GREENE COUNTY
NAMED AFTER GENERAL NATHANIEL GREENE
REVOLUTIONARY WAR SOLDIER

Newberry was originally known as Slinkards Mills from 1823 to 1830. The town was platted in 1830, and renamed Newberry after Newberry, S.C.

Cass Township

Isaac Doan was among first settlers in Cass Township

In 1849, Cass Township was created by dividing Plummer Township into two portions. Plummer had been created in 1821. Cass became the western section and Taylor the eastern portion; each being named after the two leading presidential candidates in 1848.

Records of early settlers vary, for the reason of the name of Plummer and the division of the territory with two entirely new names and boundries. But it is thought that Issac Doan was the first settler in the present Cass Township. His log cabin stood near the eastern boundry of the township on the creek which bears his name. He settled near the bridge on the north side of the creek and later the location became known as the Hattabaugh Field.

Other early settlers there were the Richeys, Slinkards, Bynums, Benson Jones, Peter R. Lester, the Lyles and several other families that moved about over the county as preachers and politicians.

John F. O'Neal became a leading politician of Greene County, serving in the Lower House of the State Legislature and in the Senate. He had been a Democrat, but in 1856, at the Presidential election, he changed his vote and was one of the only five in Cass Township to help the "Pathfinder" toward the White House.

John O'Neal was a Quaker and preached many of the early sermons in the townships. The Mormon Prophet, Joseph Smith, the founder of that church, preached several times in Cass Township. He is said to have been a spraker of unusual power and persuasion.

The main portion of the early Cass Township settlers came in from 1818 to 1824. It is probable that Isaac Doan settled there in 1817. Peter R. Lester came from Salem, Indiana in 1820, and settled on the bluffs of White River at the mouth of Doan's Creek. By 1828, there were probably fifteen cabins scattered over Cass Township. All were of logs with cat-and-clay chimneys and huge fireplaces for both cooking and heating.

When cleared, the land was extremely fertile and good corn crops were harvested amid stumps and roots and was considered "the staff of life." Slinkard's mill was the first in the township, and the settlers patronized that or went down to Washington, Indiana for their provisions and corn grinding; a trip of several days.

Old Newberry was first laid out in the fall of 1822 on land owned by that fine old Quaker gentleman, John O'Neal. There were several Quaker families that came to Indiana and some of these made the first land entries in the county as early as 1816.

They made their religion the business of life. They strictly required every member of their society to be industrious, sober and economical. The Quakers always had female, as well as male, preachers. One of the favorite preachers of that time was the famous Priscilla Hunt, who had the spirit of prophesy. She preached at the home of John O'Neal at Newberry about the year 1825. She came 65 miles on horseback through the woods and plenty of mud. Leading Quakers from long distances came to hear her.

The first house at Newberry was built by Moses Ritter. The building was a log cabin and was used a little later as a store by Mr. Ritter, who afterward did an extensive merchantile business at the county seat. Peter R. Lester was also an early merchant in Newberry. He had a good stock of dry goods, groceries and a general assortment of store supplies which he transported in wagons from Louisville.

On May 6, 1830 the original plat of the town of Newberry was re-surveyed. This new survey consisted of 58 lots which on the north was bordered by White River and at the north east corner were the boat yards. Names of the streets were given as Warehouse Street, Main Street, High Street, Ferry Street and Water Street. This survey is found in Deed Record "A" on the fly leaf preceding page 1 in the Recorder's Office. Several additions were later added to this town.

In the fall of 1848 the survey of the Wabash and Erie Canal was made. The location of the dam was selected by Jesse L. Williams and W.H. Hall, chief engineers. The survey and the letting of the contracts, were held at Point Commerce and large crowds assembled to hear the bidding and the news which was a great event.

There were about 150 workmen on the Canal and a large store was kept at Newberry expressly for these men. While the work was going on, life was infused into all branches of business.

The middle of June 1851 the first canal boat surfaced its waters. A great deal of shipping was done as soon as the canal was finished. It took about six weeks to receive a shipment from New Orleans. The canal made the town very prosperous from 1848 to 1858.

In 1879 Christenberry and Miller were dealers in drugs, medicines, chemicals, paints, oils and varnishes. That year the Owen House was located on the corner of Mulberry and Second Streets. H.C. Owen, Sr. was its proprietor and had just refinished it. This served as a pleasant home for the weary traveler.

The Wadsworth House was located on the corner of Broad and Second Street. Mrs. E.J. Wadsworth was the proprietress and she had first-class rooms and the table was unexcelled. Everything was kept neat and in perfect readiness to accommodate the traveling public.

M.L. Hasting was the Justice of the Peace and he lived in Newberry.

Alex Neff had a mill near Newberry. He was a miller and a dealer in flour, grain, feed, etc. Also he had a saw mill where sawing was done to order.

Dr. Charles R. Durment, physican and surgeon, resided at Newberry and had his office there.

The W.R. Hindman Tannery was located on the corner of Section and Eighth Streets.

At the end of 1879 three churches dotted this town, namely, the Methodist, the Christian and the Lutheran. The school was found on the corner of the block of Walnut and School Streets. At the north edge of town was the ferry which was the means of transportation across the west fork of White River. In 1884 a wooden covered bridge was built and in May of that year there was a crowd of over 1,000 that witnessed the union baptismal service at this bridge. This was conducted by Rev. Warner of the Baptist Church and Rev. Coatney of the United Brethern Church. There were 26 people baptised that day and there were some girls who knelt near the water and were sprinkled by Rev. Coatney. White River, with her numerous creek tributaries, has been the scene of various occasions such as this down through the years but it is hard to realize that 1,000 people were on hand to see this baptising.

