THE CIRCUS FAMILIES OF PETERSBURG, ILLINOIS
By Janice Bonilla

For some 50 years, from about 1875 through the 1920s, Petersburg, in Menard County, Illinois, was a bustling center of activity for the world of the circus. It housed ring barns in which performers practiced and locals enjoyed exciting performances. Many well-known circus families and individuals made Petersburg their home. Descendants of these families can be found throughout Menard and Sangamon counties. This ongoing study seeks to trace the ancestry and descent of these circus performers.

In Part One of "The Circus Families of Petersburg," (see Illinois State Genealogical Society Quarterly, vol. 38, 3:6-10) I traced the roots of the Petersburg, Menard County, IL, circus to one woman, Parthena Jane (McHenry) Lamkin Shipp whose two sons, Harry Lamkin and Edward Shipp, are rightfully considered the founders of the Petersburg circus colony. Once the stage had been set in Petersburg – literally, the building of the ring barn – the circus came to life. As circus bands of old led the parades, heralding the arrival of the acts, just so this study is led by the story of a remarkable, talented Petersburg family who created the music that made the circus come alive.

Part Two

The Feagans Family Circus Band

From the close of the 19th century until the 1930s—the great years of the traveling circuses—most circuses had their own bands. The circus band was as important to the circus as the horses and clowns! Not only did they provide the background music for the acts, but frequently presented pre-performance concerts to entertain visitors until the first act. Probably the most critical role of the circus band was to herald the arrival of the circus into a town, leading the parade seated aboard a brightly decorated, horse-drawn bandwagon, bumping along unpaved or brick roads in all kinds of weather, while playing cornet, tuba or trombone, almost non-stop for an hour or more. Surely the circus band members were as hearty a group of performers as the acrobats!

Joseph R. Feagans of Petersburg, music teacher, bandleader and composer, for many years led his Feagans Family Band, comprised of wife, Emma and eight children.

Joe Feagans was a son of Catharine (Laws) and Abner Feagans, Virginians who had migrated to central Illinois in the 1840s. Joseph, born in 1852 in Menard County, was one of five children: Martha, Manley, William, Joseph and Franklin. Joe's father, Abner, was killed in an accident involving his wagon and team of horses, in April of 1871 (Petersburg Democrat, 29 April 1871). Joe's mother, Catharine, died five years later, on May 12, 1876. Probate of her estate (Menard County, Probate box no. 418) reveals her only survivors were three children, Manley, Joseph and Martha, indicating that Franklin and William probably predeceased their mother. (Franklin was enumerated on the 1870 census as an "invalid;" William was not enumerated with family. Neither Franklin nor William have been located on later censuses.)

Joe joined Edward Shipp's circus band as a drummer at the age of eight. While still a teenager, he worked himself up to band leader. At the age of 17, Joe Feagans was a band director and music teacher. By 1883 he was also a composer and arranger. In 1898 he organized his family into a band, the Feagans Family Band, and with them traveled around the country.

In 1872, Joe married Emma Underwood, the only daughter of Lydia Kear and Emery Underwood of Ohio. Emma's father, a bugler in the Union Army, died at Murfreesboro, TN, 14 April 1863. Lydia married (2) Benjamin Franklin Baltzell, also a Civil War veteran, with whom she moved with her children Frank and Emma, from Van Wert, Ohio to central Illinois. Emma was about 12 years of age at the time. Emma's marriage to Feagans took place when she was still very young. An affidavit from Van Wert County, Ohio, Probate Court, dated 31 May 1864, notes "...the said Emma Kate May Underwood was born on the 14th day of December 1858." Emma and Joe's marriage record on file at the Menard County, IL court house indicates they married on 7 November 1872. Their application for a license stating Emma "has arrived at the age of eighteen years," was signed by Joseph Feagans (marriage affidavit, 7 November 1872, Menard County court house). Emma was actually not quite 14 years of age at the time of her marriage. Emma's brother, Frank Underwood married and settled first in Peoria, and then in Pekin, Tazewell county. He and his wife Effie had at least eight children before they divorced sometime between 1910 and 1920.

Joe and Emma Feagans were the parents of 11 children, three of whom died young (Ford, Burdette and Millie). The surviving eight children, Flora, Forest Wild, Frank, Flossie, Fern, Fredona, Floyd, and Joe Jr. all played instruments in the family band. As if keeping house for a large family was not enough, Emma, in her "spare" time, was the Feagans Family Band's bass drum player.

Although the Feagans Family Band played for Ed Shipp and the local ring barn performances in Petersburg, they were also a traveling circus band. In his long career, Joe Feagans worked as band leader on a number of traveling circuses, including the Buffalo Bill show and the Miles Orton Circus.

