"Plus in the middle pg. 24 — fingerprint of John B----- — there isn't but 1 individual who can carry another's fingerprint & this is man you wanted

Mrs. S. M-----"

How about that? There is no telling how many people she has bilked. The moral, of course, is to beware, and be wary. Most genealogists are honest and reliable, less are capable and fully experienced. As the old B. B. B. motto goes, "Before you invest, investigate".

There are times when the services of a reliable genealogist are necessary, and much less costly than trying to dig up the information yourself, especially if it is a genealogist near the original sources. But know with whom you are dealing before you send money.

Especially with the present interest in Genealogy and Heraldry, there are altogether too many characters "getting into the act, trying to make a fast buck".

Watch out for the outfit or individual who offers you a family history or a coat of arms for your family name, whether it is at $4.99, the supposedly bargain price, or a hundred dollars. There's more to it than that. A dedicated genealogist will usually give you much more than "value received", for with him the work is a pleasure, and solving problems is more important than money.

It is to be regretted that there are too many amateurish, inept, money-hungry individuals who are masquerading as genealogists, and who, we suppose, consider themselves proficient in the profession of purveying family trees, although some are badly gnarled.