The old wooden covered bridge became one of Greene County's most historic landmarks. Many citizens today well remember going through this bridge many times. Some of the farmers recall taking their team and wagon through and at the end of the bridge there was an incline that made it difficult to keep the loaded wagon from running over the team as it descended from the end of the bridge.

On December 19, 1940 a contract was awarded to the Pioneer Contract Company of Evansville for the construction of a new bridge on State Road 57 over the west fork of White River at the north edge of Newberry. This new steel structure was to replace the old wooden covered bridge, which had served its purpose for over 50 years. The new bridge was built a few hundred feet down river from the covered bridge. Minimum wages paid on the work were 50 cents, 60 cents and 75 cents per hour, according to the various grades of labor. The old wooden covered bridge was still in use at that time and was utilized while the new structure was being built. This new bridge connected with the end of State Road 57 at the north end of Newberry's principal street.

Truly Newberry has undergone many changes since Moses Ritter built the first log cabin there.

CHAPTER XXVII
CASS TOWNSHIP

WE WILL give, as some of the first settlers of Cass township, the following noted characters: Isaac Doan, Mr. Howell, old father Richey and sons, David, Barney, Daniel, Pleasant and William Richey. Afterwards came William Bynum and sons, Samuel, John D., Daniel A., William and James Bynum. Old Uncle John O'Neal, Benson Jones, Peter R. Lester, old father John Slinkard and sons, Andrew, Frederick, Moses, Henry, John, Daniel and all the rest; Robert Clark, from New York state, Abner Bogard, Samuel Ewing, the latter, Warren D. Lyles, Bazil Lyles, Nathan Chandler, Joseph Beals, Doctor Dennis, and others.

Mr. Doan settled at the big weeping willow, in the field belonging to Mrs. Hattabaugh, near the bridge, on the north side of the creek, near where old man Richey built the little water mill.

One Vote for Freemont

Henry O'Neil, father of William and John F. O'Neal, came from South Carolina, Newbury District, and settled on the Scamp place, and remained there two years, after which he moved over in Daviess county.

Mr. O'Neal's sons were Henry M., Elisha F., James Madison, Hugh and Samuel O'Neal.

Henry F. O'Neal married Mary Milcs, and raised twelve children — seven boys and five girls. John F. O'Neal married Anna Chandler, daughter of Nathan Chandler, and they had seven children.

Mr. John F. O'Neal was among the leading party politicians in Greene county and was a member of the state Senate and House of Representatives, several times; but being raised a Quaker and the old, time-honored Quaker religious creed being yet in the ascendancy, and when Col. Fremont was the Abolitionist candidate for President, Mr. O'Neal changed his vote, and cast the only vote for Freemont that the "pathfinder" received in Cass township.

Mormon Prophet Joe Smith

The old time preachers were, old John O'Neal, the Friend Quaker, the old Mormon Prophet, Joe Smith, the founder of the Mormon Church, at the city of Nauvoo, Illinois, Joe Wilson, Wm. Plusky, Ephraim Hall, and Mr. Lynn. Old Wm. Roach, just over in Daviess county, must not be omitted here, as we have been told that he was a very noted man, seventy-five years old, six feet and seven inches high, and had the biggest feet of any white man in this country.—He always had to send to Louisville, Kentucky, for the number fourteen boots, every time, he wore anything except Indian moccasins. He would cut five acres of wheat with a scythe and cradle for a day's work.

James Madison O'Neal was born in Newbury District, South Carolina, and came to Greene county over forty years ago. He married Miss Sophia Bynum, daughter of William Bynum. Six children was the result of their union — three boys and three girls. After the death of his first wife, he married Miss Ellen McElroy. Mr. O'Neal is a well-to-do farmer, and a manufacturer of tobacco, and lives on the farm where Hugh O'Neal settled, nine miles from Bloomfield, on the Newberry road.

Impaled on Stick

Old Father Richey settled on the creek, about a mile above the Doan place, on the Lester farm. The old man and all of the family were members of the Methodist church, and the Richey boys were the most active, stout men in all the country. At three jumps they could make forty feet forward or thirty feet backward, with the greatest of ease.

William Bynum and sons settled at the Widow Bynum place, at an early day, where the wife now lives. One of the boys, while carrying pumpkins out of the corn field, on a sharp stick, in climbing a fence, the pumpkins slipped off of one end of the stick, and by some means the stick was run through his body, killing him almost instantly.

Hospitable

Old John O'Neal settled just east of Newberry, on the well known O'Neal homestead farm. Mr. O'Neal was a noted old Friend Quaker preacher, and his house was the home for all the old Indians and preachers for many years. He entered the most land and made the best farm, and it was also a stopping-place for all the olden-times judges, lawyers, preachers, prophets and disciples, Jews and Gentiles.

Old Benson Jones and family settled at the place where Dr. Stoddard now lives, near Newberry. Mr. Jones has passed to the other world many years ago. John Jones married Miss Katie Stalcup, of Highland township. Mr. Jones died in Cass township, with the milk-sick, several years since, and the widow afterwards married Mr. Ballard. He also has gone beyond the river of death. Old Aunt Katie Ballard is a very industrious woman, and a noted old weaver of good cloth.

Camp Meeting Shed

Peter R. Lester was born in South Carolina, and married Miss Hainey O'Neal, and they came to Greene county in 1819. Mr. Lester and wife were the parents of five children, and they live one mile east of Newberry. He is now eighty-five years old, and yet makes common contracts for five or ten years to come.

Old man Richey and sons first built a mill at the present Barker mill seat, in Cass township.

Anthony Ferguson is eighty-five years old, and lives on the John F. O'Neal farm. He came from Columbia county, Ohio, at an early day.

Old Grandfather Clark came to Greene county in an early day, and is one among her oldest men.

The big camp-meeting shed was on the old Uncle Billy O'Neal farm.

