. Washington remained with Mrs. Morris until the following Monday, and then departed for New York, taking with her Mrs. Morris and her daughter Maria in her carriage, as her guests. They were met on Wednesday at Elizabethtown by the President and Mr. Morris, and crossed over to New York on the President's barge. On Friday, the 29th of May, Mrs. Washington gave her first lovee, at which Mrs. Morris was present, occupying the first place, on her right, and at all of her subsequent levees in New York and afterwards in Philadelphia, when present, Mrs. Morris occupied the honored place, as also did Mr. Morris when a guest at the public or private dinners given by Washington.

Mrs. Morris remained in New York with her husband until the fifth of July, when she returned home, he being detained at the seat of government by his senatorial duties. On the 17th he writes to her: "I have received your very pleasing letter of the 10th inst., and was made very happy in reading the narrative of your journey, of your reception at General Dickinson's, the Delaware Works, and, above all, in Market Street." A few days later he writes: "I paid a visit at the President's on Friday Evening (it is the only one I have paid since we parted). He is mended much in appearance and reality,-the Doctors, however, have had another cut at him, which has been very useful,-both he and Mrs. Washington were very particular in their enquiries after you, about your journey, and were pleased to hear that you had got safe bome. Nelly Custis asked after Maria, and Mrs. Washingtop and the President after both Hetty and Maria."

Mainly through Mr. Morris's exertions the seat of government was removed the next year to Philadelphia. As soon as it was settled definitely that the removal should take place, Mr. Morris, whose residence on High Street east of Sixth Street was the finest private residence in the city, offered it for the presidential mansion. It was built of brick, three stories high, and the main building was forty-five feet six inches wide by fifty-two feet deep, and the kitchen and wash-house twenty feet wide by fifty-five feet deep, while the stables would accommodate twelve horses. The front of the house displayed four windows on the second and third floors, two on either side of the main hall, and on the first floor three windows, and a single door approached by three heavy gray stone steps. On each side of the house were vacant lots used a garden, and containing trees and shrubbery. This propmy Mr. Morris bought in August, 1785, and rebuilt the bonse, which had been destroyed by fire New Year's day, 1780. When completed, he removed from his residence on Front Street below Dock Street, which he had occupied befire and during the dark days of the revolutionary strugglo. Washington wrote from Philadelphia, on his way to Mt. Vernon, to his Secretary, Tobias Lear, at New York : "The house of Mr. Robert Morris had, previous to my arrival, been taken by the corporation for my residence. It is the best they could get. It is, I believe, the best single house in the city. Yet without additions it is inadequate to the commodious accommodation of my family." He subsequently wrote to Lear from Mt. Vernon: "Mr. and Mrs. Morris have insisted upon leaving the two large looking-glasses which are in their best rooms, because they have no place, they say, proper to remove them to, and because they are unwilling to hazzard taking them down. You will therefore let them have, instead, the choice of mine. . . . Mrs. Morris has a mangle (I think it is called) for ironing clothes, which, as it is fixed in the place where it is commonly used, she proposes to leave and take mine. To this I have no objection, provided mine is equally good and convenient ; but if I should obtain any advantages besides that of its being up and ready for use, I am not inclined to receive it. . . . Mrs. Morris, who is a notable lady in family arrangement, can give you much information on all the conveniences about the house and buildings, and I dare say would rather consider it as a compliment to be consulted in those matters, as she is near, than a trouble to give her opinion of them." On yielding up his own residence to the President, Mr. Morris removed into the house at the southeast corner of Sixth and Market Streets, which had been built by the loyalist Joseph Galloway, and confiscated to the State on account of his adhesion to the British crown. Mr. Morris purchased it from the Executive Council of Pennsylvania shortly after he had purchased the presidential mansion, to which it adjoined.

The President and Mrs. Washington arrived in Philadelphia from Mt. Vernon towards the end of November, and took possession of their house, where on Christmas night the first levee in Philadelphia was given. The close friendship which existed between Mr. Morris and the chief soon spread to their respective families, and an intimacy was engendered which neither misfortune nor time could diminish. That Robert Morris was Washington's most intimate friend—the man who entered nearest to his heart, and to whom he most unbended—is proverbially well known, and the following incident of his last levee, held a few days before his retiring from the presidency, has been preserved and handed down by an eye-witness:¹ "Washington received his guests, standing between the windows in his back drawing-room. The comjuny, entering a front room and passing through an unfolding door, made their salutations to the President, and turning eff, stood on one side. His manner was courteous, of course, but always on these occasions somewhat reserved. He did not give his hand, but merely bowed, which was the mode for that day. Mr. Morris came in, and when the President saw him entering the room, he advanced to meet him, and shook him heartily by the hand: Mr. Morris, in allusion partly, perhaps, to the day which may have been cloudy, but more to the event, repeating as he came forward the lines:—

> * The day is overcast, the morning lowers, And heavily in clouds brings on the day— The great, the important day.'"

On the 4th of March, 1797, Washington's second term expind with the installation of John Adams into the executive chair. The day preceding he had given a farewell dinner, at which both Mr. and Mrs. Morris were present. Bishop White, who was also one of the guests, says: "During the diamer much hilarity prevailed ; but on the removal of the eloth it was put an end to by the President, certainly without 4-ign. Having filled his glass, he addressed the company, with a smile on his countenance, saying : 'Ladies and gentlemen, this is the last time I shall drink your health as a public man; I do it with sincerity, wishing you all possible happibes.' There was an end to all pleasantry, and there was not a dry eye among the company." He showed his esteem for Mrs. Morris by presenting her with a small profile portrait of himelf, by the Marchioness de Brehan, with this autograph prematation: "The President's compliments accompany the inclosed to Mrs. Morris."

We now approach near to the period of her husband's great fnancial misfortunes, brought on by his striving after large presessions and his misplaced confidence in one of his associates. He purchased, at merely nominal prices, varying from a few cents to a dollar an acre, many millions of acres of unscated lands in the several States of the Union, some individually and others in conjunction with John Nicholson and James Greenleaf, with whom he subsequently organized the North American Land Company in February, 1795. Early in the following year Morris and Nicholson found that they had joined their fortunes with the wrong man, and endcavored to extricate themselves by purchasing his interest, but alas! too late; the evil seed planted by Greenleaf was too widespread, and had taken too deep root, to be killed out and eradicated, and thus by his dishonest and rascally conduct was Robert Morris dragged under and sacrificed. In the autumn of 1796, Mr. Morris passed some time in Washington, or, as it was then called, "The Federal City,"-where Major L'Enfant, who had been the architect of the enormous pile, partly erected, on the square bounded by Seventh Street, Eighth Street, Chestnut Street, and Walnut Street, and known as "Morris's Folly," was engaged in laying out the city plans,-endeavoring to dispose of lots, a large number of which Mr. Morris had purchased when it was decided that there should be the permanent capitol of the country.

Finally the crisis came on the fifteenth of February, 1798. On that day he was arrested at the suit of one Charles Eddy, and from "the Hills" he writes to Nicholson: "I am here in custody of a sheriff's officer. Charles Eddy is the most hardened villain God ever made. I believe if I had bank bills to pay him with he would refuse them on the ground of their not being a legal tender." The next day he was taken to the debtor's apartment of the old Prune Street Prison, where he was confined until liberated by the operation of the General Bankrupt Law on the twenty-sixth of August, 1801, after undergoing an imprisonment of three years, six months, and ten days. The country for whose independence, safety, and salvation he had pledged and given his private fortune in the hour of its deepest depression and most desperate need, for got him when adversity crowded upon him, and neither in word, act, or deed helped to alleviate the burden of his unfortunate situation. The Congress which, without his sid, never would have had an existence to hold a session, sat within the shadow of his prison walls, but lifted not a voice or hand to save him. Yet one, noble above all, did not forget him. His great compeer, with Trenton and Yorktown irsh in his mind, remembered who had given him the gold which gave the two decisive conflicts of the war. In a letter written by Washington to Mrs. Eliza Powell, he says: "Poor Mrs. Morris! I feel much for her situation; and earnestly pray that Mr. Morris may, and soon, work through all his difficulties; in which I am persuaded that all who know him heartily join me; as they do, that their ease, quiet, and domestic enjoyments may be perfectly restored." Late in 1798, shen Washington visited Philadelphia to collect and organize an army, at the time that the relations with France made such a measure necessary, "he paid his first visit to the prison-house of Robert Morris." Nor was this all. The following year Mrs. Morris, with her daughter Maria, visited ber eldest daughter Hetty-Mrs. James Marshall, of Virrinia, and while there received the following cordial and gratifying joint letter :---

" MOUNT VERNON, September 21, 1799.

"Our DEAR MADAM-We never learnt with certainty, until "" had the pleasure of seeing Mr. White (since his return from Frederick), that you were at Winchester.

We hope it is unnecessary to repeat in this place how happy we should be to see you and Miss Morris under our set for as long a stay as you shall find convenient before you estarn to Philadelphia; for be assured we ever have and still for retain the most affectionate regard for you, Mr. Morris, and "as family.

With the highest esteem and regard, and best wishes for the bralth and happiness of the family you are in, we are,

Dear Madam,

Your most obedient and very Humble servants,

> GO. WASHINGTON, MARTHA WASHINGTON.

Winchester."

This flattering invitation reached Mrs. Morris just as also was starting for Philadelphia, whither she had been called by the breaking out of the malignant fever of 1799. Mr. Morrae wrote to his son Thomas on the seventh of September: "My good health continues, altho' our city is again afflicted with sickness. I have, however, got an order of Court for my removal into the country when I shall deem my present situaties dangerous; and in consequence thereof I believe Robert will go next week to Winchester to bring back your mother and Maria." This was the third visit of the fever; during that of the previous year Mrs. Morris lost her third son, William, who died October 9th, 1798, in his twenty-seventh year. Mr. Morris communicates it to Thomas the next day in a letter full of feeling: "In the midst of grief and distress I write three lines, altho' they will make you a participator of it. Could the event be kept from your knowledge I would stare your friendly feelings for the loss of a worthy brother. Poor William, he has fallen the untimely victim of a billious remitting fever (not the prevailing Malignant Fever) which has been hanging about him for a month past; during that time Le lived low and took medicine, but without effect, and last Friday night he was seriously attacked ; two able Physicians did all they could for him, but in vain. He died yesterlay in the forenoon, and his body was immediately deposited in the Family Vault at Christ Church. I have lost in him not only a dutiful son, but a friend and companion ; I have lost those hopes which were hung upon his sense, virtue, and talents. Had he been spared, he would have made a fine figure in this world. The only comfort left upon his subject, that he is translated pure and uncontaminated from this world of trouble to enjoy that bliss which is promised in another to the virtuous." This young man showed considerable promise, if an opinion may be formed from the letters he addressed to his parents from London and Paris in the years '94 and '95. They disclose an observing and discriminating mind, improved by no little taste and cultivation.

During the confinement of Mr. Morris, his faithful and devoted wife and daughter, Maria, were his constant communications.

