HOW ARE SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBERS CODED?

This comes from Sandra Hoover!

The Groups of digits in Social Security Numbers are assigned to geographical locations. Their assignment structure was similar to the way that zip codes were later assigned (in particular, groups of the first three digits increase from east to west across the continental USA as do the ZIP codes). The group of first three digits is called the Area Number. These area numbers were assigned according to state (or territorial) boundaries. There were some exceptions such as the series 700-729 was assigned to railroad workers regardless of location (this series of area numbers was discontinued in 1964 and is no longer used for new SSN's). Area numbers assigned prior to 1972 are generally an indication of the SSA office which originally issued the SSN. Since 1972 the area number in SSN's corresponds to the residential address given by the applicant on the initial application for the SSN. As the population grew in many areas the original range of number assignments was eventually used up and those original area number assignments have been augmented as required. Area numbers of "000" have never been used and all the original assignments were less than 585 (The only exception is for the 700-729 railroad worker series).

Visiting the Everton Genealogical Collection

By Jennifer Francis Pina

On my research trip to Salt Lake City in early October, I decided to visit the Everton Genealogical Collection. It's currently housed on city property in Logan, Utah. Since I had a bit of time in the area (eight days), it made sense to break up the trip with something different. I had been reading about the collection in genealogy magazines and online newsletters, and knew that I'd regret not making the effort. The materials that make up the archive were collected by the Everton family, during the long period of time they published The Genealogical Helper. Authors would send a copy of their works to be reviewed in the magazine. So, the books here are in good shape, having had very little use. There are also odds and ends of newsletters, unpublished manuscripts, surname notes, and small publications. It was the policy of the Evertons not to pass judgment on materials, so they encouraged everything: scholarly works, self-published books with no documentation, and bundles of notes. All can be useful in some way.

I drove in a rental car from downtown Salt Lake City, north and east through Box Elder Canyon, to the beautiful Cache Valley and Logan. Although part of the local library system, the Everton Collection is housed at one end of the Justice Building, where court is held. This means there's a security check, so be prepared leave behind any gadgets that might not pass inspection, like pocket knives or scissors. Inside, the part of the building where the collection is located has a rather unfinished feel, with exposed insulation and the like. The librarian on duty that day, Jason Cornelius, had been most cordial in helping me to arrange my visit. He is the author of many of the magazine articles that appear about the collection. With a dedicated staff of volunteers, but a small budget, he is making headway in getting the place in shape.

When the collection was donated to the city, it wasn't organized in any fashion. The staff is still attempting to get the online catalog complete. It will become easier to assess whether a trip to the library will be of benefit, as more entries are made. My experience was that it was a pleasant journey, and a fun way to spend the afternoon, but I didn't seem to find any materials that wouldn't have been at the Family History Library in Salt Lake City. I cheerfully admit, however, that I may not have spent enough time combing through the card catalog ahead of time, or looking through the un-cataloged filing cabinet full of surname folders.

A word of caution, doing this from Salt Lake City involves a 150-mile round trip, which is a pretty big gulp in one day, especially if you've already done some research in the morning. If I were pressed for time in SLC, I'd probably pass up the Everton Collection. The ideal way to see it would be if you could spend the night in Logan, or could stop on an RV trip. The library is generally open weekday afternoons from 1-6, except Mondays. It's open Tuesdays until 9:00, and one Saturday afternoon a month. Complete information, and a link to the online catalog, is at: <http://library.loganutah.org/genealogy/>.

(Thank you, Jennifer, for sharing this information with us. Hope we all get a chance to take this genealogical adventure. I have really enjoyed browsing the collection through the Internet Link—Editor)

This is a Cemetery...
Lives are commemorated
Deaths are recorded
Families are reunited
Memories are made tangible
and
Love is undisguised.
This is a cemetery.

Communities accord respect
Families bestow reverence
Historians seek information
and
Our heritage is thereby enriched

Testimonies of devotion, pride and warmth are carved in stone to pay warm tribute to accomplishments and to the life--not the death--of a love one.
The cemetery is homeland for memorials that are a sustaining source of comfort to the living.

A cemetery is a history of a people --a perpetual record of yesterday and a sanctuary of peace and quiet today.
A cemetery exists because every life is worth loving and remembering--always.

Looking for information concerning John Warren Bradbury, parents were Nathan Bradbury and Mehitable Warren. John was born 1 Jan 1826 in Brown county Ohio. He married Mary Jane Elliot 16 Feb 1853 in Pike county Illinois. I am looking for information about Mehitable Warren's parents and the parents of Mary Jane Elliot. Many thanks for any hints or leads.

Now when that letter your great-great-grandmother wrote goes up for sale, you'll be the first bidder!

3. Set your search for a rare book in motion.

In the 1820s, the Morgans, my immigrant ancestors from Wales, settled in Athens, PA., a small town on the Susquehanna River. On a visit to a large library, I found several references to the family in a history of Athens published in 1908. A few years later, I bought my own copy from a used-book dealer on the Internet. Once I was able to page through the book at my leisure, I came across several other references to the family and even a silhouette of the Morgans' brother-in-law. It's great to have the luxury to read the book whenever I please.