NAMES OF THE CREEKS

Slinkard creek was named for old John Slinkard, the man that built the first water-mill on that stream.

Plummer creek was named for old Grandfather Thomas Plummer—Clifty creek for the rocky cliffs along its banks.

Town of Newberry platted in 1822

Old Newberry was first laid out in the fall of 1822, on land owned by a Quaker, John O'Neal. The first house built was of logs, and owned by Moses Ritter. A little later he used it as a store. Cary O'Neal and Peter R. Lester were also early merchants and had their stock of merchandise hauled from Louisville. Some flat-boating was done by the merchants, with honey and bee's wax in demand and exchange. B.F. Morse was the first postmaster and the doctor was a Mr. Dennis. The town got its name from Newberry, N. Caroline, where some of the settlers were from. The town before the canal days consisted of about 25 families. Other than merchants there were blacksmiths, carpenters, coopers, tanners and shoemakers.

When the canal became a certainty, Newberry took a new look at itself. Mechanics appeared and all kinds of businesses multiplied. Livery stables, butcher shops, barbers, carpenters, and common laborers, all came and set up "shop."

The town was re-surveyed in the winter of 1848, by B.F. Cressy, and the public sale of lots took place the following spring. Many were sold. Some to those who became residents and some to speculators. The Knights, the Slinkards, Dr. McDaniel, B.F. Morse and others. A great deal of shipping was done as soon as the canal was finished and steamboats were able to land and take on cargo. Morse had a large warehouse, where grain was stored and shipped when markets were favorable. J. Slinkard a Mr. Early also had storage. The town was very prosperous from 1848 to 1858. The shipments of produce were mostly to New Orleans, and the journey required about six weeks. Morse sent about $9,000 worth of produce to the South every year from 1848 to 1856.

Several early fairs were held at Newberry, as were some teachers' Institutes. Two substantial hotels were built, and the T.H. & S.E. railroad finally got built between Worthington and through Newberry. A new covered wagon bridge was built across White River, 1883-1884 costing $12,000 and later an iron bridge spanned the river. But Newberry had "had its day."

Old Newberry had become a part of the Canal Days Newberry. And they in turn have now become a part of what is becoming a new Newberry, for soon the few remaining old buildings along Main Street will be gone—only four remain for it has become "A nice little town where nice people live."

OLD SLINKARD CEMETERY

CASS TOWNSHIP, Section 36. Turn east off State Road 57 in Newberry and follow signs south to Griffin Industries, which is on County Road 400W. About 200 yards northeast of the water meter at Griffin Industries is a pile of broken marble, which is all that is left of the Old Slinkard Cemetery, said to have contained at least 40 graves at one time. Among the jumble of badly broken markers, two fragments were legible with the names of Samuel Hughen and Samuel Skomp. Searched for and found by Sandra Uland Taylor and Mildred Uland, September, 1993.

From Roster of Soldiers and Patriots of American Revolution buried in Indiana: Joshua Burnett, born 10 Apr, 1753, Elizabethtown, New Jersey, died 4 September 1846, buried Hattabaugh Cemetery, Cass Township, Greene County, Indiana.

Service: 1 May 1779, while living in Georgia drafted, Capt. Richard Herd, Col. John Dooly, served 3 months 18 Sep 1870 under Gen. Elijah Clark, entered Augusta and marched against the British Army. Retreated through North Carolina. Was discharged by General Clark in South Carolina. Served in all 15 months.

The headstone of a Revolutionary War veteran, Joshua Burnett, is leaning against a tree in the overgrown Hattabaugh graveyard.

LESTER CEMETERY

CASS TOWNSHIP, Section 20. In 1987, in a remote area of Section 20, one remaining marker, a limestone-slab type with inscription still legible after 140 years, was found. It bears the name, Elisha Lester In Memory of, born 24 Jan 1845 - died 14 Jan 1847. Since the base was missing, it is possible that the original cemetery was not at this exact spot. Whether Elisha would be happy to have her tombstone resting in this shady fence corner, safe from high water and the noise of the trains traveling on the CCC & Saint Louis railroad track that runs along the river, is a moot question. But, at least, she is on ground entered from the government by her grandfather, Peter Ruble Lester. (researched by Gene Combs, 1987)

History Of Newberry Given At Greene County Historical Meeting

Members of the Greene County Historical Society were informed by Oscar Curtis that the Eastern Greene County cemetery records will soon be submitted to a publisher and Loraine Kraus reported that the Bloomfield cemetery records will be published in a separate volume. Their reports were heard at the April 18 meeting at the Newberry Methodist Church.

President Marsha Cline conducted a brief business meeting of the society which included previous minutes read by Louise Cox and a treasurer's report by Shirley Short.

The town of Newberry was the topic for the afternoon and was presented by Martha Ann Wesner.

The Delaware Indians first occupied the land and prehistoric relics of the tribe have been found in and around Newberry. Presumably they built a dam across the river for a walkway and the remains of the rocks can sometimes be seen when the river is very low.

The town of Newberry was first located a half-mile east of the present location. John O'Neal, Quaker preacher, and Mark O'Neal, surveyor, who came from South Carolina to Indiana in 1818, laid out and named the town Newberry for their native town in South Carolina. Later the business section was moved to a location near where the old covered bridge was built. Early settlers were Hilburns, Slinkards, Bynums, Lesters, O'Neals, Barkers and Wesners. The first log house at Newberry was built by Moses Ritter, son-in-law of John O'Neal.

The town was platted in 1830 and consisted of 58 lots, which were bordered on the north by White River. In 1849 Plummer Township was divided into two townships creating Cass and Taylor named for the two leading candidates for president and Newberry fell in Cass Township.