Day after day Mrs. Morris visited the prison, and dined at its cell-table of her unfortunate but noble husband, and while the malignant fevers which raged terribly in Prune Street infested the city, she never left him, but continued her daily visits until she walked through two rows of coffins, piled from Law to ceiling, in reaching his room. With death around him and beside him, in this, its more direful form, he had no personal fear. To John Nicholson he writes October 15th. 1793: "It is wonderful, but, notwithstanding the danger is now at my chamber door,-for Hofner is in the room I formerly occupied,-I feel no kind of apprehension, and my only anxiety is for my wife and daughter and these poor sick people. I hope my life will be spared, for the sake of my family, until I get my affairs settled." Three days later Le says to the same correspondent: "I think of moving out of my room into that formerly occupied by Dr. Rusten, in the lack part of the house; if I do this, it is to give some comfort to Mrs. Morris, whose distress pierces my heart. As to myself, I cannot feel afraid or alarmed at the neighborhood of this disease, although I have tried." By the care of a keneticent Providence he was guarded and protected through." the ravages of this fell destroyer.

At last Mr. Morris was released from prison. On "Monby morning, August 27th, 1801," he writes to his son Thomas : "As I know the contents of this letter will be very pleasing to you and your family, I embrace the first opportonity to tell you that I obtained my liberty last evening, and had the inexpressible satisfaction to find myself again restored to my home and family." Alas! what a far different home be entered to the one he left. Mrs. Morris at this period was living in a small establishment on the east side of Twelfth Street, midway between Market and Chestnut Streets, which she had been enabled to keep together through the instrumentality of Mr. Gouverneur Morris, who, not a relative, was the best true friend Robert Morris ever had. The title to the four tracts containing three million three Landred thousand acres in the Genesee country, which had been conveyed to the Holland Land Company by Mr. Morris for which Gouverneur Morris compelled the company to pay Mrs. Morris an annuity of fifteen hundred dollars during her life, and this was all she had upon which to live. Compare this picture with those we have presented of a decade and a score of years before. Here, a broken-down old man, in his sixty-eighth year, without one cent that he can call his own. only protected from the storms of heaven by a roof preserved through the thoughtful instrumentality of an old friend. There, the first man of the city-the first in wealth, in influence, and in position-receiving and entertaining Washington and the officers of the allied armies on their way to the crowning success of the war; and again when the city of his adoption becomes the capital of the Union, yielding up his private residence-the most magnificent in the city-for the presidential manision. These vast changes he survived not quite five years. On the seventh of May, 1806, he was released from the harassing cares of this mortal life, and found a resting-place in the family vault, Christ Church, Second Street, Philadelphia.

Mr. Morris was a man of remarkable presence-large in stature, and with a countenance peculiarly open and noble; he impressed all who approached him with the force of his character and the strength of his ability. There are portraits of him painted by Peale, Pine, Trumbull, and Stuart. He possessed a mind as vigorous and strong as his body-mens sana in corpore sano. He wrote with a clearness, purity, and strength which is only equalled by the volume of his correspondence; the number of letters which he wrote with his own hand, in the midst of the most engrossing public and private dutics, being almost miraculous. He was a genial man, fond of good cheer, and delighted in sprightly conversation and sparkling wit. That he was warm-hearted, noble, and generous, his whole life evidences. On this occasion, let me read to you the tender affectionate words he wrote to Gouverneur Morris at Paris, informing him of Mrs. White's death :-

PHILADELPHIA, Jan'y 2d, 1791.

My DEAR FRIEND-I have just parted from my family, now lies a corpse in her own house. She expired on Friday evening, the 31st ult., after a short illness, occasioned by a severe cold taken accidentally, and treated with neglect until two late. She did not suffer much pain, and being in her 71st year, her end was to be looked for; but notwithstanding these circumstances it came unexpectedly, and therefore has given a greater shock to the feelings of her two children than otherwise it would. My wife told me a while ago, when I mentioned that I had been writing to you, that she recollected you having often professed a regard and esteem for her mother, and therefore requested me to mention the decease to you. The old lady was a sensible, good woman, and as such, exclusive of all considerations of connection, I valued and respected her exceedingly.

We have ever been on terms of the most friendly intercourse, and I regret the loss of her as much as if she had been my own mother. Her daughter grieves at the loss, but has two much sense and too much integrity of mind to make parade of grief. To-morrow we shall attend her remains to the grave, at least myself and my children will; but I do not intend that Mrs. Morris shall, for the weather is extreamly cold, and I do not choose that she should risque her health. I hope, may dear Governeur, that you and I may live long enough to meet again in this world. I deelare to you, if I were to indulge a doubt of it, my happiness would be much diminished, and my stock of happiness has already been so much curtailed by adversity that I can spare very little of the little now left.

I hope that you may long be spared an ornament of your species; an honor to humanity, and be permitted the full enjoyments of all the happiness that man is capable of. Farewell. You never had nor ever will have a more sincere Friend than

ROB'T. MORRIS.

Mr. Morris possessed considerable taste for the fine arts, and encouraged them liberally. For Robert Edge Pine, the English portrait painter, he built a house on Eighth Street, below Market, adapted for the exhibition of his pictures and the prosecution of his painting. He aided Jardella, an Italian sculptor of no mean merit, to establish himself in Philadelphia, and during the French Revolution he imported some of the finest Gobelin tapestry and French marquetry work ever brought to this country. His will, written by his own hand two years before his death, closes with these philosophical remarks:--

Vol. II.-13

"Here I have to express my regret at having lost a very large fortune acquired by honest industry, which I had long hoped and expected to enjoy with my family during my own life, and then to distribute it among those of them that should outlive me. Fate has determined otherwise, and we must submit to the decree, which I have endeavored to do with patience and fortitude."

Such is a portraiture of the man whom Mary White married, and whom she survived twenty-one years.

After the death of her husband, Mrs. Morris removed to Chestnut Street, above Tenth, on the south side, and here she resided when Lafayette made his famous tour through the States in 1824. He arrived in Philadelphia on Tucsday morning, September 29th, and was tendered the grandest ovation he received during his visit as the nation's guest. On the evening of his arrival he called upon Mrs. Morris, making her his first private call in the city, thus showing the deep affection and respect which a separation of thirty-seven year, amid the vicissitudes of momentous times and the fearful events of the French Revolution, could not erase. At his especial personal request, she attended the grand civic ball given in his honor at the new Chestnut Street Theatre, on the night of Monday, October 5th. She was at this time in her seventy-sixth year. On Tuesday, the sixteenth of January, 1827, she joined her beloved husband in the unknown land of departed spirits, and was buried in the family vault.

Without the attractions of beauty, Mrs. Morris possessed the highest qualities of mind and heart. She was tall, graceful, and commanding, with a stately dignity of manner which ever made a controlling impression upon all with whom she was brought in contact. There are three portraits of her; eve, an execrable thing by Charles Wilson Peale, in Independence Hall; the second, a beautiful miniature by Trumbull, painted about 1790, in the possession of her granddaughter, Mrs. Ambler; and the third, an unfinished head, by Gilbert Stuart, in the gallery of the Lenox Library, New York, painted shortly before her death, and said to be the last female head Stuart painted. From an obituary which appeared some time after her decease, I extract the following:--

"On Tuesday, the 16th inst., departed this life, in the 78th year of her age, Mrs. Mary Morris, relict of Robert Morris, Eq., formerly a member of the Legislature of this Commonwealth, a member of Congress long before the Declaration of Independence, of which instrument he was one of the signers, the Minister of Finance during the latter years of the kevolutionary War, a member of the Convention which establaded the present Constitution of the United States, and a Smator in the first Congress after its adoption.

" His deceased widow, after having enjoyed with him withcut arrogance the wealth and the honours of the early and the middle years of his life, descended with him, without wining, to the privations incident to the reverses of his fortane towards the close of it. Since his decease, some of the liteliest of her gratifications were the occasions frequently securring of civilities and services tendered to her by men who dated the beginnings of their successes in their respective occupations to the patronage and the aids furnished to them by her deceased husband in the course of his successful purmits of commerce, some of whose names had been unknown to her until the occasions which called forth the expressions of their gratitude.

"Having lived in the unestentatious profession of religion, seel in the faithful discharge of her relative duties, she met the event of death with entire resignation; and, as is trusted, with a well-grounded hope of the mercy of God, through the merits of the Redeemer."

Mr. and Mrs. Morris had seven children, the record of whose births I read from the entries made by Mr. Morris in the family Bible:-

" March 2d, 1769. Robert Morris was married to Mary, his wife.

WHITE FAMILY.

The English Ancestry of Bishop White was ascertained and demonstrated by Joseph Lemuel Chester, Esq., LL. D., Fellow of the Royal Historical Society of Great Britain, &c., &c., an authority of eminence. His exhibit of the pedigree was published at Philadelphia in 1279, in the "Account of the meeting of the descendants of Colonel Thomas White of Maryland." The family arms were verified and certified by Col. Chester. The following is an abstract from his work:

JOHN WHITE, of Hulcote (written Holcott in the Visitation pedigree) in county Bedford, Buckinghamshire, born circa 1450; will devising lands in nine parishes, dated October 6, 1501; proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, December 20, 1501. The line of Bishop White extends through the second sen. The male line of the eldest son became extinct at the death of George White, greatgrandson of John White, of Hulcote, 1634. George White succeeded his brother, who was the eldest son, Thomas White, D. D., minister of S. Gregory's, London, Treasurer of the Church of Salisbury in 1570; Vicar of S. Dunston in the West, Fleet street, 1575; Prebendary of S. Paul's, London, 1588; Canon of Christ Church, Oxford, 1591; Canon of S. Grege's, Windsor, 1593; founder of Sion College, London, incorporated after death by Royal Charter in 1630. He died March 1, 1623-4. His brother, George, survived him, succeeded to the ontailed estates and died as above stated.

JOHN WHITE, second son of John White, of Hulcote, and his heirs continued the male fine of descent. He was in his minority at his father's death, and died August 25, 7572. He was described in the first Visitation pedigree quoted as of Righmont, in Bedfordshire. He owned the manor of Caldecot, in Newport Pagnell, county Bucks, and other lands; was buried at Newport Pagnell. His eldest son was

THOMAS WHITE, known as Thomas White, the eldest, of Caldeot, horn 1510, huried August 30, 1603, at Newport Pagnell. His eldest son, whom he outlived, was

LAWRENCE WHITE, third in succession to Caldecot, who died December 29, 1600, seized of the Manor of Caldecot, Newport Paguell, and of other lands. He was buried at Newport Paguell, January 2, 1600-1. His eldest son was

THOMAS WHITE, born November, 1583, died May, 1667, and buried at Newport Pagnell, June 1, 1667. His eldest son was Thomas White, whose line male seems to have become extinct at the death of William White, second son of Thomas White, who was grandson of the Thomas White, now referred to.

WILLIAM WHITE, second son of Thomas White, above noted, born between 1610 and 1616; will devising considerable real estate in London, dated November 24, 1676, probated December 18, 1676; buried at St. Martin's, Ludgate, London. His eldest son was

WILLIAM WHITE, born between 1639 and 1649; will dated April 26, 1709; buried September 12, 1709, at St. Martin's, Ludgate, London; will probated October 25, 1709. His son was

WILLIAM WHITE, died seven months before him, and was buried February 7, 1708-9. His will was proved February 22, 1708-9. At his death he was a few years less than forty; he married Elizabeth Leigh, February 2, 1696-7. His eldest son was

WILLIAM WHITE, who lived and died unmarried; born in 1702; died January 9, 1744-5; will dated February 2, 1743-4; will proved January 17, 1744-5. His brother next in succession was

THOMAS WHITE, father of Bishop White; born in 1704, second child and second son of William White and Elizabeth Leigh; educated at St. Albans, eighteen miles from London; in 1720 sailed for Maryland with the expedition of Charles Calvert; studied law with Mr. Stokes, clerk of the county of Baltimore, and practiced at the Maryland bar; was appointed Deputy Surveyor of Baltimore and Harford counties, representing the Lord Proprietary in enleoffug grantees of land; Major in the local militia organized to protect the colony from Indians, and later Colonel in the Governor's establishment; married, 1730, Sophia, daughter of John Hall, of Cranberry Hall, who died June 18, 1742; removed to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1745; married May 7, 1747, Esther Hewlings, of Burlington, New Jersey; Trustee of the Philadelphia College, November 13, 1749, to his death, September 29, 1779; had large landed estate in Maryland at his death, including 7772½ acres taxable in Baltimore county alone; issue by his second marriage, William, afterwards Bishop of Pennsylvania, and Mary, afterwards wife of Robert Morris.