In addition to working with his own band, Joseph Feagans taught music. In an interview printed in the State Journal Register,<sup>1</sup> a grandson of Feagans noted that his grandfather “taught every instrument but the violin.” (This isn’t surprising since traditional circus bands contained no string instruments.) Joseph Feagans also acquired some fame as a composer of a considerable amount of circus music that was used by other circus bands. Following the success of “Washington Post,” by John Phillip Sousa, many enterprising march band composers wrote “newspaper marches.” Joe Feagans’ contribution was “The Chicago Herald March.”

Joseph Feagans died of a degenerative kidney disease (Bright’s disease) on 3 August 1911 at the age of 59. He worked until a few days before his death when his wife and several of his children accompanied him home. According to his obituary, he "closed his musical career with the Bulger & Cheney show of Sparta, Wisconsin," (Petersburg Observer, Aug. 1911); it was, ironically, the close of the Bulger & Cheney circus as well, although for reasons not related to Feagans (Fred D. Pfening III, “William P. Hall,” The Bandwagon, volume 10:6, [Nov-Dec] 1966)

When Joe Feagans died, his cornet was placed in his casket during the wake, and a military band from Oakford, Illinois played marches from the Feagans’ home to Rose Hill cemetery. Lawrence Watkins and James Davis played instrumentals at his funeral.

Emma Feagans died of tuberculosis 13 years later on 24 August 1924 in Petersburg. She was buried beside her husband Joseph at Rose Hill Cemetery in Petersburg, appropriately in an area containing many of the circus performers’ graves. Emma’s mother and stepfather, Laura and Benjamin Baltzell, are buried beside them in unmarked graves.

AND THE BAND PLAYED ON: The Feagans Children

Flora Feagans, who played tuba/sousaphone in the family band, married 25 July 1895, Henry Kern, a son of William and Melinda (Bauer) Kern.<sup>2</sup> William, a German immigrant, had arrived in Illinois by 1865, naturalized October of 1868 (Menard County, IL naturalizations, FHL microfilm 1311570). Henry, born in Petersburg in 1872, was the youngest son and fifth born child of William. After completing school, he didn’t join his father and brother in the family bakery business, but worked as a cigar maker for a number of years. By 1910, however, Henry was already involved in music. A trombone player, he had been a member of the original circus band of Petersburg led by Joe Feagans. Known as “Professor Kern,” Henry was a musician bandmaster with various circuses for many years.

After their marriage, Flora and Henry worked together, their only child Mildred joining with them as she became old enough. The family played with shows such as the Frank A. Robbins Circus and the Young Buffalo Bill Wild West Show. In the latter show, Flora had a Cowgirl Band which paraded on horseback. In 1913, Flora and Henry Kern and Henry’s band of 12 played in Collinsville, Illinois for the Frank A. Robbins circus. In the band were Flora, playing sousaphone, and their daughter Mildred on baritone.

In addition to her musical talent, Mildred, as “Mademoiselle Mitzi,” performed a mind-reading/second-sight act. It was during the 1913 season that Mildred met Milton Robbins, son of circus owner Frank A. Robbins, whom she later married (Robert Sabia, “Frank A. Robbins, A Most Successful Failure,” The Bandwagon, volume 46:6 [Nov-Dec. 2002]). Milton and Mildred remained in the circus business. They had two children, Jane who died young, and Maxine who performed in the circus as a swordwalker. Mildred Kern Robbins died in 1943 at age 47.

Throughout the census enumerations of 1900 through 1930, Flora and Henry listed their occupations as musicians, while making their permanent home in Petersburg.

Forest Wild Feagans married Frank Fernandes of Springfield, son of one of the Madeira (Portuguese) families that had immigrated to Sangamon County, Illinois 1849-1855. Forest and Frank had seven children born in Illinois; they moved to California sometime between 1920 and 1930. Neither Forest nor her husband appears to have maintained a professional interest in music or the circus.

Although Frank Feagans, who had played the baritone sax with the family band, was a musician while in the Army during WW1, playing with the 331st Field Artillery Band, A.E.F. in Europe (World War One Honor Book, An Honorary Roll of Those Who Took Part In the World War in Behalf of the Citizens of Menard County in Illinois, p. 43. DistantCousin.com [database online]), he probably did not seriously pursue a career in music since the 1900, 1920 and 1930 census enumerations record respective occupations of laborer, cigar maker and “poormaster” at a Wisconsin county asylum for the poor. Frank was probably married twice. He had one child, a daughter, Josephine (by his second wife, Gladys Mephram) who was born in Baraboo, Wisconsin in 1915. Whether the family had some affiliation with the Ringling Brothers Circus that was headquartered at Baraboo at the time of her birth has not been determined. In 1920, Frank, Gladys and Josephine were residents of Benton Harbor, Michigan, but by 1930 they had settled back in Wisconsin where he remained until his death in 1937. He died of “a lingering illness” (obituary, Illinois State Journal, Springfield, 3 June 1937, p. 4) in Milton, Wisconsin on June 2nd, and was buried in Janesville. Gladys died in January of 1972, and buried in Janesville.