By 1851 the Wabash and Erie Canal was completed by Irish immigrants, who being hard drinkers, were kept "liquored up" to hasten the work. One of the six locks was west of Newberry. Flat boats plied the canal with produce for New Orleans, a journey which usually took six weeks. A large, three-story warehouse was built and the multiplying businesses included dry goods stores, drug stores, saddler shops, flour mill, wagon shop, a shoe shop, a millinery shop, planing mill and cabinet mill and a tannery. For the weary travelers there were two hotels. There were three churches and two school houses. The abandonment of the canal in 1863 brought an end to this cycle of growth in Newberry.

The covered bridge spanning White River was begun in 1879 and the town began building sidewalks in preparation for the Evansville and Indianapolis Railroad, which was to be built on the tow path of the old canal in 1885 which surely meant further growth for Newberry. Mrs. Wesner commented that the bridge hands struck for higher wages, asking for $2 per day instead of $1.50 which they were receiving, but compromised on $1.75.

In tracing the school history from a crude log structure with a $2 per scholar subscription teacher, through the seven grade schools to the first high school graduating class in 1914, she stated that Newberry built the first enclosed gymnasium in Greene County in 1916. With consolidation, Newberry students now go to Switz City.

The first house of public worship, which was also to be used as a seminary to be controlled by the Lutherans was built at a cost of $114 in 1852. A few years ago the St. Peter's Lutheran church, built in 1890, was sold to the Nazarenes. The Methodist Church, first built in 1887 was replaced by a new church in 1979. The first building of the Christian Church organized in 1871 was later destroyed by fire and rebuilt in 1916 and is still in use.

Mrs. Wesner touched on several township cemeteries in the Newberry area and the state of their maintenance.

Since its incorporation in 1908, Newberry has added the customary public utilities such as electric lights, telephones and a public water system.

Stores and businesses have come and gone in the community. The locally owned bank opened in May 1909 went into involuntary liquidation during the depression and the town is now served by a branch bank from Bloomfield. The Farmers Tankage Company is the major employer. Dr. Luther Hamilton was the last doctor. The two active lodges are the Masonic established in 1855 and the Eastern Star, which celebrated its 75th year in 1971.

She closed with an April 23, 1909 humorous item from The Bloomfield News, "John Musselman shot the dog belonging to Felix Sappenfield and Mr. Sappenfield being an undertaker embalmed the dog and has it on exhibition in his undertaking establishment." Mr. Sappenfield, Mrs. Wesner's father, was in the business in Newberry from 1905 and 1943 and was the last undertaker.

The next meeting will be Sunday, June 27, one week later than usual because of Fathers' Day.

Forest giant cut in 1901

The last week of February, and the first two weeks of March, 1901, were exciting times in Cass Township. The mammoth red sycamore tree that grew on the farm of J.W. Johnson, two-and-one-half miles southwest of Newberry was being cut down. The Killian Mill log cutters felled the giant tree which was almost six feet in diameter and almost as round as a pencil except for one spot which was a hole about the size of a water pail. It was eighty-one inches across the stump. On account of bad sawing and the defect four feet were butted off. Then a ten foot log, sixty-three inches in diameter, containing 2,175 feet then a twelve foot log, fifty-eight inches in diameter, containing 2,187 feet, then a fourteen foot log, fifty-four inches in diameter, containing 2,187 feet and counting the butt at 500 feet, there were 7,050 feet of useable lumber in the trunk—enough to build a good size house of finest first quality quarter sawed lumber.

Polk Dennis of Bloomfield, was awarded the job of hauling the butt log. He took his wagon, horses and men to the site and successfully loaded and hauled the giant log to Killian's Mill. It was said to be the largest known log ever hauled on a wagon in Greene County.

Lee Jones and J.K. Dennis took the contract to deliver the logs to Newberry. About fifty people witnessed the loading of the first log and half the crowd followed the wagon to where it was unloaded at the switch dock at Newberry, where at least one-hundred people looked on at the unloading.

Newberry School

The Plummer and Wesner Schools were the first in the township. the buildings were poorly built so classes were held only in the fall. The schools were by subscription of $2.00 per scholar and was for the term of 3 months. Later a school house was built on Frederick Slinkards' land one mile east of Newberry on what is know as Joe Hasler farm. The first school in Newberry was built near White River. A second school was built in the west part of town. Later a log school building was then constructed in the south part of town across the street from the Methodist Church. These newer schools contained fireplaces or stoves and glass windows.

Newberry had a football team in the early 1900's and November 9, 1905 Newberry played Odon's team at Odon. Game ended 5-17 in favor of Odon.

In 1907, a brick two story building costing $3,000 was built in the eat part of town. the building contained all twelve grades. The first graduating class from the new school was in 1914 with 7 graduates.

In 1909 there were 5 schools in the town and township; Newberry, Wesner, White, Thomas and the Hattabaugh.

On February 26, 1916 bids were accepted from contractors for the building of an addition to the school building. March 9, 1916 Trustee John Croke and the advisory board awarded the contract for building to James Brown of Shoals for about $11,000.

In March of 1916 the Trustee purchased the lot east of the school to help relieve the cramped condition of the school ground. The new addition to the school would contain an assembly and stage on the top floor, two large class rooms on the main floor and in the lower are a "large" gymnasium was build. It was the first enclosed gym in the county. The first basketball game played in the new gym was November 18, 1916 on a Saturday night between Newberry and Freedom. Newberry won 18 to 22.

The last graduation class was in April 1947. That fall the high school was transferred to Lyons and in 1951 the high school was transferred to Switz. Grades 1- 8 continued at Newberry until the fall of 1958. Grades 1 - 6 remained until 1963 and then all students were moved to Switz City. In 1965 the "Ole" Newberry School was torn down.