WILLIAM WHITE, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, was born March 24, 1747. O. S., April 3, 1747, N. S. He graduated at the College of Philadelphia, May, 1765, and studied divinity with Dr. Peters and Dr. Duché. On October 15, 1770, he sailed for England in the ship, "Britannia," from Chester, and was ordained Deacon, December 23, 1770, in the Royal Chapel, London, by Lord Bishop of Norwich. In June, 1772, he was ordained priest by the Lord Bishop of London. He left London on his return, July 22, 1772, in the ship, "Pennsylvania Packet," and arrived in Philadelphia, September 13, 1772; soon after he was elected assistant minister of Christ Church and St. Peter's Church in that city. On February 11, 1773, he married Mary, daughter of Capt. Henry Harrison, of Lancashire, England, one of the Wardens of Christ Church, and at one time Mayor of Philadelphia. He took sides with the Colonies in the contest with Greet Britain, and upon the publication of the Declaration of Independence, he ceased to use the form of prayer for the King, and shortly after took the oath of allegiance to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, being the second person who did so. In September, 1777, he was chosen Chaplain of the Continental Congress, and continued Chaplain for that and the Congress of the United States until the latter moved to New York. On its return to Philadelphia, he was elected Chaplain and officiated as such until the removal of Congress to Washington in 1801. In April, 1770, he was elected Rector of Christ Church and St. Peter's. In the summer of 1782 he completed a pamphlet entitled, "The Case of the Episcopal Churches Considered," with the object of stating and meliorating the difficulties in the way of the establishment of the Ordinances and Worship of the English Church in America. which arose upon the breach between the American and English bodies, the former up to the time of the Revolution having derived its ecclesiastical power as well as much of its financial support from the latter, and these having been withheld as a consequence of the Revolution. This pamphlet "exerted a most important effect on the organization and the very existence of the American Church."

Its publication was rendered unnecessary by the opening of negotiations for peace with England. "The communication of Sir Guy Carleton and Admiral Digby to the American Congress changed at once the aspect of affairs. The pamphlet was at once withdrawn from sale, and such copies as were within the author's reach were destroyed. Some had been distributed among friends and were consequently in circulation; and early the following year some additional copies were issued from the press, evidently to enable persons whose curiosity had been excited, to judge as to the nature of the propositions advanced by the writer of the work." On September 14, 1786, he was unanimously elected Eishop of Pennsylvania, and sailed for England on the second of the following November, arriving in London on the 21st of that month. On February 4, 1787, he was consecuted Bishop in Lambeth Chapel, by Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by Archhishop, of York, Bishop of Bath and Wells, and Bishop of Peterborough. On the 17th of the same month, he sailed for New York on the "Prince William Henry," and arrived there on Easter Sunday, April 8.

From January, 1783, he was most active in the work of organizing and building up the Episcopal church in this country. When he was twenty-six years of age he was elected one of the trustees of the College of Philadelphia, row the University of Pennsylvania, and held that office for over sixty-two years. He was one of the founders of the Episcopal Academy, a preparatory school in Philadelphia, which is still fourishing. He preached his last sermon in St. Peter's Church. Sunday, June 26, 1836; was taken sick on July 2, and died July 17, in the eightyninth year of his age. His body is interred in the chancel of Christ Church in Philadelphia. His toneral was alreaded by twenty thousand persons.

" "The personal career of Eishop White was unique among Americans. Younger in years than most of the men with whom he was associated, he was from the first their peer in range of outlook, in ability to see what caght to be done, and in tipe and comprehensive judgment. He had the statesman's gift of working wisely when he had a great end in view. No other man appeared among Churchmen in the American colonies who had the same ability at a great crisis to decide promptly what to do and how to do it. When he was hardly thirty fire years of age, with the exception of Dr. Seabury, he was the most conspicuous elergyman, the one to whom all eyes instinctively turned in the American colonies. He had made the impression of a man who had the qualities and gifts of leadership, though at had not been called upon to show forth all that he could do. His wealth, his secial position, his thorough education, and a certain maturity of mind and thought which impressed all who came in contact with him, contributed to his eminence. Though the junior of Washington in years, he was not only his pastor but his equal in social rank and distinction. In any community Bishop White would have been a man of note, and in the political and religious crisis which was brought to a head in the American Revolution, he had the qualities of courage and foresight which made him a man of mark.

"He was born to enjoy the confidence of his fellow-men, and exercise leadership over them. He did this not by assuming to lead, but by the superiority of his gifts, which impossed all who came in contact with him. He gained the confidence of others by their conviction of his largeness of mind and heart. He lives in many respects a double life. In one character he fulfilled his round of duty as the Bishop of Pennsylvania and the rector of his united churches in Philadelphia.

and in these positions he felt most at home. In the other character he stood forth as the patriarch of the American Church, the one man who had a full knowledge of the Anglican Church in the United States from the beginning, and to whom all momentous questions in ecclesiastical affairs were constantly referred as they arose. He took the initiative in the organization of the American Church."

"Every one revered the tall and venerable man who walked the streets of Philadelphia with slow and measured step, and he was beloved, as never before, in his office of chief pastor and in his character as a citizen. It was remarked after his death that he, was one of the three perfect men that America had so far produced, Washington and Marshall being the other two. Everybody wished to have his blessing; little children paused in the street for his kindly greeting and to pay him respect; and his weight of years and his kindness to all made him, what Bishop Fraser was recently called, 'the Bishop of all denominations.' That he enjoyed this distinction is not to be doubted, but it rather increased his lumility than ministered to his pride. In the councils of the Church he had the same pre-eminence. He was deferred to as the only one who had known all things from the beginning, and at the General Convention and in the public work of the Church, he was the central figure and the most influential factor."

"The story of our progress from a condition of dependency upon the Mother Church of England to independence and autonomy as a branch of Christ's Holy Catholic Church, is told in the life-history of William White, who for upwards of half a century was the guiding spirit and the judicious head of the Communion he had done so much to found and shape."

Doctor McConnell described him thus: "None of his contemporaries surpassed and few equalled him in sagacity. When the war ended he was thirty-five years old. He was well born, well bred, and well educated, both in this country and abroad. In England he was a friend of Dr. Johnson; had him for his guest at his inn; chatted with him while he watched him at work on his lexicon; supped with him at Kennington; and wrote him when he came back to Philadelphia. He was on familiar terms with Goldsmith, visited him, praised his work, and condoled with him that so electr a man should have to harness his genius to a cart to earn his daily bread. The was ordained in England; became Assistant, and soon after Rector of Christ Church, Philadelphia; was chosen Chaplain of Congress; and, when the war ended, was next after Franklin, the leading citizen of the State. While Dr. Smith, of Maryland, was engrossed with the small economies of a struggling college, and Dr. Seabury was observing the petty routine of an infantry barracks, Dr. White was unconsciously learning the statecraft which guided the founders of the Protestant Episcopal Church."

PEDIGREES

We will be using a fairly standardized numbering system for our Pedigree Charts. If not standardized, it is at least used a great deal-and seems to work.

Number one on the chart can be anybody, male or female, from there on in even numbers will represent men, odd numbers for women. A man's even number plus one will always be his wife.

To determine the father of any person on the chart, simply double the number of that person. For instance: number three on a chart is MARY WHITE. By doubling her number to six you find her father. Add one to that number and you have MARY'S mother as number seven.

ABBREVIATIONS-

Abbreviations will be kept to a minimum. We'll use the standard: b. born, m. married, d. died, and a few others, but not so many that it reads like a foreign language--especially for the novice. However, we will try to to consistently abbreviate the states as follows:

AK	Alaska	KY	Kentucky	NY	New York
AL.	Alabama	LA	Louisiana	OH	Ohio
AR	Arkansas	MA	Massachusetts	OK	Oklahoma
AZ	Arizona	MD	Maryland	OR	Oregon

EDITORIAL

One thing I've learned well from you--the WHITE genealogists--you are terrific researchers. And you are generous, caring, sharing people.

As a result, next year we're going to four issues a year because of the abundance of good information you've sent in. We'll use most, if not all of it, as we get it, as space allows.

I do want to thank you for your support, and since this publication is for every WHITE family, anywhere, anytime, it is up to you to determine the content. Please use these pages in the way they will help you most.

Advice, suggestions, experiences from you help us all. The letter below from JOHN L. WHITE is a good case in point. Feel free, my friends and "cousins", this book is yours.

A READER WRITES

Editor:

Congratulations! You had a great idea, a marvelous idea to publish a magazine dedicated solely to dissemination of information on THE WHITE LINE. I can hardly wait for the next issue?

If I may do so, I would like to offer one constructive idea. Whenever an ancestral name is used in a pedigree, or in any way noted or mentioned, use a middle initial or name in addition to the first name - if the middle name or initial is known. By doing so, the genealogist will be able to isolate his particular JOHN or WILLIAM from a long list of identical names when the marriage date and wife's name is unknown. One of my own ancestors was WILLIAM H. WHITE, born ca. 1800-02, but I do not know when or who he married. You can readily see that a long list of WILLIAMS, without the H. initial, is not so useful to me.

I will be eagerly waiting for you to begin digging in Georgia. There were battalions of WHITES in that state who will furnish material for numerous future editions. Good luck and happy hunting!

THE SCOTCH-IRISH WHITES

No king of Scotland since ROBERT the Bruce around 1300 had been able to maintain peace with England, and by 1600 Scotland was a land ravaged with a poverty born of wars. When King JAMES VI of Scotland became JAMES I of England in 1603, he succeeded Queen ELIZABETH and initiated a new period of Scotch history.

ELIZABETH'S paramour, Lord ESSEX, had tried in vain to conquer the Irish, and was recalled to England following his defeat in 1595 during a rebellion of the Irish chiefs. ELIZABETH sent Lord MOUNTJOY to whip the Irish, and in the process MOUNTJOY burned out all of Northern Ireland. Crops, cattle, sheep and buildings were totally destroyed.

When JAMES I took over the English throne, one of his early acts was to give large grants of land to Scotch landlords and English merchants in the northern provinces of Ireland, chiefly Ulster. These men of wealth were not expected to live in Ireland, but rather to implant Scotch farmers there to revive the area and make it productive.

Generally, Scots from the lowland clans, being of agricultural background, became the initial tenants in Ulster. This migration in Scotch, English, and Irish history, is referred to as the "plantation" era.

