Poll Book for Co Antrim General Election of 1776:
an index to the freeholders voting at this election
prepared by Terry Eakin

Before 1800 elections in Co. Antrim, and elsewhere in Ireland were dominated by the leading aristocratic land owners. The general election of 1776 in Co. Antrim was of particular interest because a large number of freeholders defied their landlords and took an independent stand. (It needs to be remembered there was no secret voting at elections in Britain until the Ballot Act of 1872.) As well as some freeholders, the Presbyterian church and some of the smaller landlords supported the independent 'interest' in this election. The land owners were represented by the Hon. Henry Seymour Conway and the Hon. Hugh Skeffington and the 'independents' were Martin Dalway and James Wilson.

This index has been prepared from a summary typescript version of the original poll book held on deposit in PRONI (D 1364/2/1). The typed version omits much information available in the original, including details of who individuals voted for, dates of registration and the value of the holding when registered, and also whether individuals were required to take the bribery oath or freeholder's oath. Any elector could demand that the freeholders oath be taken if it was thought that the terms on which a property was held did not constitute a freehold or that it was not worth 40 shillings a year.

The information in the original poll book is arranged in twelve columns. The third column gives the location of freeholds and the fourth the place of residence of the voter. (In the typescript summary these positions are reversed.) In most cases voters lived on their freeholds (residence was not necessary to qualify for the franchise as a freeholder). In all such cases the location is given only, once adding in square brackets [] the civil parish and the modern version of the townland name taken from the Topographical Index published as part of the report on the 1901 census (the last such volume covering all the townlands of Ireland). A number of placenames relate to areas smaller than a townland. We have tried to identify these by checking our unpublished index to sub-denominational names. The location of some unidentified placenames might be established by checking Ordnance Survey maps. This could be attempted, working from the original poll book, where the information is arranged largely on a topographical basis.

Where the location of the freehold and residence of the voter is identical to the civil parish the name is only given once.

We are grateful to the Director of PRONI, Dr G. Slater for making available a typescript version of this rare document (Ref. D 1364/2/1) so that the names of freeholder voters could be indexed.

For fuller information see Dr A.P.W. Malcomson's Irish Elections 1750-1832, a pack in the Education

Facsimile Series published by the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland and available from the Foundation at £3.50 Sterling.

An Index to Freeholders' Register of County Clare, 1829

Authors: Ireland, Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace (Clare) and Robert Kean, printed at the Clare Journal Office, Ennis (1830).

Prepared by Terry Eakin

A brief explanation of voting qualifications in the eighteenth century is given in the list of Tipperary freeholders in this volume. Forty shilling freeholders, both Catholic and Protestant, were given the vote from 1793 until 1829. In 1829, all forty shilling freeholders lost the vote when the requirement to vote was raised from 40/- to £10. This franchise to vote was changed several times to extend and broaden the voters' lists between 1832 and 1884. All adult males over twenty-one years of age got the vote in 1918 with women aged over twenty-one getting the vote in the 1920s after the Irish Free State and Northern Ireland were formed.

This County Clare freeholders' register for 1829 is important as it was thirty-five years after Catholics (as forty shilling freeholders) could vote but at the time (1829) when the £10 freeholder franchise qualification legislation disenfranchised all those whose freeholding was valued at less than £10. Those entitled to vote at elections was reduced from around 230,000 to about 16,000 eligible voters at this time.

Other census and census substitute-type records available for genealogists following from this time period are the tithe applotment books, Griffith's Valuation, and the 1901 and the 1911 census records. The 1901 census has been transcribed for County Clare in its entirety including persons, places, land and owners, buildings, etc., and will be published on CD ROM in mid-2004 by the Society of Australian Genealogists. More information and pre-publication notification list are available at www.sag.org.au

This list copied here was titled 'County of Clare, a list of Freeholders for the Year 1829'. It is in the Genealogical Office (GO Ms 443), and is available on the LDS FHL film No. 100181, item 2. The National Library of Ireland also has a copy of the printed list, NLI P 5556, on microfilm. After the surname and first name of the freeholder, the barony and place of residence are given. This is followed by the location of the freehold (if the two places are the same the name is only given once), the value of the freehold and the date on which it was registered. The baronies are abbreviated as follows: Bunra - Bunratty; Burre - Burren; Clond - Clonderalaw; Corco - Corcomroe; Ibric - Ibrickan; Inchi - Inchiquin; Islan - Islands; Moyar - Moyarta; Tulla - Tulla.

An Index to Freeholder's registers of Co Donegal 1767-71

In the eighteenth century the qualification for entitlement to vote at elections in counties in Ireland was the same as in England that is the forty shilling freehold. This meant property worth fifty shillings a year above the rent and was either owned outright or leased on certain terms. Leases for lives lasting during the lives of named individuals, qualified as freeholds for voting purposes and these were the most common form of tenure for Protestant tenants.

No Catholics could vote at elections between 1728 and 1793 nor could anyone married to a Catholic and it was not until 1829 that Catholics were allowed to sit in Parliament. In order to ensure that this regulation was strictly enforced from 1728 onwards voters in Ireland had to conform to an increasingly strict system of registration.

Significant numbers of registers giving the names and addresses of freeholders and also the location of the freeholds that entitled them to vote have survived for counties like Armagh and Down but for most other counties in Ireland only an odd volume survives.

Fortunately for Co. Donegal Tenison Groves, a genealogical researcher who worked in the Public Record Office, Dublin, before the destruction in 1922 transcribed some freeholders registers for the period 1761-1776 and these are available in the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland. (T808/14999 & Mic 353).

The Donegal County Library has part of an alphabetical index to the freeholders registers for that county for the period July 1767-April 1771. A copy of this volume entitled 'register of deeds' was presented to the Foundation. During his holiday here Terry Eakin, now of Sydney, and still our agent in Australia, prepared a digest of the handwritten index which is published below. The only detail omitted is the actual date of registration of the freehold. In most instances the location of the freehold is the same as the place of residence (abode). In order to save space, we have included in brackets the name where the location of any freehold is different from the abode.

Place names have been modernised and cancelled entries included in square brackets []. A sample entry from the original index is "Edward Anderson of Nether in the County of Donegal hath registered his freehold lying at Neuner in this county this 16th day of July in the year of our Lord 1767".

An Index to the Freeholders Registered to Vote at Elections, Co Fermanagh 1747-1768

IR
MISC

OCCGS REFERENCE ONLY

In the 1997 Directory our Australian agent Terry Eakin prepared for publication an index of registers listing the names and locations of freeholders in Co Donegal who were entitled to vote at county elections 1767-71 and he again is the driving force behind the publication of another index of the names of freeholders for Co Fermanagh of the period 1747-1768. As before this is based on a transcript prepared by Tenison Groves, a genealogical researcher who worked at the Public Record Office of Ireland in Dublin before the destruction of these freeholders' registers in 1922. His typed lists are available in the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland (T808/15063) and on this occasion Groves provides the additional date of registration. We have attempted to identify the modern equivalent of all placenames given and where possible identified the civil parish in which these were to be found. Placenames identified with confidence are given in the modern form (as recorded in the 1901 topographical index). Where we have difficulty in identifying a placename it is given in the original form with an attempted identification. Some placenames were not official townland names and could not be identified.