Browsing in used-book stores is fun, but the Internet lets you search instantly for a rare genealogy or local history book carried by vendors around the world. And if nobody has it on hand right now, you can set up a search alert that will notify you the minute the book goes on sale.

Abebooks, <http://www.abebooks.com/> the self-described "largest online marketplace for books," gives you access to 12,000 independent booksellers from around the globe. If your search for a publication comes up empty, Abebooks gives you more options. First, try clicking on "Find it at a local library" to search WorldCat, a catalog of more than 9,000 libraries' holdings. If that search isn't successful, click on the Add to Wants button, and once Abebooks finds a match it will notify you by e-mail.

Alibris, <http://www.alibris.com/> another large online book dealer, has a similar feature. If your search turns up no matches, click on Book Fetch, enter your e-mail address, and Alibris will notify you by e-mail if the book becomes available.

Now I'm waiting for Abebooks or Alibris to locate another rare book—the published transcriptions of the church records from the Morgans' hometown, Glasbury, Wales.

Let Google Alert and Google Web Alerts scour the Net for you every day.

Google <http://www.google.com/>, the leading Internet search engine, has already indexed more than 4.2 billion Web pages. But the World Wide Web is constantly growing, so it's worth repeating your Google searches regularly to find new matches. You don't have to do them manually, though—thanks to Google Alert <http://www.googlealert.com/>. This neat service (not affiliated with Google) can perform searches for you automatically.

Just register with Google Alert and enter up to three Google searches to be performed daily. You could search on a last name and a place name, such as Hall and Johnstown and "New York"; a full name, such as "William E. Pennington"; or an uncommon last name and the word genealogy, such as Crume and genealogy. Remember to put quotes around exact phrases. Google Alert immediately will e-mail you up to 50 of the best matches for each search. Then the service will rerun the search every day and send new matches to you by e-mail.

This spring, Google started experimenting with its own search robot, Google Web Alerts <http://www.google.com/webalerts>. The service works the same way as Google Alert, but offers weekly updates, in addition to daily ones. I recommend experimenting with both these search tools to see which one works best for you. You'll still want to search Google when you have time, but by putting Google Alert and Google Web Alerts to work for you, you'll be less likely to overlook new Web sites that mention your family.

So set up your search robots, sit back and wait for them to reel in the results. And to save even more time for genealogy, why not invest in a Roomba, the new housecleaning robot that vacuums your abode unattended, or adopt a Poo-chi, a robotic dog that doesn't need feeding? The future is now! (But I'm still waiting for that flying car.)

Time Capsule for a Summer Project

Looking for some summer fun for you and family members to do together? Look no further than creating your own family Time Capsule! Keep these things in mind when creating your time capsule:

Documents should be on acid-free, archival-safe paper. If they are handwritten, use pencil because ink fades over time and can also emit fumes that may damage other items in the time capsule. Photos should be black & white - color photos won't last as long and they also use chemicals that may affect other articles in the capsule. Newsprint should be avoided because the paper is highly acidic and will disintegrate over time. Once again, the fumes emitted can damage other items. Other items to avoid altogether are tapes, videos and CD-ROMs. They do not age well and its "unlikely playback devices will be available for those objects anyway" once the capsule is opened. Items that you put in the time capsule should be in archival quality containers or envelopes. Consider including a lock of hair or fingernail clippings or kept baby teeth. From an article I read, "By the time the capsule is opened, there may be much more sophisticated testing facilities available. Hair samples may help identify and correct a genetically-based medical problem for a descendant."

The following are a list of sites where you can learn more about time capsules and even purchase time capsule kits OR MAKE YOUR OWN!

Pamela Bell Dallas,
 Association of Professional Genealogists, on NUCMC

Are you aware of the National Union Catalogue of Manuscript Collections (NUCMC)? Addressing the members and guests at the May meeting of the NVG&B Society, Ms Dallas indicated that many researchers do not know about this "goldmine for genealogists" of historical documents which can be located using the Library of Congress catalogue of collections. The many and varied items, oral histories, diaries, scrapbooks, personal papers, church registers, just to name a few, are located throughout the United States and its territories. Repositories could be churches, libraries, historical societies, universities, museums, etc. All must be open to the public or researchers at least on a part time basis. All have been cataloged by NUCMAC which has offered the service beginning in the 1950's. Printed volumes of the index, available in large libraries, were discontinued in 1993. All data from 1986 onward is available on line.

Free searches may be made using RLIN and OCLC databases.

Using overhead projection visual aids Ms. Dallas demonstrated the online search. She pointed out that relevant materials often have been deposited in facilities far from their original source but can be tracked down using NUCMC. After finding an entry of interest she discussed how to contact its facility. An inventory or photocopy can be requested. Personal visits can be made if convenient.

The appreciative audience had many questions answered Ms. Bell invited further contact at pbdallas@earthlink.net.