The Scotch, following JOHN KNOX'S return in 1559 from exile in Europe, were rabid Presbyterians. The Kirk of Scotland was not only Calvinistic in doctrine —— it was republican in government. In fact, Presbyterian means "ruled by elders," these being elected by the people. This form of church government is in sharp contrast with the episcopal nature of rule by clergy (Roman Catholic, Church of England, Episcopals) and the congregational form of rule by the people (Baptist, Congregationalists). When the Scotch were implanted in Ireland, they were surrounded by Irish Catholics and English adherents to the Church of England.

Succeeding waves of Scots reached Ulster, including many from the highland clans. These highlanders from rocky, mountainous terrain, were not as attuned to the soil, and largely became merchants. Flax grown in Ulster and sheep produced in Ulster provided raw materials for linen and wool manufacturing --- the textile industry which would later center in North Carolina and Virginia.

As the eighteenth century opened, a great drouth hit Ulster. Flax crops burned up and sheep died out. Almost simultaneously the British King, now WILLIAM of Orange, embarked upon a policy of placating the Irish, and in the second year (1703) of Queen ANNE'S rule, the "Test Act" was passed. This law required all officeholders in Ireland to take the sacraments either prescribed by the Pope or the Archbishop of Canterbury. Thus the Scots, being Presbyterians, could not be sheriffs, bailiffs, justices, clerks of court, or hold any public office. Faced with drouth, the absence of manufacturing, ineligibility to work for government, and consequent inability to enter into new leases in Ulster, the Scots departed for America. Five great waves of Scotch emigration to this country took place before 1775, beginning with the first in 1717-18.

Most of them arrived through the port of Philadelphia, from which they trekked westward and southward. At debarkation, they had to register as arriving from some country, which of course would be Ireland. But not being truly Irish, most of them listed "Northern Ireland," or "Ulster." Many called themselves "Ulstermen." In the nineteenth century they became known as the Scotch-Irish. In the 1700s, they were the second largest group in the country, behind the English and ahead of the Germans.

WHITES are found in the histories of Ireland, England and Scotland. The strongest clues to their origins would be in their religious backgrounds. If WHITES were Roman Catholic, they were probably Irish. If they were Episcopals or from the Church of England, they were probably British. If they were Presbyterian, Reformed, Congregationalist or Baptist, they were probably Scottish. While many Scottish Presbyterian ministers came to America, Ulstermen could not always find Presbyterian churches on the frontier, and many became Baptists or joined German Reformed or Lutheran churches.

The WHITES who pioneered the area near Charlotte, North Carolina, founded Knoxville, Tennessee, and pushed on into South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama were from northern Ireland and were of Presbyterian origin. They were, therefore, Scotch-Irish.

WHITES in Scotland were from the clans of Lamont and MacGregor.

EARLY WHITES IN NORTH CAROLINA

This material is taken from Carolina Cradle, ROBERT W. RAMSEY, Chapel Hill, University of North Carolina Press, 1964.

The land between the Catawba and Tadkin Rivers in northwestern North Carolina was explored and settled by Irish, Scotch-Irish and German people, most of whom migrated southwestward from the area of Lancaster, Peonsylvania. Armed with land grants from the territorial government, the settlers had to wrest their farmsites from the Indians---principally the Cherokees. The present city of Statesville, N.C. is in the center of this area, and county records are at Salisbury.

Three brothers, HUGH, MOSES, and HENRY WHITE, arrived with their families in Pennsylvania in 1722, Presbyterians from Ireland. HUGH, and his son, MOSES, were received by letter into the Neshaminy Presbyterian Church, Bucks County, Pennsylvania. HUGH WHITE left Neshaminy the same year, and settled on the Little Chickaslunga Creek in the Susquehanna Valley (Penn.). MOSES WHITE, his brother, went to New Castle (Penn.) County, where he was a schoolmaster until his death there in 1735.

HENRY WHITE, and his wife JOHANNA, sold their property in the town of Rapho, Lancaster (Penn.) County, as did his nephew, MOSES WHITE, and they moved to new locations on Davidson's Creek in North Carolina. In 1757, HENRY WHITE was listed as one of those who negotiated for property in behalf of the Waxhaw Presbyterian Church, in N.C.

Three of these WHITES made "significant contributions" to the history of North Carolina and the United States. JOSEPH WHITE, who settled on the Pee Dee River (N.C.), was a key figure in the development of the Pee Dee region, and one of the original justices of Anson County. HUGH LAWSON WHITE, grandson of the second MOSES, was a candidate for the Whig Party's nomination for president in 1852. Another prominent member of the family was JAMES WHITE, who married the daughter of HUGH LAWSON.

In 1714, an early English explorer, JOHN LAWSON, wrote a glowing account of the area between the Catawba and Yadkin Rivers, later to be Rowan County, N.C. His brother, ROGER LAWSON, appears as early as 1712 in the records of Cecil County, Penn. ROGER'S son, HUCH, sold the family property in Cecil County in 1749, and moved to North Carolina. HENRY WHITE, one of the three Irish brothers who arrived in 1722 in Lancaster, Pennsylvania as immigrants from northern Ireland, moved with his nephew, MOSES (II) to Sill's Creek, north of Charlotte, N.C. as a pioneer. In 1757 he was numbered among those who received a tract of land in behalf of the Waxhaw (now in S.C.) Presbyterian Church.

JOSEPH WHITE, son of HENRY, settled on the Pee Dee River south of the Granville Line (below Charlotte) and was a key figure in the development of Wadesboro. He was one of the original justices of Anson County.

MOSES WHITE was one of three brothers (HENRY, HUGH) who migrated from Ireland through Philadelphia to Lancaster, Pennsylvania; they were received in 1722 into the Neshaminy Presbyterian Church, Bucks County, Pennsylvania, transferring membership from a Presbyterian church in Northern Ireland. While some of the family settled and pioneered the area around Charlotte, North Carolina, this MOSES WHITE moved to New Castle County, Pennsylvania, where he died in 1735 as a schoolmaster. He had four sons: DAVID, *JOSEPH, JAMES, and JOHN.

HUGH WHITE, one of the three brothers (MOSES, HENRY) who migrated from Northern Ireland, left the Neshaminy (Pennsylvania) area in 1722, and went westward, settling on the Little Chickaslunga Creek in the Susquehanna Valley. His sons were HUGH, JOHN, HENRY, and MOSES.

MOSES WHITE (II), left Pennsylvania with his uncle, HENRY WHITE, settling on Davidson's Creek, N.C. (just west of Charlotte) as a pioneer. He married MARY CAMPBELL.

JAMES WHITE, born in 1747 in Iredell County, N.C., married POLLY LAWSON, daughter of HUGH LAWSON, became a captain in the U.S. Army, and founded White's Fort which became Knoxville, Tennessee. He became a general under ANDREW JACKSON, and fought the Creeks in eastern Tennessee and eastern Alabama. He died in 1821.

HUGH LAWSON WHITE married ELIZABETH CARRICK, was a U.S. Senator from eastern Tennessee, and a candidate in the Whig Party for president in 1852.

MOSES WHITE (III), whose father helped found the University of Tennessee together with Governor BLOUNT and GEORGE MCNUTT, married ISABELLA McNUTT.

WHITE NEWS CLIPPINGS

Hutchinson (Kansas) News 20 Dec 1922 HONEYMOONERS SKIP WHILE THE SHERIFF HUNTS

'Tis often said "when a man marries his troubles begin."

Such, apparently, is about to be the case in the life of LEON WHITE, 21, of Hutchinson, who was married Monday to EDYTHE MOBLEY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. MOBLEY, 617 North Main St.

WHITE made application for a license to wed in the office of Probate Judge Seward Baker and gave the age of the prospective bride as 19. The license was issued on his sworn statement and the marriage was performed later in the day by the Rev. WILLIAM STEELE, all of which differs but little from the usual run of such affairs.

However, the parents of the bride, upon finding a note to the effect that their daughter was married, ascertained that the newly acquired sonin-law had misrepresented the age of the bride. As a result they filed complaint for a warrant for WHITE'S arrest yesterday, charging that he had perjured himself in making application for the license, inasmuch as the girl was only 15 instead of 19, as sworn to by him.

In the meantime, the youthful honeymooners, unaware of what has been taking place here, are enjoying their bridal tour "somewhere in Kansas." However, just where is a matter of conjecture and the sheriff's office is endeavoring to locate the youthful pair. It was believed yesterday evening that the honeymooners were in Pretty Prairie.

Davis County Republican Bloomfield, IA Tuesday, December 27, 1927 LLOYD B. WHITE, son of ABRAHAM and LETICIA WHITE was born in Greene County, Tennessee, December 9, 1853 and departed this life at his home in Stiles, Iowa, December 11, 1927, at the time of his death being 74 years and 2 days of age. When three years old he came West with his parents and settled in Scotland County, Missouri. In 1874, February 18, he was married to ALPHRETTE TAYLOR, of Scotland County, Missouri. To this union was born five children, all of whom survive, except ABRAHAM, who died in infancy. In the year 1883, he accepted Christ as his personal Saviour, and united with the Methodist church in Stiles, where he remained a faithful member until the end. He was always looked upon as one of the strong pillars of the church and served in every official capacity, from Sunday school superintendent to the humblest position as janitor, which positions he filled with efficiency and faithfullness. He lived a life that was absolutely above reproach. No one doubted him. His life each day was an exhibition of his profession. He was a forceful exemplar of right living. His words and acts brought no reflection of Christianity. No one can look back on his memory without feeling there is such a life as a God filled life. The church, home, and society loses heavily when such a life takes its flight, but there are however many compensations. His many friends feel that he is happier and we are made better in heart and richer in soul when we reflect on his blessed life. His home was the preachers home, when the traveling itinerant received the very best. In such a home the devoted parents reared a loving and dutiful family and lived to see each son and daughter settled in life. For a large number of years his daily occupation was a paper hanger, painter and plasterer. He was known far and wide in this capacity, and was known as an honest workman, who needeth not be ashamed. His work was of the highest quality, and bore the marks of a skilled mechanic. This work he continued until compelled to give up owing to losing the vision of his sight. For many years he was deprived of the use of his sight, and had to be led by his faithful wife and sister around the house.

During this sad affliction, he bore it all with patience and Christian fortitude, and was perfectly resigned to the will of His Master. Just before the end came, he told his wife that he could not be here much longer, and his last message was, "I am ready to go, the time of my departure is at hand, I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid for me a crown of righteousness." He was a loving husband, a noble father, an esteemed citizen and a good neighbor.

Beside his wife he leaves to mourn four children: Mrs. IDA HALSTEAD, Cantril, Iowa; Mrs. ANNA CONAWAY, Nashville, Kansas; J.T. WHITE, Medicine Lodge, Kansas; E.R. WHITE, Pulaski, Iowa, besides sixteen grandchildren, three great-grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. NANCY MINNICK of Stiles, Iowa, with many other relatives, and a host of friends.

He was one of a family of ten children, and Mrs. NANCY MINNICK, who has made her home with her late brother is now the last of the ten children. He lived a beautiful life, and died a triumphant death. The funeral service was conducted by the writer, who had been intimately acquainted with the family for the past twenty years, from the home to the Methodist church in Stiles, Wednesday, December 14 at 2:00 p.m. in the presence of a large concourse of friends gathered in spite of the unfavorable conditions of the roads. Interment was in the cemetery in Stiles. ARTHUR S. OLSEN, Pastor First M.E. Church, Memphis, Missouri.