There are some obvious mistakes in the typescript or transcript, like the name of the village Maguiresbridge is given with a 'q' in place of 'a g'.

There also seems to be obvious duplication in the case of names like Harper and Hetherington. The name McBrian appears in the text under the letter B and McClintock and McCormick under the letter C.

In the eighteenth century the qualification for entitlement to vote at elections in counties in Ireland was the same as in England, that is the forty shilling freehold. This meant property worth fifty shillings a year above the rent and either owned outright or leased on certain terms. Leases for lives lasting during the lives of named individuals, qualified as freeholds for voting purposes and these were the most common form of tenure for Protestant tenants.

No Catholics could vote at elections between 1728 and 1793 nor could anyone married to a Catholic and it was not until 1829 that Catholics were allowed to sit in Parliament. In order to ensure that this regulation was strictly enforced from 1728 onwards voters in Ireland had to conform to an increasingly strict system of registration.

In future Directories we propose to continue publishing in this county series a selection of indexes to surviving pre-1800 registers of names of freeholders, Freeholder's registers and election pollbooks and "cheque books" are available for counties Antrim, Armagh, Down, Tyrone (barony of Dungannon only), Clare, Dublin, Kilkenny, Limerick, Louth (Borough of Ardee), Meath, Leix (Queen's), Offaly (King's), Tipperary, Waterford, Westmeath and Wicklow.

NOTES ON DATES

During part of this period two calendars were in use in this country. Until 31st December 1751 the Julian or Old Style was the legal calendar, which was eleven days behind the Gregorian or New Style used in all other European countries except Russia and Turkey. Moreover, until the end of 1751 the legal beginning of the year in Great Britain was Lady Day, 25 March, not 1 January as in other countries. In order to avoid confusion between the two calendars, until 1751 it was a common practice in Great Britain to date letters by both styles,

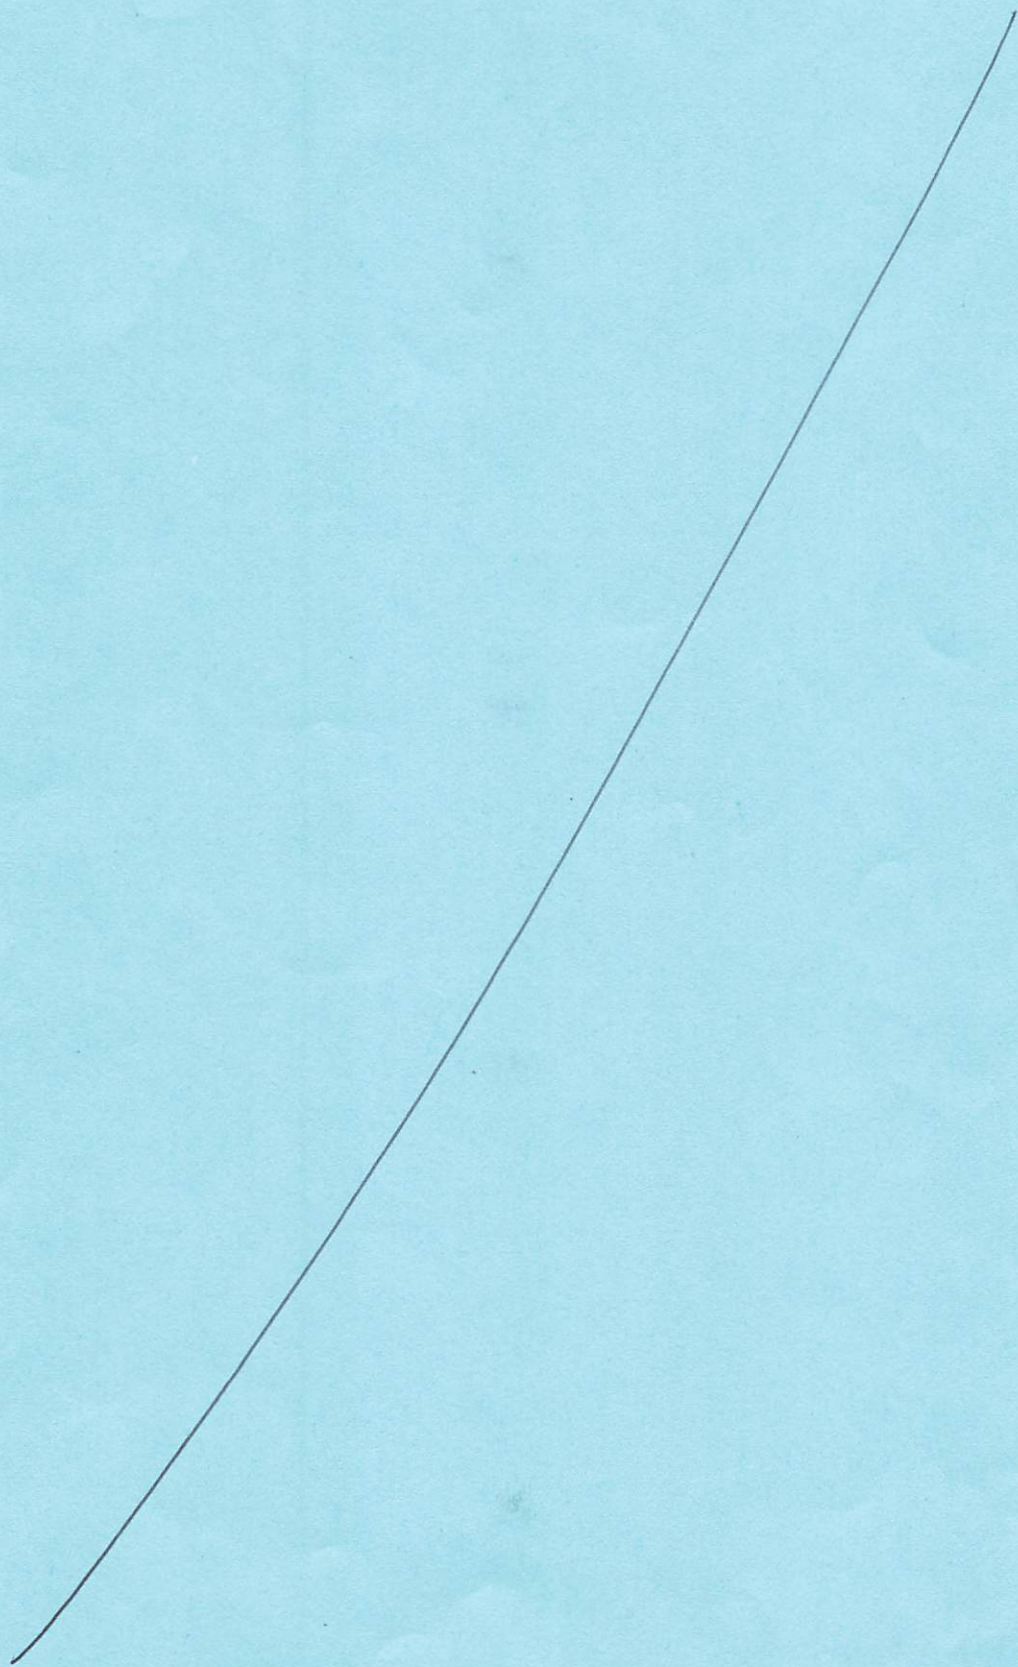

By Lord Chesterfield's Act of 1751 the Julian calendar was superseded by the Gregorian in this country. By this Act the day following 31 December 1751 became 1 January 1752 (not 1751); and, in order to correct the error of eleven days in the Julian calendar, the eleven days between 2 and 14 September were omitted from the calendar for that year, the day after 2 September 1752 being called 14 September (the succession of days of the week thus not being interfered with).