Newberry High School, which had closed for the 1947-48 school year by order of the Indiana Department of Public Instruction, planned to send pupils to Lyons High School. A contract for the transportation of the Newberry pupils to Lyons was let to James D. Campbell, Cass Township Trustee, and members of the Cass Township advisory board. Approximately 30 of the pupils were to be transported to the Washington Township School, according to Van Edington, Greene County School Superintendent.

Newberry can claim the fireplace or windows. David most unusual first school. A Bradford was the first roving historian stated teacher. He sat in an old that:—The Plummer Schoolhouse, three-fourths of a mile from Doans Creek, and Wesner Schoolhouse, near First Creek, were the first built in Cass Township. They were constructed of small poles and the cracks were left open for ventilation. The floors were of dirt and there was no fireplace or windows. David Bradford was the first teacher. He sat in an old chair at one end of the room and listened as the scholars recited their lessons. Each paid $2 for the term of three summer months. There were no recesses given and an hour's lunch time was welcomed. Emma and Eliza Ritter taught the first schools in Newberry.

The wood of this barn came from the old Newberry Covered Bridge which was demolished in the 1940s.

Canal grand venture that failed

The Wabash and Erie Canal, entered Greene County at Johnstown, north of Worthington, along the west side of White River to Newberry, where a dam was built and the river was crossed. A large chute or trough, technically, a flume. This flume was above the river and the boats traveled through it. Otherwise the water would have all drained from the canal into the river when the river was at low water mark. The canal ran from Newberry in a southwesterly direction and into Daviess County and onto Evansville. At Worthington the canal branched out and went to Terre Haute and the Wabash River. No machinery was used in the construction of the canal. It was strictly a pick, shovel, spade, wheelbarrow, project, except for a now-and-then horse and cart. Contracts were taken by moneyed men, to evaluate certain limits of the canal and then hundreds of Irishmen and others were employed to do the earth work.

The C.C.C. and St. Louis railroad was built later along the old canal and was referred to as a "pumpkin vine" road. It is presently the New York Central line and follows the old canal for many miles.

He said a friend of his said that his mother used to ice skate to school on the canal when it would freeze. South of Worthington, the canal veered southeast around the higher ground near Elliston and then to where it crossed the river at Plummer and can be seen again southwest of Elnora. Mr. Kirby then asks who remembers Dixon Station, Fairplay, Dog Island and Stockton? And the narrow gauge and Monon railroads running east and west through the county?

Regular traffic by boat began at Worthington in 1850, at which time the occasion was celebrated by a grand excursion up the canal to Terre Haute. In 1851, regular boats were running across Greene County.

Andrew Downing who was then conducting the Richland Furnace, owned two boats on which he shipped products of the furnace. Alexander Thompson was one of the captains for a time. Large quantities of iron ore were sent to Evansville. One of the boats was finally wrecked at the Richland Creek cut-off.

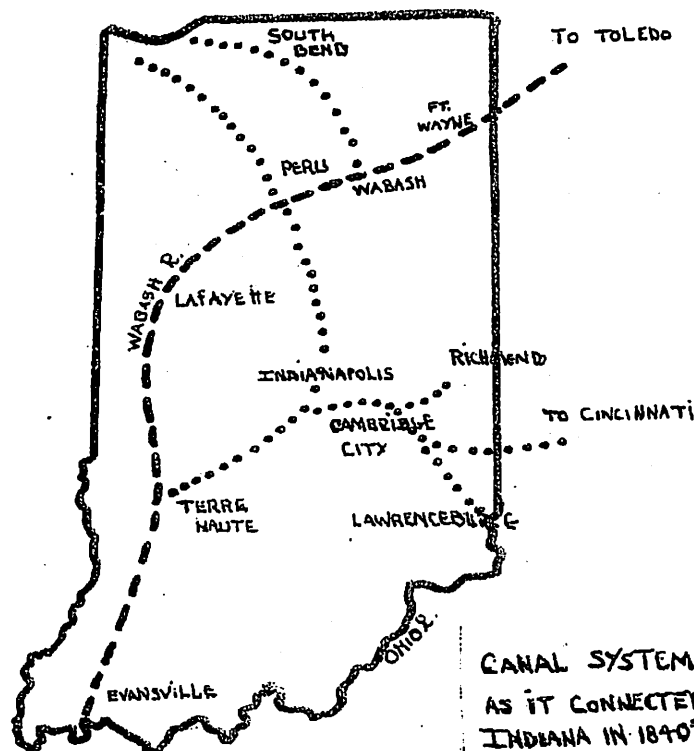

Start and Company, of Worthington were flour merchants and owned several boats for shipping large cargos of their milling products. And several moneyed residents of Bloomfield had invested heavily in boats for use on the canal. But the canal through this part of its course was never finished. There were six locks in the county and a fair business was done until about 1859 when it was mainly abandoned. It was revived from time to time until about 1863, though it could not be depended on and was regarded as an eyesore and a nuisance.

Joseph Knight, Hugh Stewart and Alonzo Knight were contractors on the canal. The work was commenced late in the forties and finished early in the fifties. Their contract comprised the feeder dam the guard bank, the locks and five miles of excavation above the estimated value of the contract, being $140,000.

The survey of the canal was made in the fall of 1848. The engineers were Whittle, Pope, Birdan and Hutchinson. The location of the dam was selected by Jessie L. Williams, and W.H. Ball, chief engineer of the project. The contracts were let at Point Commerce in 1848.

The survey and the letting of the contracts were great events and large crowds assembled to hear the bidding and the news. James Rouque was one of the architects, Owen and Bynum were treasurers and John F. Slinkard was Clerk.

A large store was kept at Newberry expressly for the workmen on the canal, who numbered about 150. While the work was going on life was infused into all branches of business. But the work of extending the canal across the river at Newberry commanded the attention of all who get there.