Bloomfield Democrat Bloomfield, IA Thursday, May 30, 1935

ALPHA RETTA TAYLOR, eldest daughter of ABRAHAM and ELIZA ANN TAYLOR, was born November 22, 1858, in Davis County, Iowa, and died May 21, 1935 at her home in Stiles. At the age of 13 she united with her parents to Scotland County, Missouri. On February 18, 1875 she was united in marriage with LLOYD B. WHITE to which union five children were born; Mrs. IDA HALSTEAD and Mrs. ROSS WHITE of Bloomfield; Mrs. ANNA CONAWAY, of Medicine lodge, Kansas and Mrs. THOMAS WHITE of Hutchinson, Kansas. One son, ABRAHAM, preceded her in death. She also leaves 16 grandchildren, 8 great-grandchildren, one son-in-law, WILL CONAWAY, and two daughters-inlaw, STELLA WHITE and FRONA WHITE. Of her father's family, her father, mother and two sisters, Mrs. EDD STATEN and Mrs. WALTER MORRIS, two brothers, JOHN and WILLIAM B. TAYLOR, preceded her in death, leaving two sisters, Mrs. ALMA REEVES of Pulaski and Mrs. ALICE RADER of Keokuk.

At the age of 13 she united with the Methodist Episcopal church of Stiles, then under the pastorate of Rev. R. B. ALLENDER, remaining a faithful and devoted member until the time of her death, the length of her membership covering 63 years. She was always happy when it was possible for her to labor for her church and community, giving unstintingly as the occasion demanded. Her husband preceded her in death December 12, 1927. Funeral services were held at the home and were in charge of Rev. CHARLES J. FIX of Pulaski. Interment was made in the Stiles cemetery.

PEDIGREE CHARTS

We will be using a fairly standardized numbering system for our Pedigree Charts. If not standardized, it is at least used a great deal -- and seems to work.

Number one on the chart can be anybody, male or female, from there on in even numbers will represent men, odd numbers for women. A man's even number plus one will always indicate his wife.

To determine the father of any person on the chart, simply double the number of that person. For instance: number three on a chart is MARY WHITE. By doubling her number to six you find her father. Ad one to that number and you have MARY's mother as number seven.

ABBREVIATIONS

Abbreviations will be kept to a minimum. We'll use the standard: b. born, m. married, d. died, and a few others, but not so many that it reads like a foreign language -- especially for the novice. However, we will try to consistently abbreviate the states as follows:

AK AZ AZ CO CC CC CC DE FLA HI A ID	Alaska Alabama Arkansas Arizona California Colorado Connecticut District of Columbia Delaware Florida Georgia Hawaii Iowa Idaho	KY MA MD MI MN MS NC NC NC NC NC NC NC NC NC	Kentucky Louisiana Massachusetts Maryland Maine Michigan Minnesota Missouri Mississippi Montana North Carolina North Dakota Nebraska New Hampshire	NY OK PAISD SD TTT VA VT WA	New York Ohio Oklahoma Oregon Pennsylvania Rhode Island South Carolina South Dakota Tennessee Texas Utah Virginia Vermont Washington

I haven't moved off of peg one on my White line, but I'm sure enjoying hearing about your progress.

When we started THE WHITE TREE it seemed like a good idea to have a clearinghouse for this most illustrious name and I believe it's working -- at least for some of you. And I'm not the least bit discouraged about my own lack of progress. In fact, I'm just that much more excited about it.

This issue we've taken off on a couple of good long research projects that should be of some interest. As you know, we've tried different things to see what will be the most helpful for you. I like pedigrees and family groupings a lot, and I also like the "story" form that some of you work with. And of course, queries are the frosting on the cake, and I think probably the most productive.

But it's no secret, almost any bit of information helps someone, somewhere. So don't be bashful, keep sending in what you care to share, and we'll get it all in eventually. Also, there is no cost for queries, or any other part of the publication except for the annual subscription.

Las't issue, I said we would try to get up to four issues this year, but it doesn't look like we'll make it yet. We need more subscribers to get the cost down, and also to provide more research material. So don't forget to tell your "genie" friends about THE WHITE TREE, and don't forget to renew your own subscription when the time comes.

Heep in touch.

Pat

Happy holidays to each and every one of you.

THE WHITE SAGA OR TWO HUNDRED YEARS IN LOUDOUN COUNTY, VIRGINIA BY EVA E. KAUFMANN 1977 Submitted by: DON FRANCIS 426 E. 85th St. # 5-C NY, NY 10028

Introduction

Among the many settlers in the 18th century who purchased tracts of land in Loudoun County, Virginia from BRYAN FAIRFAX, heir of WM. HENRY FAIRFAX, was one RICHARD WHITE, hereinafter called RICHARD I to distinguish him from several of his descendants. Among other interesting tidbits about this early settler was the fact that he was either very jealous or very distrustful of his wife, REBEKAH. But more of this later. For the moment, I simply want to explain that RICHARD WHITE I is my earliest known ancestor, in the New World, that is. Our OWEN line goes back to the time of CHAUCER, of course. Read on, dear reader, and think not too ill of me, for I am not an ancestor snob but merely a tease. It's almost a universally known fact that all the OWENS in Wales are descended from OWEN of Glendower, a wild chieftain during the time of HENRY IV with such an eye for the ladies that the OWEN name multiplied mightily during his lifetime. Much later, around the turn of the 19th century, a young man from Alexandria, Virginia named EDWARD OWEN was to marry a beautiful girl from near Leesburg named RFBFCCA WHITE thus uniting Welsh and Scotch-Irish lines that would also multiply mightily and help populate the young United States. RICHARD WHITE I was REBECCA WHITE II's grandfather, and we have guite a lot of documentation on him after 1761.

RICHARD WHITE I's Origins - Two Possibilities

Two theories come to mind about RICHARD I's beginnings: that he came down from Bucks or Chester Counties, Pennsylvania with the

November 1983

Scotch-Irish migration which followed the Quakers; OR that he, an Englishman, came north from the Tidewater area where his family had lived for years before. Whether he came down from Pennsylvania with his parents, by himself, or as part of the Scotch-Irish immigres into the Shenandoah, or whether he had been elsewhere in Virginia (or even in Maryland) is a matter for further research, hopefully successful.

First Theory

JAMES G. LEYBURN in his book, The Scotch-Irish, A Social History, paints an illuminating picture of the character and wanderings of the lowland Scots, sojourning for over a century in Ireland, and eventually ending up in the fertile valleys and mountains of our Piedmont, thence filtering westward into America's heartland. My family tradition was definitely Scotch-Irish, both by word of mouth and by trait. I might add that the 19th century Kentucky branch, who considered themselves planters as opposed to us lowly Illinois dirt farmers, emphasized the Welsh ancestry of the OWEN-WHITE axis. Nevertheless, as I try to remember my maternal grandmother, her sister, my great-AUNT MOTTIE, and a few distant relatives in Missouri, it seems easy to associate their "American-Gothic" demeanor and temperament with the serious-minded frugality of the people LEYBURN describes. All evidence points to the WHITEs as being these rather dour Scotch-Irish even as I must again qualify this assumption with LEYBURN's warning that many of the Ulster immigres were from "merrie olde Englande" itself.

The waves of immigration of Ulster Scots to America were five in number: 1717-1718, 1725-29, 1740-41, 1754-55 and 1771-75 and provide a chart of the economic situation in Ireland at the time. They were, according to contemporary observers, an "audacious and disorderly" people, a description which doesn't sound much like the people in my family. But who knows? I am sure we have been considered quite audacious at times by some people, but disorderly? Loud, maybe, but not disorderly. Some of these "peculiar" people literally became "squatters" and took possession of Pennsylvania lands by this illegal method, finding it smiled upon by the Quakers who desperately wanted settlers. Several sources bear careful rereading for they mention specific WHITE families in the Philadelphia area: Scotch-Irish Pioneers in Ulster and America, CHARLES KNOWLES BOLTON, Genealogical Pub. Co., Inc., Baltimore, 1972; Scotch-Irish Society, 8th Congress; History of Pennsylvania, W.H. ENGLE, 1883; An Historical of Settlements of Scotch Highlanders in America Prior to Peace of 1783, J.F. MACLEAN, HELMAN TAYLOR Co., Cleveland, JOHN MCKAY, Glasgow, 1900. The BOLTON book specifically mentions "HUGH, HENRY and MOSES WHITE," and I note a MOSES WHITE on the Virginia Tax list of 1782-87.

Second Theory

Another version of the origins of RICHARD WHITE I came to me from Mrs. JAMES SHIELDS of Chattanooga, Tennessee. Mrs. SHIELDS is a descendant of one of RICHARD's sons, one SAMUEL, born April 1, 1751 (FAMILY BIBLE IN TENNESSEE). Mrs. SHIELDS has also researched RICHARD WHITE I, and among the many pieces of background material that she has unearthed is the account of events during the Bacon Rebellion of 1677. One DANIEL WHITE participated vigorously, and colonial literature contains an amusing, yet pitiful, letter from him asking not to have to appear in court because of pressing duties. Mrs. SHIELDS says there exist names of several WHITEs in Westmoreland County, Virginia records with given names the same as in our line. This fact might back up what Mrs. HUTCHISON of Leesburg told me about another line of WHITEs in Loudoun County. These people believe that their ancestor definitely came from the Tidewater area.

While there were many WHITEs in Loudoun County in the 18th and 19th centuries, and while it may very well be that they all had common ancestors, it has seemed fairly certain, up to now, that those settled around the Woodburn, Mt. Gilead area were a different family from those around Hillsboro.

RICHARD WHITE I Buys Land in Loudoun County

At any rate, our RICHARD I listed himself as being from Fairfax County when for five shillings sterling, he first leased 192 acres in 1761 from BRYAN FAIRFAX, heir of WM. HENRY FAIRFAX. A little less than a year later, the tract was released to him for 38 pounds following the laws regarding use leading to possession. (There seems to be a discrepancy in one of the dates of these two transactions in that the lease is dated Oct. 29, 1761 and the release Oct. 13, 1761. It would seem to me that the copier should have written the release date as 1762.) RICHARD declared himself as being from Loudoun County in the release, but if he was from Fairfax County at the time of the lease as he stated, he certainly is not referred to at all in the old will and deed books of the 18th century in the Fairfax County Colonial Room, indicating that there were no families of substance by that name unless they were in Alexandria, whose records are separate. The witnesses to both the lease and release (LOUDOUN COUNTY DEEDS C, p. 69), were SAMUEL MEAD, GILBERT SIMPSON and SOLOMON HOGE, the former two by oath and the latter, an "examined Quaker", by affirmation. This SIMPSON is very likely the SIMPSON who owned the present day Treddick property, and SAMUEL MEAD appears in Fairfax County records as well as in Pennsylvania records, apparently an on-again, off-again Quaker, according to his descendant, Mrs. ROBERT HILDENBRANDT of Vienna, Virginia. He also bought Fairfax land at about the same time as did RICHARD I. At one time, I thought my ancestor, BENJAMIN WHITE, son of RICHARD WHITE I, had married a MARY MEAD, but I had taken a statement out of a book without checking dates, and now I know I was entirely wrong. BENJAMIN's wife was indeed named MARY, but her last name is still unknown. Incidentally, the county clerk for the WHITE-FAIRFAX transaction was the ubiquitous CHAS. BINNS.

THE WHITE SAGA con't.