The dates of the month in this index are given according to the Old Style before 1752. Dates of the year are given according to the New Style througho

An Index to Freeholders' Registers of County Tipperary 1775-76

Prepared by Terry Eakin

In the eighteenth century the qualification for voting at elections in counties in Ireland was the forty shilling freehold. This meant property worth forty shillings above the rent and was either owned outright or leased on certain conditions. Leases for lives (usually three) lasting during the lives of named individuals, qualified as freeholds for voting purposes. Catholics could not vote at elections between 1728 and 1793, nor could anyone married to a Catholic, and it was not until 1829 that Catholics were allowed to sit in Parliament. This regulation was strictly enforced. From 1728 voters in Ireland had to conform to an increasingly strict system of registration. Some counties, such as counties Armagh and Down, have significant numbers of registers giving the names and addresses of freeholders and the locations of the freeholds that entitled them to vote, however many counties have only one or two registers (or transcripts of the originals) which survive.

Fortunately for County Tipperary, Tenison Groves, a genealogical researcher who worked in the Public Record Office of Ireland (now the National Archives of Ireland), before its destruction in 1922, transcribed some freeholders' registers for the period 1761-1776 and these are available in the National Archives, Dublin (M1321-2), the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland, Belfast (T/808/14999 and MIC/353) and the Genealogical Office, Dublin (GO Ms 442). Copies are in the Family History Library on British film No. 100181 available worldwide. This list copied here was titled 'A List of Freeholders of County Tipperary, 1775-76'. After the surname and first name of the freeholder, his residence is given. This is followed by the location of his freehold (if the two places are the same the name is only given once). A few of the freeholders have comments appended such as 'dead' or 'RC' (Roman Catholic). The list of freeholders is followed by a short list of rejected freeholders for Tipperary.

Carrickmacross School Records

Pupils Who Entered Trinity College, Dublin (1706-1909)

By Nancy Lee Bier © 2005

Active in family research most of her adult life, Nancy currently serves as 2nd Vice President (Education) of the British Isles Family History Society – U.S.A. She founded the Irish Studies Group within the Society 15 years ago and has served as director since then. Nancy teaches and lectures as well as travels to Ireland and Great Britain every year for on-site research.

In 1911 Rev. B. Moffett, incumbent of Carrickmacross Parish in County Monaghan, Ireland, put together a list of students who attended Viscount Weymouth's Grammar School and went on to study at Trinity College, Dublin.

According to the Samuel Lewis Topographical Dictionary of Ireland, Carrickmacross, in the Province of Ulster, was a market town and a post office. The free grammar school was founded about 1711 by Lord Weymouth and had been unused for a few years before 1837 but was rebuilt in about 1837 by the Marquis of Bath, a descendant of the original founder.

The earliest records no longer exist, and Rev. Moffett went to great lengths to collect information of those who went to this school. He was helped by the memories of those still living at the time who had personal knowledge of students and masters.

Rev. Moffett also gathered information from the Matriculation Books of Trinity College, Dublin. These books list those who attended Trinity College and give each attendee's place of education or his schoolmaster (I believe all the students were males). From that information he deduced who went to school in Carrickmacross. As the Rev. Moffett says in his foreword to his work, "...it is more than likely that this little publication contains some errors". I can well imagine it also contains some omissions.

The students are listed in the appended table (next page). I have alphabetized the entries given in Rev. Moffett's work to be more useful to the searchers who will most likely be of Scotch-Irish or Ulster Scots descent. Trinity College only allowed Protestant students during this time period. Rev. Moffett's complete work also gives the Christian names and occupations of each student's father. Included in his footnotes are various mentions of grandparents, degrees achieved by the students, dates of degrees awarded and other helpful notes. There is also a list of the masters of the school and the dates they held the position.

I highly recommend looking at the microfiche copy of this work which is number 6035485 in the Family History Library Catalogue of Salt Lake City (the LDS system). The title is "Viscount Weymouths' Grammar School, Carrickmacross; A list of Pupils Who Entered Trinity College, Dublin from 1706-1909".

The fiche is in the Los Angeles Family History Center and can be ordered into any Family History Center.

An Insight into Irish Septs

By Jerry Kelly © 2005

The author has been researching the tribal origins and ancient genealogies of Irish families for over 30 years. He teaches Irish Gaelic to adults and children at The Gerry Tobin Irish Language School in Babylon, New York, where he also leads regular workshops for advanced Irish language students in seanchas, which in the Gaelic scholastic tradition is the indivisible combination of law, history, and genealogy.