GREENE COUNTY TOWNS.

W. D. Ritter tells the names and origin of some of our towns as follows:

In 1821 Burlington was laid out as the county seat. It was where Sam Harrah lives, two miles northwest of Bloomfield.

About this time John O'Neal, my mother's father, started the town of Newberry, so named in memory of Newberry, South Carolina.

Judge L. B. Edwards, in his history of Greene county, published in the "Indiana Atlas and Gazetteer," says it was named for a town in North Carolina, or, at least, the types made him say so.

This is the only mistake in his excellent history. South Carolina was an English colony, and Newberry an English name.

METHODIST CHURCH

LUTHERAN AND CHRISTIAN CHURCH

A few of the first settlers to Cass township were Quakers but all of the settlers were religious and God fearing people. Soon other denominations appeared and became more prominent as churches were built.

Preaching was first held in Andrew Slinkard's house in the winter and at Frederick Slinkard's barn in the summer, with Lutheran ministers coming from as far as North Carolina. Rev. Fairchilds was the first Lutheran preacher that lived in the township. In December 1849 the members decided to organize a church and it was to be known as St. Peters Lutheran Church. George Wesner, Frederick Slinkard and Isaac Skomp were appointed elders. At the meeting it was resolved that as many members of the Union church of Greene and Daviess county as desired to become members should order their names placed upon the church book and 77 names were recorded.

In 1851 it was decided to build a building for public worship and also it was to be used for a seminary. Frederick and John Slinkard and John E. Wesner were chosen trustees. As a seminary it was to be free to all students of good moral character and as a church it was to be controlled by the Lutherans. The church was built by H.C. Owen for $114 and was completed in July 1852. The building was located in Lot 76 on Walnut Street in Newberry.

Rev. Fairchilds preached once a month until 1855 and was followed by Rev. W.H. Deck who continued until 1858. Rev. Deck and Pro. R.C. Hildburn were the only ones that taught school in the church. School was discontinued after better school houses were built. A new Lutheran church was built on the corner of Fifth and Broad Street in 1890 and its first pastor was Rev. John M. Sappenfield. He was the minister until his death in 1904. His son John V. Sappenfield was minister until his death in 1938.

The parsonage was not occupied again by any Lutheran minister and family. Ministers came to fill in part time. Due to the decline in membership the church closed its doors and it was sold to the Nazarene members in 1958. They remodeled the church and added a fellowship hall at the rear of the building. The front of the church was closed up and you entered the church on the south side. In 1988 the old building was torn down and a lovely new Nazarene church was erected.

The Christian church was organized in 1871 by Rev. Alfred Elmore. A church was built in Newberry on the corner of Fifth and Walnut Street and in 1911 this church was destroyed by fire. A new brick church was started on March 30, 1911. The steeple was completed in August 1916. Dedication of the new church was November 5, 1916. On July 18, 1934 fire did some extensive damage to the ceiling. It is believed to have started from the electric wiring. In the last few years the church has undergone some extensive remodeling. Services are held regularly each Sunday with Rev. Robert Duncan as minister. Submitted by: Martha Ann Wesner

In the 1850s some of the residents of Newberry made plans for building a Methodist church in the community. Trustees were elected for the new church body.

On November 9, 1859 Jonas W. Slinkard and his wife Mary Jane sold the lot to John Halstead, Kenton B. Bell, Vincent Lester, Reason C. Hilburn and Henry C. Owen, Trustees of the M.E. Church and their successors in office for the sum of $75.00. They reserved six feet off the back for a public alley.

The church was erected in 1872 and 1875 at an annual conference the Newberry Charge was organized.

January 9, 1882, Willard and Lucinda Carpenter sold to Basil Hindman and E.W. Hilburn, trustees of the M.E. Church two lots #159 and 160 for the sum of $5. It is where the parsonage stands and the lot between the house and the church. A home was built for the minister and family and over the years it has been remodeled many times with upstairs added, porch enclosed, siding, carport and a small storage building built.

On Sunday morning April 8, 1888 the church was destroyed by fire. It is supposed to have originated from a defective flue or from a spark blown from the top of the flue. Everybody, including women and children carried water but it could not be saved. All the seats and desks and even two hot stoves were rolled out before the roof caved in.

Plans started immediately on rebuilding the church. In July 1888 the laying of the corner-stone was completed with the following mementos deposited in the box and placed in the stone. Record and membership of Newberry Odd Fellows, History of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, History of Christian Church, official list of Odon circuit of M.E. Church, programme of the Vincennes District Conference, a copy of the Greene County News and Democrat, History of Newberry M.E. Church, a paper by the Newberry Lodge F. & A.M., Holy Bible, historical sketch of the town of Newberry, including its churches, lodges, and a general business directory.

In 1904 the church was papered and painted and in 1916 the church was remodeled with a new floor, new choir and pulpit arrangements.

In August 1937, work was started on the church basement. In December the Missionary Society held their program and a New Year's Eve party was held in the new basement. In 1959 siding and awnings were added.

On September 23, 1979 services were held for the last time in the old church, and on the 24th work was started on tearing down the building. A new church was built and services were held in the new church on December 23, 1979.

For many years the church was known as the Methodist Episcopal, the Episcopal was dropped and it was called the Methodist Church. In 1968 the United Brethren and the Methodist united, becoming the United Methodist Church.

Some of the ministers who have served are: J.M.D. Hudelson, E.A. McBride, Rev. Hughes, E.L. Moore, Jesse Gettinger, V.V. Stauffer, Robert Walker, S.E. Stroud, Arthur Jean, Tom Scott, Chester Scott, Orval L. Huffman, Sr., G.S. Sutton, M.T. Wisley, Rev. Jones, Kenneth Burns, Harold Nolting, Sam Worthington, L.M. Bates, Tom Stiles, Raymond Shelton, Lester Ellis, Robert Duley, Joe Collins, and the present minister is Douglas Voyles. Submitted by: Martha Ann Wesner

Newberry Boom Only A Memory

Deserted stores remind passersby of Newberry's long-gone boom days.