RICHARD WHITE I's Five Sons

RICHARD WHITE I was married to a REBEKAH who bore him five sons listed in his will as: BENJAMIN, DANIEL, SAMUEL, JOSEPH and WILLIAM. The last three all migrated to Tennessee where there are documented references to their lives, holdings and descendants. BENJAMIN and DANIEL are the two sons with whom we are concerned in this study as they are the ancestors of our Virginia neighbors.

The next documented date for RICHARD I after the 1761 purchase is a reference to him in the VIRGINIA TAX LIST OF 1782-87 where he is listed as having three in the household with no slaves. The third person could be a laborer or a young relative working as a hand.

RICHARD WHITE I Made a Will Almost Thirty Years Before His Death

After RICHARD had made a will in July of 1791 and had even listed an inventory which, it would appear, took in and put a value on the last nail and pail on his plantation, he lived on for almost 30 years. At any rate, the estate was to be divided among his sons with the house, stable and garden to go to his wife in her lifetime unless she should remarry. Furthermore, she was to have out of his estate "one riding horse, 2 cows, 5 sheep to be supported and fed by my son BENJAMIN" and that each of the sons . . . "was to pay her yearly two pounds if demanded." (LOUDOUN COUNTY WILLS D. p. 190) The plantation was to be sold after his wife's death unless she should marry in which case, the sale "must be made as soon as convenient" and she must be "dispossessed of the house, garden, sheep, cows" AND the money must cease being paid to her. The sons were listed in the following order: WILLIAM, DANIEL, SAMUEL, JOSEPH and BENJAMIN. Actually, said wife REBEKAH was elsewhere in the will lovingly referred to and was, together with sons BENJAMIN and DANIEL, the executrice of the will. The witnesses were SAMUEL COMBS, GEORGE NIXON and ABEL JANNEY, and the will was approved in court on 7/11/1791 on the motion of the executors. The inventory is dated 8/13/1791 and starts off with

November 1983

THE WHITE SAGA con't.

"wearing apparelle, one horse, bed and furniture, two beds and furniture, one calf, bed & furniture, two blankets, chest of drawers, ten pillow cases and tableclothes, etc" listing seemingly every single item on his farm, in his house, plus his livestock, all with a value placed on it.

RICHARD I's Death in 1817

After so carefully arranging his affairs, RICHARD proceeded to outlive his wife and to stay on for 26 more years, dying 12/23/ 1817. His will was recorded 2/9/1818, and the estate was settled by his son BENJAMIN with no mention of REBEKAH who was presumably dead by then. (LOUDOUN WILLS M, p. 240) Also dead were the sons SAMUEL, DANIEL and perhaps JOSEPH, who doesn't seem to get his fair share in the accounting. Funeral charges were $20.00 and the sale of real estate of 191 acres at $26.30 per acre amounted to $5,016.45 with the personal estate being $1,155.59. Perhaps this acreage represents, after all, the original 192 acres purchased in 1761. WM. CARR, THOMAS CARR and JOEL NIXON were witnesses. I still don't have documentation on the purchaser of this plantation, but I like to assume that it was BENJAMIN.

The Sons Who Trekked to Tennessee

Sons SAMUEL and JOSEPH did very well for themselves in Tennessee even to having a town named after one of them, namely Whitesburg, near Interstate 81 on Hwy. 13 between Rogersville and Morristown. SAMUEL died 9/23/1804 and is buried in Bent Creek Cemetery. SAMUEL and JOSEPH evidently married Loudoun County sisters, SARA and ELIZABETH NIXON, daughters of GEORGE NIXON who was a witness to the RICHARD WHITE will in 1791. WILLIAM went to Tennessee also, but at this writing, my documentation on him is only fragmentary. I remember reading an account of an estate settlement made for his widow in Tennessee, but I haven't copied it as yet. So that leaves DANIEL and BENJAMIN in Loudoun County where they continued to buy considerable acreage on their own, all in the neighborhoods of Woodburn, Mt. Gilead and Dry Mill Road.

THE WHITE SAGA con't.

DANIEL WHITE I, Son of RICHARD I

DANIEL married ANN JANNEY, daughter of WM. JANNEY. Her brothers were JESSE, STACEY, WILLIAM and ISAAC and her sisters were ELIZABETH HUGHES and LETITIA WILDMAN. The wedding took place 12/26/1772 (ENCYCLOPEDIA OF AMERICAN QUAKER GENEALOGY, HENSHAW & MARSHALL, VI, p. 517, Fairfax Monthly Meeting) 11 years after RICHARD had bought his Fairfax land, and ANN was promptly disowned 1/30/1773 for "marrying out of unity." DANIEL and his wife had two sons and two daughters: ANN, who married JOSEPH TAVENNER; ELIZABETH who seems never to have married; LEVI I and WILLIAM II who, as heads of families, occupied the estate houses on what are now the DOWLING and MECHLING properties respectively.

Will of DANIEL WHITE I

DANIEL died in 1815, his will being made 2/3/1815 (LOUDOUN COUNTY WILLS L, p. 138) and presented 3/13/1815 by STEPHEN KERRICK and BENJAMIN WHITE together with an inventory and appraisement made 3/20/1815 and a final accounting 2/11/1817 (LOUDOUN COUNTY WILLS L, p. 197 and M, p. 178). The executors were WM. and LEVI WHITE, the testator's sons. WILLIAM II was to receive the plantation and tract of land he then lived on (now Loudoun Orchards) which DANIEL said he had purchased from JOHN THRELKELD, and which joined lands of ISAAC HUGHES (relative of ANN JANNEY WHITE's brother-in-law?). ELIZABETH, apparently unmarried, was to have all the "hard money, gold and silver coin" in his possession, plus furniture. LEVI I was to have the plantation he (DANIEL I) then lived on (now DOWLING) except that the mansion was to go to his mother and sister with LEVI furnishing "them every necessity." Two and one-half acres of land from a legacy of his father, RICHARD I, and 41 acres bought from CHARLES MCNAMANY were to be sold as soon as convenient. This will has not been copied at length and in full, but it must be for there is a large inventory. The widow, ANN WHITE JANNEY, appears in the 1820 CENSUS: 1 F, 26-45 (her daughter ELIZABETH); and 1 F, 45 and over (ANN, herself). DANIEL I's daughter ANN had married JOSEFH TAVENNER, and I wonder if a later NIMROD TAVENNER who married BENJAMIN WHITE's granddaughter could be from this marriage. ELIZABETH doesn't seem to have married. Girls by that name who are listed in marriage records don't correspond in age; for example, the ELIZABETH WHITE who married ELI JANNEY in 1801 and who died a few years later (and who couldn't be BENJAMIN'S ELIZABETH either for his daughter was still alive in 1837 when BENJAMIN made his will). I would like to assume, however that the ELIZABETH WHITE who died in 1850 and was buried in the TAVENNER lot in the Goose Creek Friends Burying Ground is DANIEL and ANN'S ELIZABETH, a spinster buried by her sister, ANN WHITE TAVENNER (DAR FREEDOM HILL CHAPTER, 1964).

THE WHITE SAGA con't.

DANIEL WHITE I'S Two Sons - WILLIAM II and LEVI I WILLIAM Built Loudoun Orchards

WILLIAM WHITE II, son of DANIEL I, married an ANN MYERS (10/25/ 1797 - JEWELL MARRIAGE RECORDS), but a recent finding shows that BENJAMIN MEAD listed WILLIAM WHITE as one of his heirs (LOUDOUN COUNTY WILLS L, p. 271) in his will dated 9/10/1815 while a revision of JEWELL MARRIAGE RECORDS lists on page 35 a WM. WHITE marrying CHRISTINIA MEAD 5/9/1801. Whether this was a second `marriage for the same man, I don't know. Either marriage, or both, puts WILLIAM in the right age group. At any rate, WILLIAM II died in 1825. There is no will, so this may have been a sudden death due to an accident or a malady of some sort. The inventory is dated 12/12/1825 and was recorded 3/14/1826 (LOUDOUN COUNTY WILLS Q, p. 47-53). WILLIAM II's brother LEVI I was the administrator and ordered THOMAS ROGERS, WM. HOLMES, JAMES CARRUTHERS and ISAIAH POTTS to do whatever it was they did in such cases. Mention is made of the little cradles belonging to the daughters, EMILY and SARAH. Later, I found EMILY married JOSEPH LAYCOCK and SARAH married a BENJAMIN DAVIS. Years later, both girls were heirs to the large estate of their brothers, JOHN and DANIEL II. WILLIAM II's two sons were JOHN, born 1798 (CENSUS OF 1850) and DANIFL II, born 1800 (CENSUS OF 1850).

JAMES WHITE:

Founder of Knoxville, Tennessee

Submitted by: JOSEPH C. WHITE 105 Melody Drive Metairie, LA 70001

If one wanted to choose the individual who did the most for education in the territorial period and in the first years of Tennessee statehood, JAMES WHITE would make a worthy candidate.

The groundbreaking efforts of this founder of Knoxville included a prominent role in the establishment of Blount College. Not only was he a charter trustee, but he also provided the land on which the original college building was erected.

In fact, historian J.G.M. RAMSEY referred to JAMES WHITE as the one individual to whom "friends of learning" in the territory were most indebted.

If there had been a Blount College PTA, JAMES WHITE probably would have been its president. He was accustomed to the chairman's role, having been speaker of the Senate of the short-lived State of Franklin and later speaker of the Tennessee Senate.

People looked up to JAMES WHITE -- literally. An impressive figure, he stood six-four in an age when the average height was about a foot shorter. He had a military bearing, and in later life, snow-white hair added to his dignity.

This pioneer came to the Tennessee country when it was a part of North Carolina, not long after he was mustered out of the militia at the end of the Revolutionary War.

For his war service, WHITE was entitled to a land grant under the North Carolina Act of 1783. In August of that year, he and FRANCIS A. RAMSEY, a surveyer, and ROBERT LOVE explored the vicinity of the French Broad-Holston and saw the hills upon which he would settle three years later -- the site of Knoxville.

JAMES WHITE was born about 1747 in the part of North Carolina which became Iredell County. His father MOSES WHITE, came from Ireland about 1740 and lived in Pennsylvania for a short time before moving to North Carolina colony.

November 1983

Founder of Knoxville, Tennessee con't.

In 1752 MOSES WHITE acquired a 650 acre grant of land on Davidson's Creek; and nine years later he rounded out his plantation with the purchase of another 306 acres.

Shortly before JAMES WHITE married MARY (POLLY) LAWSON in April 1770, his father gave him 200 acres of the 650-acre tract, the deed being signed 18 February 1769, and the consideration being "for love". The plantation lay four miles east of Beattie's Ford, a Catawba River crossing.

Little is known about JAMES WHITE's Revolutionary War record. The North Carolina General Assembly in 1779 established the Mecklenburg Second Regiment of Militia, made up of six companies headed by six captains, one of whom was JAMES WHITE.

When he joined the militia, WHITE had a growing family of three children, with another being born in 1779.

In the social upheaval after the war, when thousands moved westward from the seaboard states, JAMES and POLLY WHITE crossed the mountains, taking their five children: MARGARET, HUGH LAWSON, MOSES, ANDREW and MARY. Two more, CYNTHIA and MELINDA, would be born in Tennessee country.

A presbyterian from childhood, JAMES WHITE recognized the wholesome effects of both church and school upon society. He gave the land on which the First Presbyterian Church was built and the cemetery lot adjoining it -- land he had cleared in 1785 for his first crop of turnips. And he made available at a minimal price the two-acre plot of which Blount College was built.