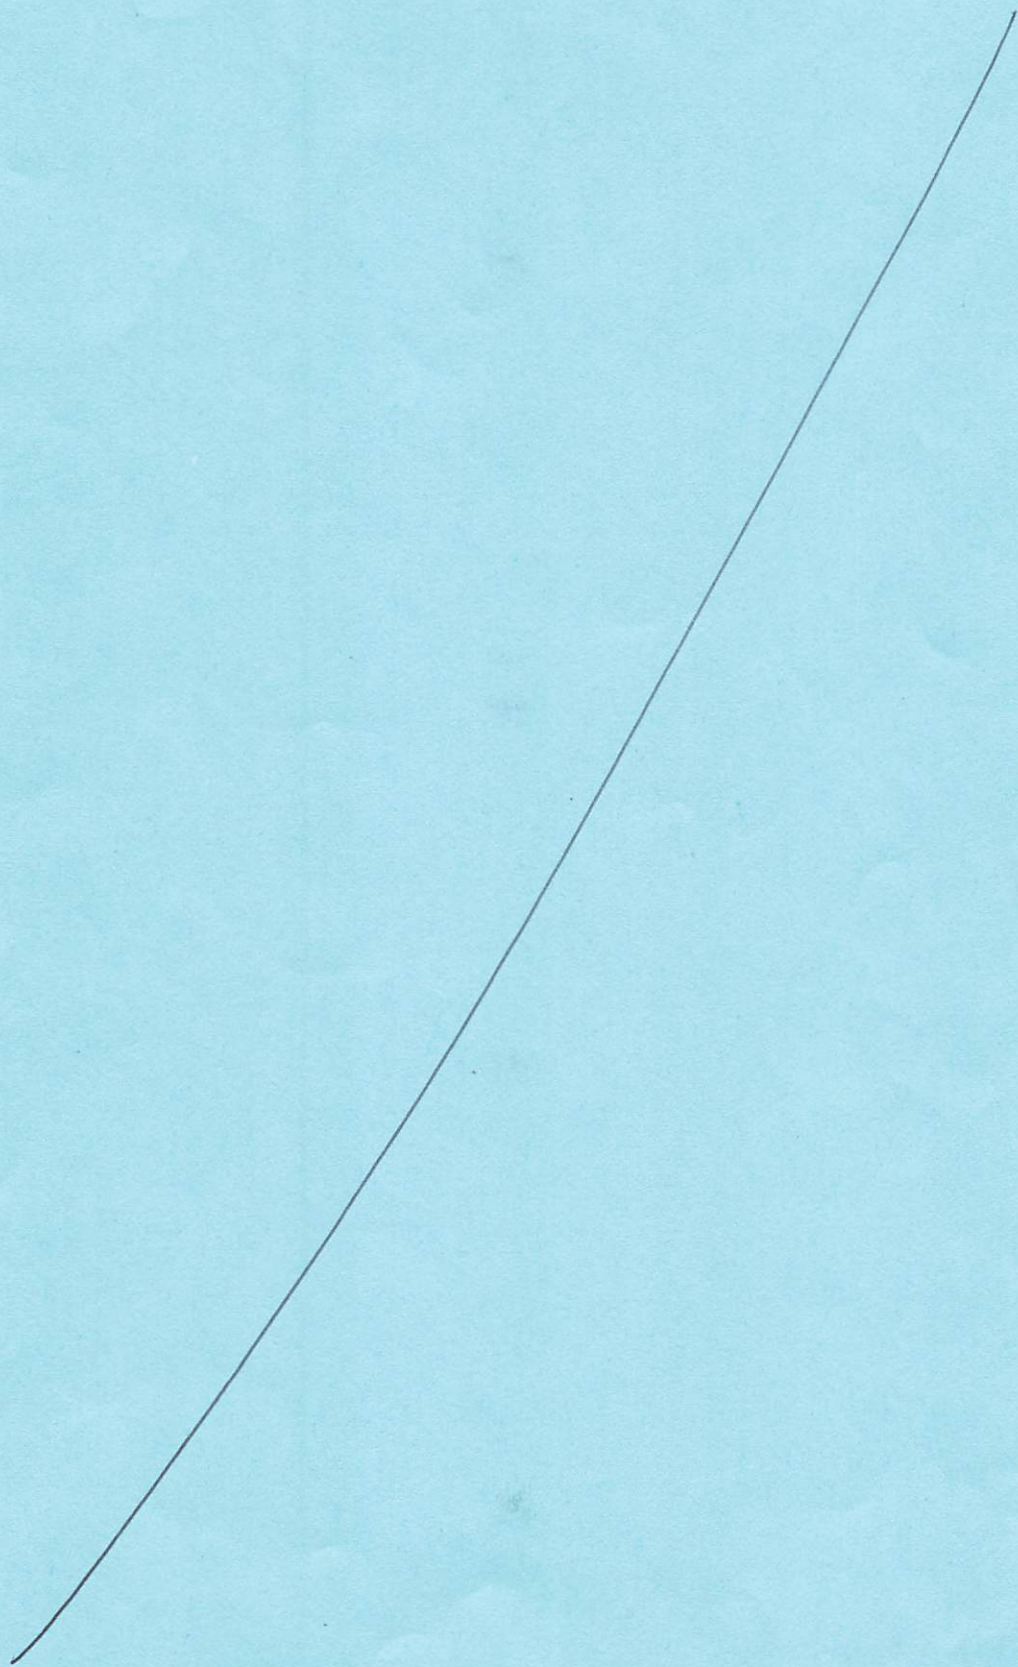

Editor's Note: When BIFHS-USA board member Joan Semper posted a question about septs and clans to Jerry Kelly via the [IRISH-AMERICAN] Mailing List (accessible via the IRISH-AMERICAN Mailing List and Lookup Service website at <http://www.connorsgenealogy.com/IrishAmerican/>), she was delighted with the response and wanted to share it. Jerry graciously agreed to allow the Society to publish the material, and here it is. Thank you, Jerry and Joan.

Sept is an English word which means "a division of a tribe, especially in ... Ireland". Unfortunately, my American Heritage Dictionary can't confirm an etymology, so I'll guess it derives from the French word sept for "seven". It has been used in Ireland to describe kinship groups since the middle ages. I'm guessing the Normans chose the word because it reflected the fact that certain well-known Irish tribes like the Laois were divided into seven sub-tribes, clans, or dynasties.

The great 20th century Irish genealogist Edward MacLysaght liked to use the word sept rather than clan when he talked about Irish kinship groups because he didn't want the word clan to make people think they were dealing with a Scottish clan or a Scottish-style clan. There seems to be a difference between Scottish clan structure and Irish clans and tribes, but I'm no expert on Scottish kinship groups so, in honesty, I don't know what these differences are. But I do think I've noticed that at least some Scottish clan/sept relationships are based on political alliance rather than blood. For example, are the Hutchinsons as a sept of the McDonnell clan actually descended from the McDonnell clan, a blood branch of it? In the Irish system, a sept or clan always descends in blood from its tribe, even if, as occurred rarely from time to time, a false genealogy had to be invented to prove that claim. For example, the Cinéal Chonaill ("Kinship of Conall") are actually part of the Uí Néill In Tuaiscirt ("Descendants of Niall in the North") because they actually descend from Niall. In contrast, the Uí Bhriúin Umhaill appear to have been given a false genealogy in the 7th or 8th century to make them a branch of the Uí Bhriúin ("Descendants of Brion") of the Connachta ["Descendants of (the god) Conn"]. But fragments of the original Uí Bhriúin Umhaill genealogy indicate that they actually descend from the Partraighe ["People of (the god) Part?"], one of the ancient tribes conquered by the Connachta.

With regard to how clans and tribes (or septs if that word is preferred) were

Irish County Maps Showing the Locations of Churches

Because the Irish government did not begin recording births or christenings, marriages, and burials for all Irishmen until 1864,¹ the major sources for these vital records are kept by the different churches in Ireland.

Before using church records, however, the researcher must be able to answer these two questions:

1. What churches were located in or near my ancestors' localities?
2. How do I locate their records for research?

The purpose of this paper is to help researchers identify the churches in the area where their ancestors lived.

Civil parishes are areas of local government administration, the names and boundaries of which seldom correspond to the parish boundaries of the churches in the area. It is often easy to determine the name of a civil parish, as explained in step one below. However, the task of determining which churches existed in an area is more complicated. These maps simplify the task somewhat. Following is a brief explanation of how to use these maps along with details of how to locate the church records of the various denominations. The explanations contain book and film numbers in the Genealogical Department Library. The numbers, however, will be of little value for those researchers not living near the main library or one of its branches.

How to Use These Maps

Step 1: Determine the name of the civil parish (an area of local government administration, not church jurisdiction) and county for the town or place where your ancestor lived by locating it in the following topographical reference book:

Alphabetical Index to the Towns and Townlands of Ireland (Dublin: Alexander Thom and Co., 1877; available on film 476,999 item 2 or book Ref. 941.5 X2ci).² This book, taken from the 1871 census, contains several separate indexes. The first is the separate "Index of Townlands," which is the major portion of the book. If you do not find your locality in this index, check next in the "Index of Parishes."