Flossie, who had played the trombone in the family band, became a circus performer. She was a slack wire artist and juggler, and performed on the rolling globe, often playing the vaudeville circuit. However, music remained an important part of her life as well as shown on the 1910 U.S. census enumeration where Flossie's occupation is listed as musician on the stage (William Voigt household, Detroit, Wayne, MI, T624-682, ED95). Floss's husband, Rudolph Voigt, had been cornet player with the Feagans Band. He was also a versatile circus performer, with an act on an aerial breakaway ladder, hanging by his teeth when the ladder broke away, and did lariat twirling, juggling and walking the slack wire with Floss. By 1930, however, both Rudolph and Floss had apparently given up circus life, and the census lists him as proprietor of a decorating business and her as a housewife (Rudolph Voigt household, Detroit, Wayne, MI, roll 1065, ED818). The couple had four children, Wesleyan, Moulin, Marjorie and Gail. Floss died in 1946.

Fern Feagans married Clyde Bennage in Paris, Illinois in 1907, and the couple had three children, Velda, Clyde Leroy, and Earl.

According to their daughter Velda,<sup>3</sup> Fern met Clyde Bennage while they were both playing in the band in Buffalo Bill Cody's Wild West Show. Clyde played cornet, baritone and French horn, and Fern French horn and bass. The couple evidently left the world of the circus band after their marriage since the 1910 census lists Clyde as a railroad employee; they were living in Rock Island. By 1920 Fern and Clyde had left Rock Island for Chicago where they remained the rest of their lives. Tragedy struck the family when their ten year old son, Clyde Leroy, died of injuries from a schoolyard accident. Neither Fern nor her husband appears to have had any later professional interest in the music or circus business, although Clyde continued to play with his Masonic lodge band. Fern died of pneumonia in December of 1943. She is buried in Mt. Hope cemetery in the Chicago suburb of Worth, Illinois.

Fredona "Dona" Feagans, clarinet player with the Feagans Family Band, was 19 when she married Eulalie W. Holliday - called E.W. - of Kansas and the couple had four sons, all born in Kansas. Census enumerations reveal that E.W. worked as a garage mechanic and as a welder. In 1930 Dona was enumerated on the census as a music teacher. In 1937 Dona was still living in Wichita (brother Frank's obituary), but by 1943, Dona had moved to California ("of San Gabriel, CA," in her sister Fern's obituary). She died in Kansas, however, in September of 1964.

Floyd "Rex" Feagans played the trombone with the family band. He remained in the circus music business at least until 1912 when it was noted that he was a musical director in 1912 for the LaMont Brothers Show ("Complete Circus Roster Season 1912", Billboard, March 23, 1912.) The 1910 census (Joseph Feagans household, Petersburg, Menard, IL, T624-312, ED85, sheet 9B) lists occupation band musician; he is still living at home at that time and obviously playing with the family band. It is likely that he gave up his circus career when he married (ca.1915), Alice Warner. By 1920 he is enumerated on the U.S. census as a paper hanger (Springfield, Sangamon, IL Rex Feagans household, T625-406, ED134, sheet 8A) and in 1930 a decorating contractor (Floyd Feagans household, Detroit, Wayne, MI, roll 164, ED817, sheet 39B). Floyd and his wife had five children. Floyd died 9 July 1951 in Los Angeles, California where he had lived for some 17 years prior to his death. He is buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery, Springfield, IL.

Joseph Feagans, Jr., was the youngest surviving child of Joe and Emma. A snare drummer with the family band, when WWI broke out, he enlisted as a musician with the Army, went overseas in 1918 and was attached to Co. F, 328th Infantry, A.E.F. (World War One Honor Book, An Honorary Roll of Those Who Took Part In the World War in Behalf of the Citizens of Menard County, Illinois, p. 43. DistantCousin.com [database online]). There is some discrepancy as to his exact date of birth: The Social Security Death Index (SSDI) shows a birth year of 1893, as does the 1900 U.S. census. His obituary, however, gives a birth year of 1894, as does his headstone (Rose Hill Cemetery, Petersburg). On 28 November 1923, Joseph, Jr. married Faye Clary, a daughter of Bertha and John Hardin Clary.<sup>4</sup> By 1930, Joseph Jr. is enumerated on the U.S. census as a house painter (Petersburg, Menard, IL, roll 544, ED12, sheet 2A). He remained in the business for many years according to his obituary (Petersburg Observer, 9 May 1968). Joseph Jr. and his wife had three sons. They maintained their home in Petersburg throughout their entire marriage. Joseph died of a heart condition on 5 May 1968. His wife, Faye (who had married [2] James Etter [1902-1989]) died 26 October 1989. Faye is buried beside Joseph at Rose Hill Cemetery in Petersburg.