JAMES WHITE saw to it that his own children went to school His oldest son, HUGH LAWSON WHITE, studied with SAMUEL CARRICK before Blount College opened. Because records of the college range from sketchy to non-existent, it is not known whether any of his children attended the institution. However, his granddaughter, POLLY McCLUNG, was one of the five coeds who attended Blount College between 1804 and 1808.

HUGH LAWSON WHITE went on to study law and become a leading figure in Tennessee during the first half of the nineteenth century. He was a superior court judge, a Tennessee state senator, a U.S. district attorney, and a U.S. senator.

JAMES WHITE saw all but one of his children marry (ANDREW died unmarried in 1860 at age 27). The oldest, MARGARET, married CHARLES McCLUNG, later a Blount College trustee. HUGH LAWSON married SAMUEL CARRICK's daughter, ELIZABETH. MELINDA married JOHN WILLIAMS, later a U.S. Senator and veteran of the War of 1812. MOSES married ISABELLA McNUTT, daughter of a fellow Blount College trustee, GEORGE McNUTT. MARY married twice -- first to Dr. FRANCIS MAY, who died; and in 1820, shortly before JAMES WHITE died, to Judge JOHN OVERTON, a founder of the city of Memphis. CYNTHIA married THOMAS A. SMITH.

In his latter years, JAMES WHITE responded once again to the call for military service. In 1813, at 65, he obtained a brigadier-general's commission and took part in the war against the Creek Indians in Alabama under General ANDREW JACKSON.

JAMES WHITE's final years were spent in a house which he built near the banks of the Tennessee River. His declining years were saddened by the death of his wife, POLLY, on 10 March 1819.

In his will, WHITE asked that his plantation be sold, that his son, MOSES, keep "old Negro SALLEY" and $200 be set aside for her welfare. He willed the family Bible to HUGH LAWSON; and he asked that his personal library be divided equally among all his children.

On 21 August 1821, the Knoxville Register contained an obituary, beginning: "Died on Tuesday evening last (15 August), General JAMES WHITE, of this vicinity, in the 74th year of his age."

The founder of Knoxville and charter trustee of Blount College was buried beside POLLY, near his old fort, on ground where he once planted a crop of turnips.

Several of us are trying to sort out the WHITES in Chester Co. area of PA. It is astounding the number of "different" WHITES in that county ca 1720-1770! By 1770 many were spreading south and west. Some WHITES were Scotch-Irish who arrived with that tide of immigration beginning about 1720. Others seem to have been in the Phil-Wilmington area along the Delaware River in the late 1600's. Some were Quakers. Very soon these WHITEs began using the rivers to move west into the interior of Chester and Lancaster Counties.

We are looking for the family of WILLIAM WHITE both Sr. and Jr. who lived in West Bradford Twp, Chester Co. 1734-1766. They lived along Brandywine Cr. We feel sure WILLIAM Sr. was the one who married ELIZABETH FEW, dau of ISAAC and HANNAH (STANFIELD) FEW, 1 Dec 1727 at Old Swedes Lutheran Church in Wilmington, Delaware. Further we are even more definite that WILLIAM WHITE Jr., his son, is the one who married SUSANNAH THORNBROUGH/THORNBURY 5 Nov 1753 at Old Swedes. SUSANNAH was the dau of ROBERT and SUSANNAH (DAVIS) THORNBURY. WILLIAM and SUSANNAH WHITE moved to Guilford Co. ca 1768. WILLIAM had land in southwest Guilford Co. near the Randolph Co. line. Later his sons had land on Muddy Cr of Randolph Co. WILLIAM's will appears in Guilford Co. in 1806: It names sons: THOMAS, JOHN, WILLIAM JR., JAMES, JOEL and ISAAC. Daughters were ELIZABETH THORNBURG, HANNAH WALKER, MARY CARNEY, ALICE GOSSETT. SUSANNAH SANDERS is named but the relationship is not stated. Wife SUSANNAH is named. Sons THOMAS and JOSEPH were executors. It was witnessed by JOHN UNDERHILL and LEONARD MARSH. We know that these children moved to Hendricks and Wayne Counties, IN, Jefferson Co., TN as well as Knox Co., TN and Washington Co, AK.

Two or more remained in the Randolph Co. area of NC. Can anyone provide more information on this WHITE family? Later generations moved to Orange and Washington Cos., IN and to Marshall Co., IA as well as Kansas.

PEDIGREE CHARTS

We will be using a fairly standardized numbering system for our Pedigree Charts. If not standardized, it is at least used a great deal -- and seems to work.

Number one on the chart can be anybody, male or female, from there on in even numbers will represent men, odd numbers for women. A man's even number plus one will always indicate his wife.

To determine the father of any person on the chart, simply double the number of that person. For instance: number three on a chart is MARY WHITE. By doubling her number to six you find her father. Ad one to that number and you have MARY's mother as number seven.

ABBREVIATIONS

Abbreviations will be kept to a minimum. We'll use the standard: b. born, m. married, d. died, and a few others, but not so many that it reads like a foreign language -- especially for the novice. However, we will try to consistently abbreviate the states as follows:

AK	Alaska	KY	Kentucky	NY	New York
AL	Alabama	LA	Louisiana	OH	Ohio
AR	Arkansas	MA	Massachusetts	OK	Oklahoma
AZ	Arizona	MD	Maryland	OR	Oregon
CA	California	ME	Maine	PA	Pennsylvania

EDITORIAL

Welcome, new subscribers, and blessings on you, good-ol' renewers. It is so great to keep expanding -- maybe that next subcriber will be the one with your answers.

Answers come in nice packages, and the nicest for me -- and you, is my daughter has joined me in helping to keep THE WHITE TREE going.

Her name is LISA FOREMAN, and she's the one who started me off on our family search. We've enjoyed our genealogy for years, so I'm sure we're going to have fun working on THE WHITE TREE.

There's far more work than meets the eye in a publication, and I'm really back logged on some of it -- mostly the correspondance. But now, \mathcal{I} we can catch up.

A couple of reminders:

 Please type your material, if at all possible. We do want to use everyting submitted, but sometimes we just can't decipher your handwriting. And, mercy, we hate errors!

2) Remember there is no charge for queries or anything else in the publication. This is a publication for, by and of the readers. Whatever will help you in an exchange of information -- well, they're your printed pages, so send it in and we'll send it back out to everyone.

We keep getting requests for back issues. Yes, we still have every one at the same old price of $4.00 each. That is, until 1 July 1985, when they will go up to $5.00 each. We've been hit by rising costs like everyone else, and new subscriptions and renewals starting the 1st of July will go to $12.00. Aint it the pits!

Thanks for hanging in there, everybody. Keep your information flowing. And, enjoy.

The White Tree, Fall 1984, Vol. 2, No. 3.

- P. 15 More information on ZACHARIAH OWEN from Marland Hall of Records, St. John's College, Annapolis, MD shows that ZACHARIAH OWEN lived around Bladensburg, MD. (Prince George County) early in life and was a constable there. He also signed papers regarding the WIRTS family, a distinguished Maryland name. Other information on ZACHARIAH to be found in said Hall of Records.
- p. 16 Paragraph beginning, "I might again...", change "estate" to "holdings". These "holdings" were probably not large enough to be called an estate, although the yeomen farmers often called all their farms "plantations."
- p. 16 Paragraph 3. One of these "daughters" was to become the great-grandmother of MARILYN MONROE.
- p. 17 CATHERINE WHITE'S first husband was JEFFERSON BEALES (one of the BEALES orphans whose guardians were ADIN and RICHARD WHITE II) not MORTIMER. The latter did marry into a collateral relative of the WHITES and did buy at the JOHN WHITE personal property sale, however. A descendant of CATHERINE WHITE BEALES LOVELESS is DORIS JOHNSON of San Antonio, TX who knows the whereabouts of the ADIN WHITE Bible.
- p. 18 In wondering about the documentation for JAMES WHITE'S tragic death, what soldier(s) would want to report this to his (their) superiors for the record? Still surprising it is not printed somewhere in a news account. See CHARLES POLAND'S From Frontier to Surburbia, for an account of the skirmishes around Mt. Zion around 16 Jul 1864, when JAMES was killed.
- p. 19 the easiest way to organize a correct listing of ADIN and HANNAH WHITE'S children is to quote directly from ADIN'S Bible together with other sources such as cemetery records, court records, etc.

Since 1977, when "The White Saga" reached a first draft stage, more information has been uncovered by this erudite author. Eva E. Her address is: 20404 Aspenwood Lane, Gaithersburg, MD 20879 Editor

We note that there are varying degrees of discrepancies in the ages given in wills, headstones, etc. as compared with those in censuses. I am told that these variations were due to the fact that the censustakers talked to whoever was at home at the time, and sometimes a child, a grandparent, or even a hired hand or housekeeper wasn't always sure of the exact birthdates.

The marriages of GEORGE W. and CHARLES W. WHITE were interesting in that they seem to have married sisters, and within two days of each other. GEORGE W. m. HANNAH E. BEALES 28 Sep 1865 (JEWELL, MARRIAGE BONDS, p. 206) while CHARLES W. two days before had m. SARAH ELIZABETH BEALES 26 Sep 1865 (JEWELL, DITTO). I assume that these girls were related to MORTIMER BEALES, CATHERINE'S husband, quiet likely as sisters. I wonder why there was not a double wedding, or did one couple spur on the other? Could be that therin lies another tale.

VIRGINIA ELLEN, the youngest of the ADIN WHITE children m. THOS. N. CARRUTHERS (brother of WM. CARRUTHERS (?) who m. LOUISA WHITE) 22 Feb 1966. She d. 12 Sep 1896 (GROVE CHURCH CEMETERY HEADSTONE), and several of her small children who had died of diphtheria are buried near her. Her son, THOS. NIXON CARRUTHERS had four sons: ROBERT, EARL and HOWARD, all living in Purcellvile and THOS. F. of Charleston, WV. After MRS. THOS N. II died, THOS. N. II remarried, to a MRS. BOWMAN, and two daughters survive: a MRS. MANN and a MRS. JENKINS of Jetersville, VA (ACCORDING TO A TELEPHONE CONVERSATION WITH MRS. H. THE WHITE SAGA cont.

ADIN is Buried Along Side of his Wife, HANNAH

In Sep of 1862, between all the goings on in her busy family, and during the Civil War, HANNAH WHITE died and was buried in Grove Church Cemetery where her headstone can be seen today. It says she was b. 2 Jun 1798 and d. 20 Sep 1862 (Grove Church Cemetery) aged 69 years 3 mo. 18 days. At least she was spared the dreadful news of here first born son.

Now, ADIN had made his will 2 May 1864 two months before his son JAMES'S untimely death, and he must have died in 1867 as his heirs are listed 26 Feb 1868 (LOUDOUN COUNTY WILL 2 U, p. 118). I still have to ascertain the actual date of his death. Unfortunately, his headstone, next to HANNAH'S in Grove Church, is removed, but the base is still intact with a fine, sturdy tree growing right out of it. It may be covered by soil or vines, but neither my husband nor myself could find it.