Old jail now keeps only memories captive.

Newberry Boom Only A Memory

By BILL PITTMAN
Staff Reporter

NEWBERRY, Ind. — There aren't many left around who remember Newberry as a boisterous town where the Saturday night fights were likely to be held right there on Broad Street.

That was in the long-gone days when the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad brought the drummers to town and a hotel was handy to the depot. It was lively then with two grist mills, a tannery, a tomato cannery, four taverns, two barbershops, three grocery stores, a general store and a livery stable.

Now Newberry sits sleepily athwart Ind. 57, still known as Broad Street, and the action is largely confined to Farol Keller's restaurant and Dexter York's liquor store. Sooner or later everybody in Cass Township drops in at the restaurant for a piece of Mrs. Keller's homemade pie and a lot of conversation. She is aided in cooking by Margaret Hasler, also a widow, who has closed down her recreational lake nearby to work fulltime in the restaurant.

Newberry sits at the foot of Greene County's rolling hills on the edge of a broad flat prairie and the principle business hereabouts is farming. Mrs. Hasler's son Ronnie, for example, has about 1,000 acres in corn and keeps his friend, Rex Pickett, busy just hauling grain.

New Factory

The newest factory is the Griffin Industries plant where dead farm animals are rendered into feed supplement. The company employs about 35 people from the neighborhood, but many residents work either in Bloomington or at the Crane Naval Ammunition plant.

Griffin Industries is in the process of replacing its older buildings with a new structure. With that and the three new houses being built in town, construction business is enjoying a boom.

Nearby is the A. R. Hungerford feeder cattle operation with 600 to 800 head of beef being fed in large covered feeder pens. They are on the 500 acres that Isaac Benham sold just a few years ago. Benham's land also covers a working oil and gas field.

The "boom" notwithstanding, Newberry has been in a kind of downhill slide since the elementary and high schools were closed and consolidated years ago.

"I can remember getting on the train and going to Terre Haute," Mrs. Keller said. "But now Newberry has kind of been cut off. Since the Bloomington packing plant closed down, I even have trouble getting meat delivered to the restaurant."

"Those old buildings up the street used to be a drugstore, a hardware and an appliance store, but they have been empty a long time. The cannery left because they quit raising tomatoes around here. The kids wouldn't work to set them out like we used to," she said.

Some Return

It is generally conceded that the youngsters in the community and from the surrounding farms will leave as soon as they complete high school. Some of them are beginning to return, however, such as Kevin Keller, who lives in Newberry and teaches sixth grade in Worthington about 14 miles north.

Ed Guthrie, too, has returned to the community and now runs a fuel oil operation, owns two filling stations and works fulltime at the Peabody strip mine.

Frequent restaurant customers are Earl Border and his son Blackie who operate a 250-acre corn seed farm for Pioneer.

Earl at 82 has long since retired. He operated the hardware store for many years. It went under after he sold it. Border remembers the town when it hustled and bustled at the turn of the century, and recalls there was some cussedness then with the salesmen and railroad roustabouts in town.

"The old jail hasn't been used in 70 or 75 years though, except when Big George Holstein lived in it," he said.

It was Border who bought the old covered bridge across the West Fork of White River at the north edge of town. It was sold by the county when the new bridge was built just before World War II.

Border waited until the river was at flood stage and floated the bridge to the bank where he sawed the huge timbers into lumber.

The town, like so many other rural Indiana communities, has been bypassed by commerce. Trade has gone elsewhere as the railroad went dormant and the automobiles proliferated.

Dr. M. L. Hamilton, the physician here for 50 years, and Felix Sapperfield, the funeral director, served the town as long as they were able, and no one came to take their places when they died.

Agency Moved

The old depot is being used as a farm building south of town, the old jail rots in a weed covered lot. Don McMillan has moved his farm implement and John Deere agency out to a crossroads and Marvin Kuhlenschmid has retired and closed his auto agency.

Friendly folk such as E. L. Sipes, a grain hauler, Dallas Malone, a retired farmer, and Dennis York, meet to chat in Keller's, and the Rev. Robert Duley preaches every other Sunday to four different, and dwindling, congregations.

Newberry got its own water supply about 10 years ago, and the principle concern for the town board — Charlene Brookshire, Lavonne York, George Butz and Bob Brookshire, — now is when will they be forced to provide a sewer system.

Newberry was formed about 1823 and was first called Slinkards Mills. It was platted in 1830, and when the railroad came through it held out a large promise for local settlers. That promise was never realized.

Resolutions of Respect

IN MEMORY OF

Brother Arch A. Hawkins, who died, March 11, 1932

"Leaves have their time to fall, and flowers to wilt at the north wind's cold blast, but thou, oh death! hath all seasons for thine own."

ONCE again a Brother Mason, having completed the designs written for him on life's trestle board, has passed through the portals of Eternity and entered the Grand Lodge of the New Jerusalem and hath received as his reward, the white stone with the new name written thereon.

And whereas, the all-wise and merciful Master of the universe has called from labor to refreshments our beloved and respected brother, he having been a true and faithful member of our beloved Order, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That Newberry Lodge, No. 166, F. & A. M., of

Newberry, Indiana., in testimony of her loss, drape its Charter in mourning for thirty days, and that we tender to the family of our deceased brother our sincere condolence in their deep affliction and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family.

COMMITTEE.