¹The civil registration of non-Catholic marriages began in 1845.

²The General Topographical Index to Townlands and Towns of Ireland (issued with the 1901 census of Ireland, House of Commons sessional papers, 1904) can also be used to determine civil parish boundaries. This is on film 865,092. It has also been reprinted in microfiche format by Irish Microforms, Ltd., Dublin, Ireland.

If that fails, check under all possible spelling variations.

Step 2: Look at the alphabetical listing of civil parishes following the appropriate county map in this research guide. Coordinates are given for the location of each civil parish on the map.

Step 3: Locate your civil parish on the map using the coordinates found in step two. Letters such as R or E appear in the locations within the civil parish boundaries where a church was located. A key, which explains what denomination each letter represents, appears on the map.

Step 4: To find the exact names of the churches on the map that apply to your problem, refer to the alphabetical listing of civil parishes. In addition to the names of the churches, an attempt has been made to determine dates of known records for Church of Ireland and Catholic records. No dates are given for other denominations because of a lack of reliable source materials. Generally speaking, few Presbyterian registers begin before 1819, and Methodist registers usually do not begin before 1816. Further details are given in the accompanying explanations on each denomination.

Note: When more than one church of the same denomination exists within a civil parish, they are listed as they appear within the parish from left to right, beginning at the top and working towards the bottom of each parish. Blank spaces indicate that there was no entry for that place and denomination in Thom's 1853 Directory. The name of a church is sometimes followed in the listings by a number in parentheses (Ballyeaston [2]). This indicates the number of churches of the same denomination in that place.

Notes on the Compilation of Maps

These maps were compiled by using the various churches listed in Thom's Irish Almanac and Official Directory for 1853 (Dublin: Alexander Thom, 1853; 941.5 E4th 1853; film 990,105). The churches were then plotted on civil parish outline maps based on the Index to the Townland Survey (Dublin: Ordnance Survey Office, 1833; Q 941.5 E7o). As nearly as possible, the churches have been plotted in their appropriate locations in relationship to the civil parish boundaries. No effort has been made to plot churches that were extinct in 1853 or that were established after 1853. Thom's 1853 Directory was used because it was the most readily accessible edition for the compilers.

These maps should be a significant help to researchers attempting to locate Irish church records. Any corrections and additions from readers will be carefully considered for future revisions.

Locating the Churches of the Various Denominations

Finding Records of the Church of Ireland

From 1560 to 1871 the Anglican Church was the Irish state religion and, therefore, was called the Church of Ireland; however, its membership included only a minority of the Irish people. For example, in 1834 only 11 percent of the population belonged to this church,³ but because it was the state sponsored religion, entries can be found in the parish registers for persons of other denominations. This is especially true of burial registers, because Catholics were often buried in Church of Ireland parish churchyards. In any research problem, it is wise to search the relevant Church of Ireland parish registers regardless of your ancestor's known religious affiliations.

The listings accompanying these maps give the known commencement dates of Church of Ireland parish registers as they appear in the Twentythird Report of the Deputy Keeper of the Public Records in Ireland (Dublin: Her Majesty's Stationery Office, 1891; 941.5 A5r 23rd). An asterisk (*) has been placed by the names of parishes where registers were destroyed in the Public Record Office fire of 1922. When searching for the records of one of these parishes, determine if a transcript or printed copy was made of the burned registers before the fire. Such copies may still be in the hands of local ministers, local libraries, or in the two Irish public record offices.

The following suggestions should be followed to locate Church of Ireland parish registers for a particular parish:

1. Check the card catalog of the Genealogical Department Library of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints or one of its branch libraries to see if they have copies of the parish registers.
2. One of the Irish public record offices may hold copies. The Public Record Office of Northern Ireland, 66 Balmoral Avenue, Belfast, BT9 6NY, Northern Ireland, has an extensive collection of photostatic and microfilm copies of many of the existing Church of Ireland registers for Northern Ireland. The Public Record Office of Ireland, Four Courts, Dublin, 7, Ireland, has a collection of parish registers and transcripts.
3. It is also possible to write to the minister of a parish to ask if he would search his parish registers. Ministers' addresses can be obtained from The Church of Ireland Directory (Dublin: Universal Publishing Co., published annually; Ref. 941.5 K22ci 1976).

Finding Roman Catholic Parish Registers of Christenings, Marriages, and Burials

As of 1834, 81 percent of the Irish people belonged to the Roman Catholic Church.⁴ Even though the Catholics were a majority, the government had long mounted heavy persecution against them in favor of the established Church of Ireland. Because of this heavy persecution, very few Catholic church records exist before 1800. In 1703 the Penal Laws, forbidding Catholics to keep registers, were enacted. These laws were repealed in 1829 to emancipate Catholics. As a result, most registers commence in the first half of the nineteenth century. Another result of this intense persecution is the large number of Catholic entries, especially burial entries, in the Church of Ireland parish registers. After 1745 marriage between a Catholic and a Protestant had to be performed in the established Church of Ireland to be legal, although a marriage of two Catholics in a Catholic church was legal.

In sparsely populated areas, the Catholic ministers may have traveled periodically to several parishes on a circuit. The people also may have traveled to find work or to visit relatives. Therefore, you should also search the records of nearby parishes in addition to the ancestral parish. Sometimes a search of all parishes within a five- to ten-mile radius may be necessary. If the ancestors lived near a larger town or city, the records of those places should also be searched.

The commencement dates given on these listings are taken from a manuscript list compiled by the National Library of Ireland when they filmed a large number of the Catholic Registers (those for the diocese of Dublin were not filmed).⁵ Another source of commencement dates for some of the registers is in the published results of a survey made by the Catholic Record Society of Ireland entitled "Parochial Registers" (compiled by James ⁴Akenson, p. 165.

⁵A summary of this list is entitled "List of Roman Catholic Parishes in Ireland with Registers Commencing Before 1900" (Ref. 941.5 K2L; film 973,221 item 3; not applicable for those in the diocese of Dublin).

MacCaffrey, Archivium Hibernicum, vol. 3, 1914, pp. 366-406).

To find the records of the Catholic parishes, the following suggestions are made:

1. The original Catholic registers are with the local parish priests, and frequently the priest will consent to search the registers. Addresses of parish priests can be obtained from the Irish Catholic Directory (Dublin: James Duffey and Co., published annually; Ref. 941.5 K22c 1972).
2. The National Library of Ireland has microfilmed many of the Catholic parishes (except for the diocese of Dublin). These microfilms can only be searched through the Genealogical Office, Dublin Castle, Dublin, Eire.
3. A check in the card catalog of the Genealogical Department Library or one of its branch libraries should be made for copies of the parish registers.

Finding Records of the Presbyterian Church and Secession Presbyterian Churches

In 1834, 8 percent of the Irish population was Presbyterian, with the majority located in the northern province of Ulster where many Scotch (Scottish) Presbyterians had been transplanted in the early 1600's. At least 50 percent of the counties of Down and Antrim were Presbyterian in 1834.⁶

The earliest known Presbyterian Church registers, which are for Antrim, County Antrim, commenced in 1674. Unfortunately, the majority of the parish registers did not exist before 1819, when the ministers were required to keep registers of baptisms and marriages. Until 1844, Presbyterian marriages were not legally recognized; therefore, for legal reasons (to maintain inheritance and property rights) many Presbyterian baptisms and marriages occurred in the Church of Ireland. In 1845 the government began the civil registration of protestant marriages nationally.