Present HARRISON Property

Such a listing of 11 adult children raises the question of where did ADIN and HANNAH raise their large family. It must have been in the old part of the present HARRISON house. Reading the old deeds, we know that TUNIS TITUS bought the former ADIN WHITE farm from executor WM. CARRUTHERS 27 Nov 1867 (LOUDOUN COUNTY DEEDS 5 X, p. 88-91) at the very same time, in the fall of the year, that the executors of JOHN WHITE were selling his 224 acres, now called Loudoun Orchards, to his brother DANIEL II. Subsequent deeds trace the ADIN-WHITE-TUNIS TITUS property down to the HARRISON family. MRS. VIRGIE FLING, the granddaughter of TUNIS TITUS (and of JAMES WHITE, don't forget), remembers living in the old house for some years after her father, DAVID HIXON TITUS, moved there.

RICHARD WHITE II, and the Division of BENJAMIN'S 539 Acres

But now I need to go back and pick up ADIN'S brother, RICHARD II, about whom I know very little at this writing, but whom I plan to investigate more thoroughly in the near future. First of all, when their father, BENJAMIN, died in 1837 and willed his farms to sons ADIN and RICHARD II, we find they continued to live and farm the lands they were occupying. By 1849, however, they had gone to court and made the separation legal (LOUDOUN DEEDS 5 B, p. 247). "This indentur... 4th day of January in 1849 between ADIN WHITE and HANNAH, his wife, of the county of Loudoun...and RICHARD WHITE... whereas BENJ. WHITE by his last will bearing date 6th day of July 1827 did among other things devise to his two sons the afore said ADIN and RICHARD WHITE a tract or parcel of land situated...about 539 acres whereas ADIN and RICHARD have agreed and actually made partition and division... the part... allotted to said RICHARD is bounded as follows to wit..." Now this 539-acre-farm is what I'd like to be able to plot out from its description and compare with the three BENJAMIN WHITE purchases, plus the orginal BRYAN FAIRFAX sale to RICHARD WHITE in 1761. It could be that RICHARD I's original acres are included in the ADIN-RICHARD WHITE inheritance. At any rate, RICHARD II is a vague personality, and had fewer children, he and they seem more prosaic that ADIN'S lively brood.

In the 1820 Census, a RICHARD WHITE appears with 1 M 26-45, 1 F 10-16, 1 F 16-26 and 1 F over 45 and no slaves. Either he was living in another part of Loudoun from where most of the WHITES lived, or this is not or RICHARD II because the names near him are totally unfamiliar to the Woodburn, Mt. Gilead area.

The Census of 1850 sounds more like him. His number was #717 close to other WHITE numbers with ADIN'S as #715 and JAMES'S as #716. He is listed as being 50 years old, his wife MARY being 40, SARAH 18, ELLEN 15 and EDEN 16. By now "ADIN" is often spelled "EDEN" a corruption that carried over to the Missouri Owen descendants of EDWARD and REBECCA WHITE OWEN. The next credible documentation is the 1860 Census where he is listed as being 61, farmer worth $8,600 and $1,500, his wife being MARY J. and 44 (sounds wrong - maybe she is a second wife), ADIN C. 20 laborer (perhaps JAMES WHITE'S son), and ANN C. age 8 (maybe a grandchild). The SARAH, ELLEN, and EDEN of the 1850 Census are no longer there. You can see that I have a lot to do on RICHARD II. I hope that this study will be read by someone descended from this RICHARD II, or knows the line in some other capacity.

RICHARD II Retires but Acreage Stays in Family

The important documentation for RICHARD II, however, and one which provides a link with the present is that of his sale of his farm (LOUDOUN DEEDS 5 X, p 326). On 1 Mar 1868 RICHARD and MARY ANN WHITE sold to JAMES LAYCOCK for $8,842.71 176 acres certified 27 Mar 1868 by ELI HOGE, deed recorded 3 Apr 1869 by CHAS. P. JANNEY, County Clerk. "A tract...stone to be planted in the Titus line (formerly ADIN WHITE'S) thence with his line ... " (mentioning lines of BROWN, DAVIS, WYNKOOP, CARR, S. of Leesburg Rd., SAUNDERS, HUGHES, TUNIS TITUS, all of which place him to the NE of his brother The Yardley Taylor map confirms this if we read the initials ADIN. correctly). But note to whom he sold - th JAMES LAYCOCK, who had married his niece, MARY ANN WHITE, dau. of his brother, ADIN. As we follow this line down, we find JAMES LAYCOCK made his will 27 Oct 1891 which was presented 10 Apr 1899 by his two sons as executors, m. H. and JOHN F. (LOUDOUN WILLS 3 0, p. 291-292). There were also three daughters not named. The land was to be sold and proceeds divided. WILLIAM must have bought out his brother for he himself willed it to his son CARROLL LAYCOCK in 1942 (LOUDOUN WILLS 4 A, p. 360). All this can be verified and corrected by the LAYCOCK families, and I only hope it is not too much in error.

12

200 Years In Loudoun County

Anyway, I like to feel that the beautiful fields that I can see through hedge rows along Rt. 662, undivided and still farmed, at least in part are still in the WHITE family. All because a WHITE girl married a man who got them back into her family. And the HARRISON fields adjoining the CARROLL LAYCOCK holdings would seem to add up to part of the 539 acres BENJAMIN WHITE once owned. If RICHARD I'S Fairfax were even partly in this area, we can, indeed, say that there have been WHITES along Rt. 662 for over 216 years!

Closing Remarks

Apropos of JAMES LAYCOCK. I wonder if he was the son of the JOSEPH LAYCOCK who had earlier married WM. WHITE II's daughter, EMILY. It wasn't unusual for cousins to marry, of course, these two being a couple of times removed. Some recent notes from JEWELL CEMETERY LISTINGS, Fairfax Public Library, show a MARGARET MORTON LAYCOCK married to ADIN LAYCOCK. The "ADIN" makes if he could have been JAMES and MARY ANN's son even though he doesn't fit into the wills that I looked at. Perhaps I didn't brief them thoroughly enough. It will be easy, of course, to verify this with a census search.

I'd like to establish once more that TUNIS TITUS, who bought ADIN WHITE's farm, became the father-in-law of JAMES WHITE's daughters, MRS. VIRGIE FLING of Hamilton and MRS. ANNA CARNEAL of Leesburg. MRS. FLING has been most helpful to me in compiling this material.

In closing, may I briefly reiterate that this study is far from conclusive, needs confirmation of other searchers as well as probable correction of many facts, and the collaboration of others in delving into the past to find RICHARD WHITE I's roots. It is my hope that either my children or other younger WHITES will carry this on in case I am not able to finish in my lifetime. We need to search in PA, MD, elsewhere in VA and perhaps Ireland for starters.

JAMES M. WHITE, 1749-1815, died in Lancaster County, PA. JACOB WHITE, 1776-1870, born in Westmoreland County, PA, and JOHN WHITE 1802-1868, born in Westmoreland County, PA. Wish to correspond with anyone having any information about these ancestors of mine, or their families.

MARILYN WILLIAMS, R.R. #1, Box 38, Kingston, MO 64650.

For the past few years I have done extensive research on all WHITES in Howard, Boone and Randolph Counties, MO, circa 1800-1900 mostly original research in probate, marriage and land records. Have a great deal of information to share if anyone is interested and sends me an SASE. MR & MRS STEVEN K. WILSON, 1026 Eriel, Torrance, CA 90503.

My great-grandmother was SALLY ELLEN WHITE, born 1827 in York District, SC. Her mother was MOSS. She m. NELSON GRIGG. In 1850, she was a widow, living in bousehold of brother, DANIEL WHITE, with 2 children SALINA MALINDA and WILLIAM NELSON GRIGG. She died in Glen Rose, TX circa 1883. Would like to correspond with anyone about their family. MYRA DAVIS DIPPEL, 509 Hyde Park, Tyler, TX 75701.

Need info from descendents of early Bucks and Berks County PA colonists, especially those whose ancestors were named WHITE, with given names of MAHLON, WM., RICHARD. Anyone who knows anything about the very early Scotch-Irish or English who settled in these counties, or in NJ, please contact me. We now believe that RICHARD WHITE of THE WHITE SAGA went down to Loudoun County, VA with the Quaker migrations even though he was not a Quaker but may have married a Quaker who was subsequently disowned. Possible names associated with RICHARD: JANNEY, TAYLOR, HUGHES, HOLMES, CARR, MEAD, HOGE.

"A BEARD TO THE FLOOR"

Submitted by:

JUANITA TYLER KELLERMAN 745 West First Avenue Garnett, KS 66032

I'm not even sure I have a connection with the WHITES, but if I do I have something interesting, I think.

For 27 years I have traced my TYLER ancestry, though I must admit there are a few unanswered questions about family. My grandfather TYLER had died in 1934 before my span of memory. Grandmother TYLER had a picture which was always a curiosity to me and others of the family. The picture is of a man with a beard which more than reached the floor. Grandmother's story was that his name was WHITE and that he invented the sewing machine. That was all anyone ever got from her ann all that others of the family remembered by the time I was old enough to ask questions.

Recently KANHISTIQUE Magazine had a crossward puzzle with names of sewing machines - one of which was a TYLER. Over the years I have read all references in encyclopedias, and such about sewing machines. This i know - they do not agree on the inventor but none have ever said a man named WHITE was inventor, nor have pictures of inventors shown a bearded man with beard to the floor.

I wrote the compiler of the puzzle which appeared in October. His response was telling me that the TYLER machine was made in Cleveland, OH, by one A.G. MASON by his company of the same name and it later became affiliated with Domestic sewing machines.

The compiler sent my letter and his response to KANHISTIQUE which published both in the December issue. A man named JOHN FINNEY called me from Beloit, KS, to say he knew the man. FINNEY is 64 and as a lad saw the man in Beloit - and heard the same story, that he had invented the sewing machine; and FINNEY said his beard went all the way to the floor - and his name was MR. WHITE.

Only after that phone call which I had not looked at in years. The picture has been "fixed" in my mind many years - I'd recognize the man - or another picture - if photograph was taken in Beloit! - a fact I long had forgotten.

Of course I am attempting every means I know to obtain more info about the Mr. WHITE from Beloit, but until I somehow obtain a first name I really cannot accomplish too much.

MR. FINNEY said the story was told that WHITE was an alcoholic and had been sent to Beloit by relatives in MO(where my TYLERS lived) hoping getting away from the former enfironment would help. He was not incompetent by any means, said FINNEY, but it was said he had a guardian. That is the extent of FINNEY'S knowledge about WHITE.

My grandfather ELZA WM. TYLER was born in 1856 in Mercer Co., OH, the son of EBENEZER TYLER b. 1830 (where?) and grandson of EBENEZER TYLER, SR., b. circa 1787(where?) who lived in Butler and Mercer Co's., after 1830. EBENEZER TYLER JR. lived in Mercer and Auglaize Co's., and in Jackson and Clay Co's., MO. ELZA WM. TYLER, b. 1856, m. in Clay Co., MO. 1898 EMMA BAILEY

ELZA WM. TYLER, b. 1856, m. in Clay Co., MO. 1898 EMMA BAILEY b. 1869 in Kansas City, MO, and whose grandmother was NANCY ANN TYLER, b. 1780 in the KY wilderness where his father had gone with DANIEL BOONE. That line of descents is from ROBERT TYLER, immigrant in MD who came from England about 1650.

My photo of the MR. WHITE would appear to have been pre -1900, or else he posed in clothing and with background to appear in the era. He does not appear to be an old man -- the photo would compare with men who served in the Civil War and whose photos were taken during the 1880's. At least that is my opinion. That would have made him an old man by the time FINNEY, born about 1920, was a lad.