Even though parish registers may not exist for the desired time period, other uniquely Presbyterian records may help the researcher. Foremost among these would be the Session Minute Books, sometimes called the Kirk Session Minutes. These are minutes of meetings of the elders of each parish, wherein they discussed new arrivals to the parish, the births or marriages of congregational members, candidates for church discipline, and other matters.

Another useful record is the Certificate of Transference, which is useful for tracing migrations. When a person moved from one congregation to another, he often carried a letter or certificate indicating his good standing in the previous congregation and his freedom from church censure. Internal controversies resulted in the "secession" movement in 1746. However, the group that seceded reunited with the main group in 1840. Therefore, the congregations listed on these maps as Presbyterian could include some of these "secession" congregations who had rejoined the main body by 1853. The term secession, as used for congregations on these maps, refers to various Presbyterian groups who had not rejoined the main movement as of 1853. For further details on the specific names of these groups refer to Thom's Irish Almanac and Official Directory for 1853 (Dublin: Alexander Thom, 1853; Ref. 941.5 E4th 1853; film 990,105), pp. 486-93.

To find the records of any of the secession or Presbyterian churches mentioned on this map, the following suggestions are made:

1. Find the history of the congregation of interest in one of the following reference books so that you can determine the establishment date and other necessary background information:

Rev. W. D. Killen, History of Congregations of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland and Biographical Notices of Eminent Presbyterian Ministers and Laymen (Belfast: James Cleeland, 1886; 941.5 Kdki; film 908,207). This contains histories on most of the non-seceding congregations.

Clark H. Irwin, A History of Presbyterianism in Dublin and the South and West of Ireland (London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1890; 941.5 K2ir; film 824,101). This is excellent for its histories of congregations outside of Ulster province.

Rev. David Stewart, The Seceders in Ireland with Annals of Their Congregations (Belfast: Presbyterian Historical Society, Church House, 1950; 941.5 K2ste). This is a must for locating information on the numerous secession churches.

Rev. James M'Connell, Presbyterianism in Belfast (Belfast: Davidson and M'Cormack, 1912; 941.61/B1 K2mc). This contains good histories of the many Belfast congregations.

2. A check in the card catalog of the Genealogical Department Library or one of its branch libraries should be made to see if they have copies of the parish registers.
3. The Public Record Offices in both Belfast and Dublin may have copies of the desired parish registers. Their addresses are given in the preceding explanation on Church of Ireland records.

4. The minister's addresses can be determined by checking The Presbyterian Church in Ireland Directory (Belfast: T.H. Jordan, published annually; Ref. 941.5 K22pr).
5. A few registers are deposited with the Presbyterian Historical Society, Church House, Fisherwick Place, Belfast, Northern Ireland. A list of the registers deposited as of 1962 can be found in Margaret Dickson Falley's Irish and Scotch-Irish Ancestral Research, Vol. 1: Repositories to Records (Evanston, Ill.: author, 1962), pp. 403-10.

Finding Wesleyan Methodist and Primitive Wesleyan Methodist Society Records

The Wesleyan Methodist Societies began in Ireland in 1747, but the majority of their members belonged to the Church of Ireland. The Methodists did not begin to develop their own churches until after 1816. A division of the Methodist Society also occurred in 1816; the Primitive Wesleyan Methodist Society members retained their belief that they should attend the established church, and the Wesleyan Methodists began their own churches and congregations. From 1816 exist some of the registers of baptisms for the Wesleyan Methodists. The Primitive Wesleyan Methodists continued with the established church until 1878, when they united with the Wesleyans.

The following suggestions are given for locating Methodist ancestors:

1. Search all of the nearby church records for your ancestors. This is the only option for finding Wesleyan ancestors prior to 1816 and for Primitive Wesleyan ancestors between 1816 and 1878.
2. Obtain advice from the public record office in Belfast or Dublin as to the location of any existing records. (Addresses of the record offices are given in the section on Church of Ireland records.)
3. Locations of current Methodist Churches may also be determined from Thom's Directory of Ireland, Volume II: Professional Directory (Dublin: Alex Thom and Co., published annually; 941.5 E4tho 1960 v. 2).

Finding Records of the Society of Friends (Quakers)

The first Quaker meeting was established in Ireland in 1654 at Lurgan in the county of Armagh. Most of the early members were of English origin, having come to Ireland during the Commonwealth of Cromwell (1649-60). Only a very small portion of the Irish people belonged to the Society of Friends.

The registers of births, marriages, and burials kept by the Society of Friends are among the best church records in Ireland. In 1671 the national meeting recommended that minutes and records be kept. The earliest known existing registers are those for the Mountmellick Meeting beginning in 1667; however, the registers often have many retrospective entries such as those for Mountmellick where the earliest entry is for a birth occurring in 1615. Further details about the records for each congregation appear in Olive C. Goodbody's Guide to Irish Quaker Records, 1654-1860 (Dublin: Irish Manuscripts Commission, 1967; Ref. 941.5 A2q).

The following suggestions are given for locating Quaker records:

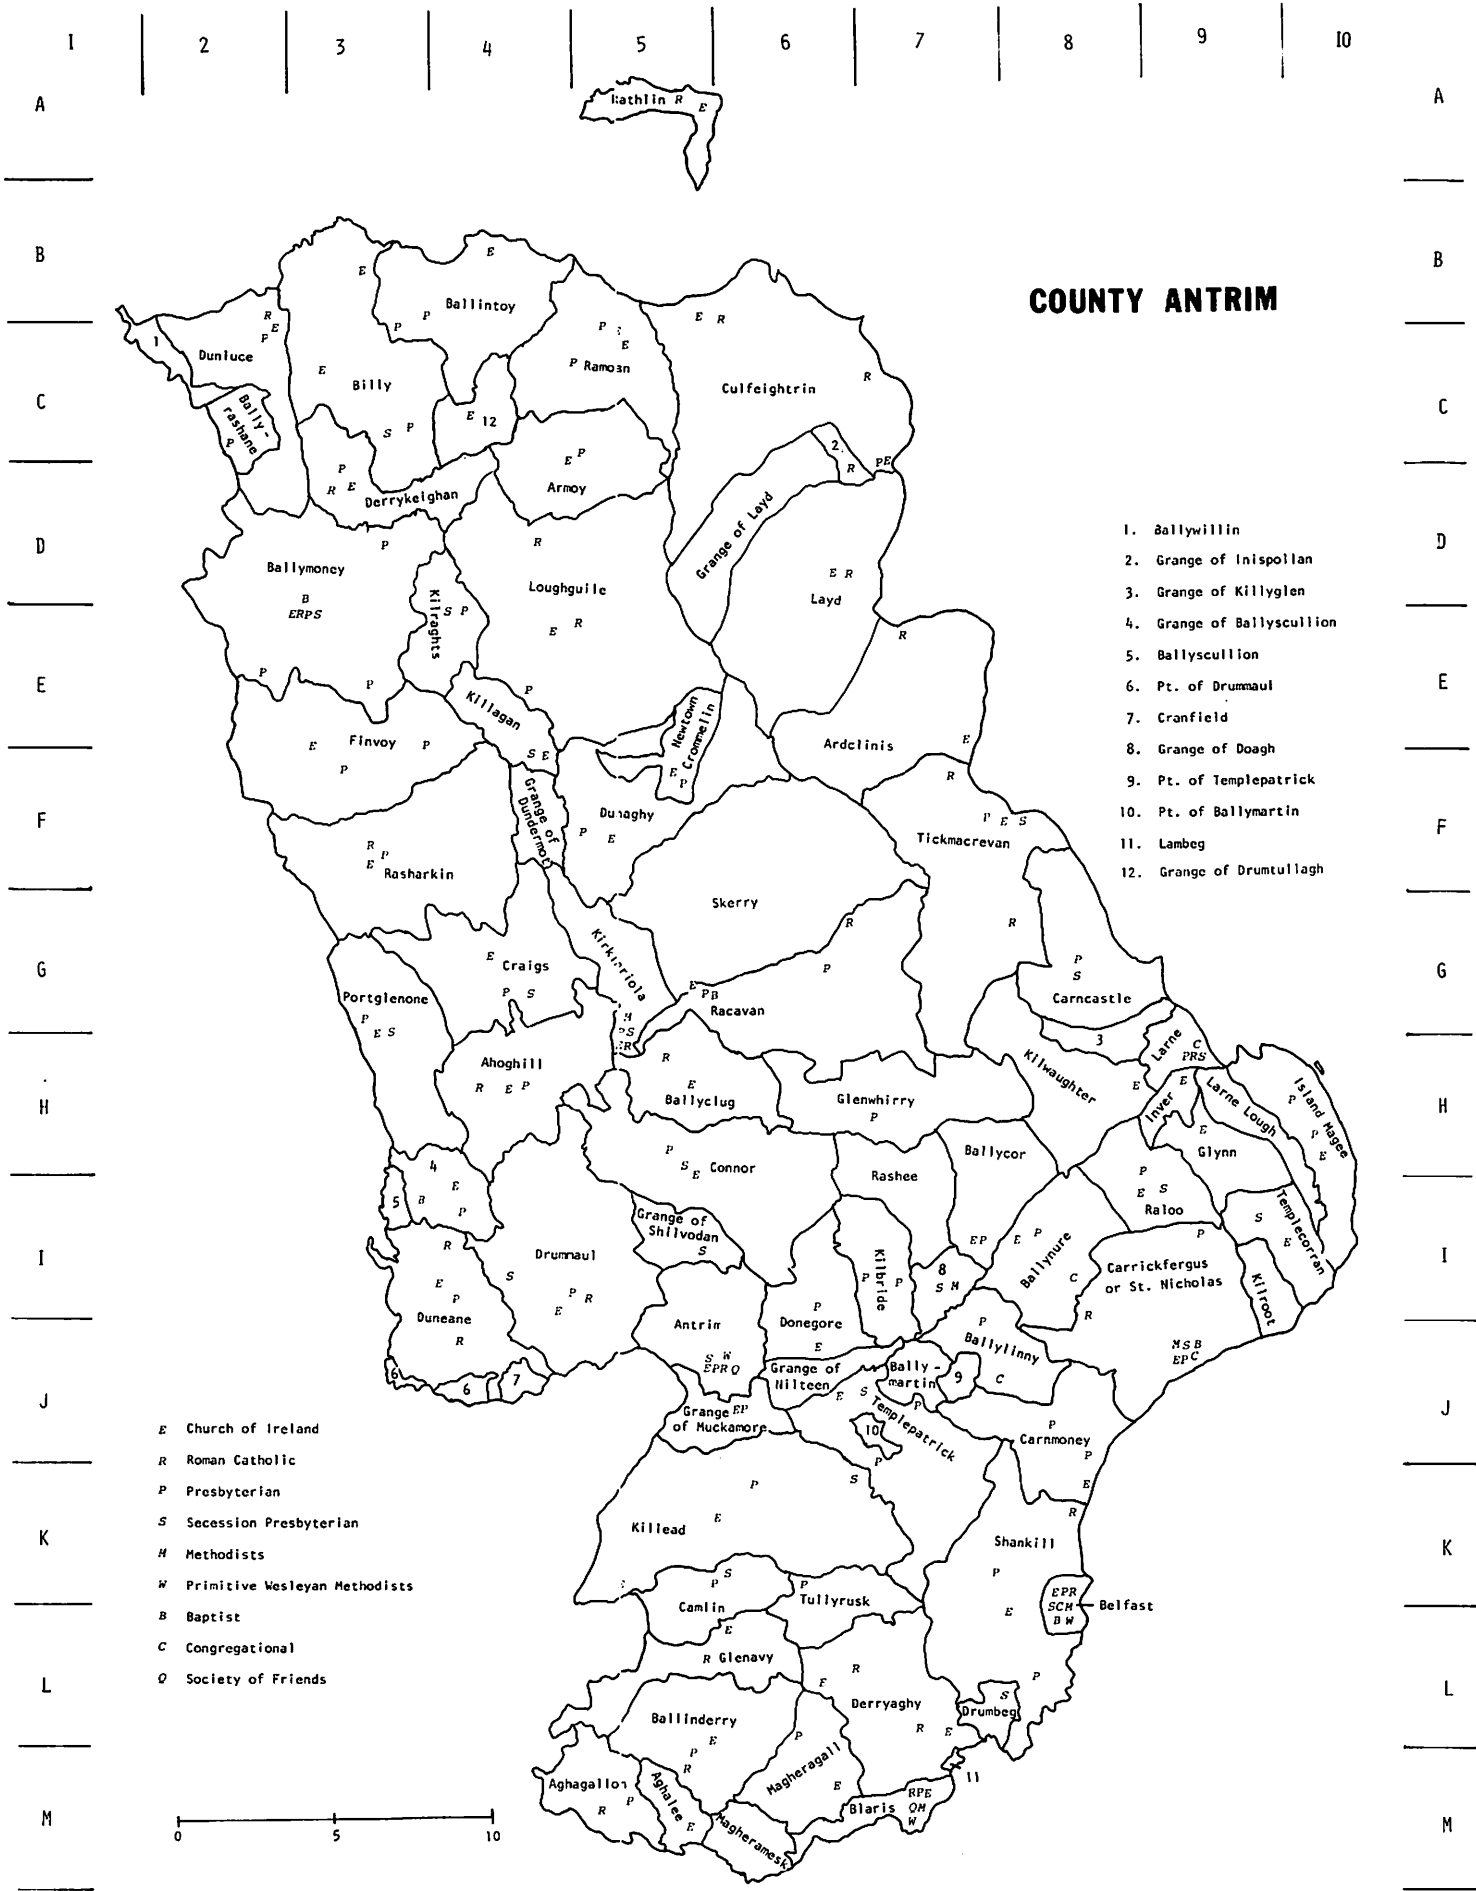

1. The Genealogical Department Library has microfilms of transcript copies of the original records arranged in alphabetical order.
2. Records and Indexes for Northern Ireland are at the Friend's Meeting House, Railway Street, Lisburn, County Antrim, Northern Ireland.
3. Records and indexes for Eire are housed at the Friends' House Library, 6 Eustace Street, Dublin, Eire.

Finding Records of Baptists and Congregationalists (Sometimes Called Independents)

The members of these churches originally came into Ireland with Cromwell's army in the early 1650's. Because of religious persecution and emigration, very few records exist for these churches before the late 1700's. Their membership was very small. Most of the existing registers are still in the local custody of the ministers. A listing of some of the present congregations can be found in Thom's Directory of Ireland, Volume II: Professional Directory (Dublin: Alex Thom and Co., published annually; 941.5 E4tho 1960 v. 2).

The Estates of the Earl of Anglesey in Ireland: The Rent Roll of 1713-1714

Transcribed by Harry Albert Hollingsworth

Contributed by Nancy Lee Bier

For those who never had the opportunity to work with Harry Hollingsworth, I must say you missed a very unique individual. Harry was likely one of the very best Irish researchers I have ever met. He was, as he often said, cantankerous, single minded, and prejudiced in many ways. No one, however, could doubt his love of the Irish and their history.

Harry taught me much of what I know of Irish history although he certainly had his own opinions as to the hows and whys of Irish culture and history. However, he did teach me a love for the country and of the people of the past.

One of the most important things, I think, that Harry told me was "whenever you go into a library or archive, spend time just browsing catalogues, drawers, maps, books and periodicals because one never knows what may be found".

I believe all of Harry's work in genealogy was done before the age of computers. Certainly he never learned how to use one. His notes were always handwritten and then, if necessary, he used his faithful old typewriter. Upon his death, he left file drawers filled with his notes and his conclusions. These notes and files were then given to me by Donald Hirst, Harry's good friend. I, in turn, have deposited them with Dr. Arlene Eakle for safe-keeping.

In addition, Harry published the Hollingsworth Journal for many years. Copies of the entire collection of journals can be found in the Salt Lake Family History Center as well as the Los Angeles Regional Family History Center. His work was also put onto microfiche and is available throughout the LDS system. Harry did work for many well-known and famous people and helped others publish their books on their families. He has been missed by many of us these past years.

This manuscript, prepared in 1968, was given to me in 1979, and a copy was put into the Los Angeles Regional Family History Center about the same time. Harry asked me to publish it for him after he was gone. I hope it serves someone in their search for their ancestors. Harry would like that.

Introduction

Records like this are a boon to the genealogist. The original public records of Ireland, deposited in the historic old Four Courts in Dublin, perished in the early afternoon of June 30, 1922, during the Civil War between the armed forces of the Irish Free State and the Irish Republican Army, the latter having mined the Public Record Office with high explosive charges, which they detonated. Since that ugly day, valiant efforts have been made to replace many of the records. This piece in question is a part of the records of the Annesley Collection currently housed at the Bodleian Library, Oxford. Kind permission to microfilm it was granted by the Brigadier the Viscount Valentia, a descendant of the original family whose estates extended to Ireland.

This Rental Book is about 7 by 5 inches, mostly written in a very clear, printing style. Over some of the entries comments are written in a cruder hand, of a later date. The accounts appearing on pages 22 and 23 herein are also in this later handwriting. I have tried to transcribe everything as it appears in the Rental. There is no paging in the original. Two columns are in the original which are not transcribed here: a column for the “actual value” of the holding, and the “duties” payable thereon. These aren’t generally useful to genealogists, though we beg the pardons of the historian and the sociologist.

I have added a name and place index. Townlands are unique in Ireland and the Isle of Man. In the early days, the names of these small units or towns were seldom standardized such as they have been since about 1841. For this reason, I have placed the present spelling of all townland names beside those used in the County Wexford Rent Roll, in this index. The authority I used is the Townland Index Map, County Wexford, Ordnance Survey of Ireland. Maps for other counties represented were not available here. (Please note that townlands are never shown on ordinary maps of Ireland. This sad fact, more than many others I can think of pertaining to Irish research, is one of the most aggravating challenges to the correct location of a given family. The principal reason here is that a scale of one inch to the mile is almost absolutely necessary to show the boundaries and names of the many thousands of townlands in proper perspective.)

The Annesley family was one of the most prominent in Irish affairs for several centuries, members thereof bearing several titles, to wit: Lords Barons of Altham, Earls of Anglesey, Lords Viscount Valentia, and Earls of Mount Norris. My ancestors (Hollingsworths, Earls, Godkins, Tackaberrys) were their tenants. Thus is revealed my reason for making this copy available. It is hoped fervently that others so interested may try their hand at reproducing Irish records. There are tens of thousands of Americans and Canadians whose ancestry traces to The Old Sod, who would eagerly pursue the research but for the monumental obstacles jutting up before their path. Many are not as determined — nay, let us say, fanatic — as is this writer, to rush ahead (where angels fear to tread) and begin the work of hacking down those obstacles. But we leave this subject for the politician, or for later introductory remarks to other presentations like this one.

The Rental Book of the landed gentry was not intended to be of particular genealogical value. However, the type of lease in general use on farmland in those times (with a beginning, indeed, even before Anglo-Saxon times in England) called the “Lease for Lives” was, of necessity, of a genealogical content. Before about 1800, these Farm Lets were for three lives. In the Rental, under “Observations”, the Agent for the landlord kept a record of the type of holding. Some of the tenants held contracts for years; others, leases for years; and the rest, leases for three lives. As can be seen, most of the lives were those of the tenant, his wife, and/or several of his children. Many of these leases were never registered at Dublin, even though a Registry of Deeds had existed there since 1708. Leases for less than three years were not subject to registration.

I regret to inform the reader that there were thousands of persons living on these lands, whose names do not appear here. The names here are those of the chief tenants. Many of them had undertenants, subject to their own arrangements. (Many of these arrangements in the form of leases of various kinds are registered at Dublin.) There were also many other folk who had no holding whatever upon the lands, living as “cottiers” or cabin holders upon the land, farming or fishing or pursuing other activities on a very minute scale. Generally, these are the “Real Irish”, the Gaelic people, mostly of Roman Catholic religion. During the period in questions, these last named were under suppression by the British government for various real or imagined causes. However, one will see from the names in this Rental that many Real Irish were chief tenants — the Kavanaghs and the Byrnes (O’Byrne) being two in question. Then too, the FitzGerald — Anglo Norman in origin — are represented. But the names Walker, Stevens, Bennett, Langley, and Moore are most likely of English origin, brought over during the Ulster Plantation of James I or with Cromwell or King William’s armies, and some others simply as well-to-do farmers or tradesmen seeking better accommodations. It should be noted, though, that the name of any person shown here in no way indicates his religion. Other records must be used in connection with this to ascertain those facts.

There are other records in the Annesley Collections, deposited in the Public Record Offices of Belfast, Dublin, and the National Library of Ireland, as well as the portion at the Bodleian. These include deeds and leases. The Rental may indicate the existence of other records of value. This piece is given call number MS D.D. Valentia A-10 should anyone care to call and see the original.