Dr. Eddie Borters was the speaker for the February meeting of the Greene County Historical Society held in the conference room of the Bloomfield / Eastern Greene Library. His wife and several relatives were guests. Mr. Larry Jacobs, from Bloomfield Hills, Michigan, was in attendance as a special guest of Dr. Borters.

Dr. Borters talked of his ancestors coming from Switzerland and he has often wondered why they chose to come to Taylor Township when there were seemingly better areas to settle. In his quest to answer that question he has researched his 'roots', which in America are at the Dutch / Hasler Cemetery in Taylor Township.

Dr. Borters; Veterinarian, Naturalist, Biologist and Historian, began his remarks by asking trivia questions. He asked, How old is Greene County? The answer is four and one-half billion years old. 200,000 years ago Greene County was covered by the Illinois Glacier. 60 to 180 million years ago dinosaurs were not here because Greene County was a sea.

Dr. Borters has practiced the veterinarian trade for some 37 years and is known all over Greene County for his care of large animals. Now his son, Scott Borters, has taken over the veterinarian service from his father but 'old Doc Borters' still helps out. When Dr. Eddie first started the vet business most of his patients were large animals, like horses and cattle. Most of young Dr. Scott Borters animal patients are dogs and cats.

Eddie was raised near Newberry and knows lots of history of that region. Some of his trivia questions were centered around Newberry. He asked what made Newberry famous. The answer was the Wabash and Erie Canal, which crossed White River at Newberry so all products shipped by canal from points west had to pass through Newberry.

More questions: Where is the first jail in Greene County that is still in use? Where was the first school in Greene County with an indoor gym? Where was a recreation beach on White River? Where is the largest cypress tree, hemlock and coffee bean tree in Greene County? The answer to all these questions was Newberry.

The audience was involved in naming five caves and five sources of water in Greene County. Other topics were to name new animals in the last 20 years and name some animals disappearing from Greene County.

Dr. Borters mentioned the remaining covered bridge over Richland Creek and said at one time four covered bridges crossed White River near Bloomfield. One was a short distance north of the present Veterans Bridge on Highway 54. A covered railroad bridge was near Elliston and the one that fell in 1957 was down river from Elliston. Also, a covered bridge at Newberry was torn down and the lumber used for buildings.

He related many antidotes from his years of treating animals and he shared some of the weird relics and artifacts from his private collection which included a huge cow hair ball, kidney stones from animals, various objects removed from animal stomachs, barbaric tools of the trade and Indian relics.

Approximately 50 members and guests were present to enjoy the humorous, enlightening and educational content of Dr. Borters talk. A social hour with light refreshments followed.

Dave-Mar Lake

Newberry, Indiana

The Dave-Mar Lake dam was constructed by York Brothers Excavating (Levon "Shorty" and Gene York) in the fall of 1968 and completed in the spring of 1969. The lake was named after the owners David and Margaret Hasler.

The primary intent of the owners was to build a facility for the youth of Newberry and surrounding areas. There were no recreational opportunities for the young people living in the area. Above the fireplace in the recreation hall was a stone plaque which read, "Dedicated to the youth of today, our leaders of tomorrow, may they always stand for God and Country." It was in a prominent location for all to read.

The Dave-Mar Lake was operated as a membership club. However, the cost of membership was only one dollar and the membership was permanent as long as the lake operated.

The aforementioned recreation hall was constructed in 1970 utilizing several local contractors. It was a two-story structure. On the ground floor was the recreation hall consisting of pool tables, pinball machines, ping-pong table, bowling machine and a racecar driving game. There was also a jukebox with songs picked out by the youth who frequented the establishment. There was an attendant who supplied change and also signed up new members and handled camping reservations and placement. There was a large wooden balcony on the lakeside at this level.

The basement level was a walkout structure with a large patio leading to the sanded beach accessible via two large glass sliding patio doors. Sand for the beach and swimming area had to be hauled in from local gravel plants to provide the sanded beach and swimming area. There was a concession stand on the lower level along with a limited camping supply store. The restroom/dressing rooms for the beach and campgrounds were on this level also. The remaining area was used for storage.

The recreation hall was also used for dances. Several teen dances featuring live bands were held during the swimming season. In the off-season many square dances were held for all ages. Several of the regular campers were also square dancers. The recreation hall was also available for birthday parties, Christmas parties, club meetings and various other activities.

Immediately upon completion of the dam the lake was stocked with bass, hi-bred bluegill, red-ear, channel catfish, and a limited number of rainbow trout. There were boat and trolling motor rentals available or a concrete boat ramp available to launch your own boat. Gasoline powered motors were not allowed to be operated on the lake. The lake covered 25 acres, but some of the "fingers" were quite narrow and the owners believed it was too small to accommodate gasoline-powered boats. There was also a small bait house where bait and fishing supplies could be purchased.

There were 40 campsites in the main campground that had electric and water hook-ups for recreational vehicles. There were 13 additional campsites with water, electric, and sewer hook-up plus a concrete patio. These sites were rented by the season. There was also a primitive camping area for tent campers.

Just as the facility was getting "off its feet" tragedy struck in July 1971. David Hasler died unexpectedly of a heart attack at the age of 48. Margaret Hasler continued to operate the lake with help from her parents, son and daughter-in-law, and a couple of faithful campers from Indianapolis. Many of the regular campers, neighbors, and friends were always willing to help where they could. Finally, in 1976 Margaret decided to close the beach, campground, and recreation hall. The lake was still open for fishing and the season campsites.

To this day, many of the youth of that time, now adults, reminisce about their experiences at Dave-Mar Lake.

Farmer's Tankage of Newberry later called Griffin Industries

Information from 'A Tradition In Rendering', Farol Keller and Joyce Hasler

In 1934 Jake St. John came to Newberry, Indiana, with the intention of starting a tankage business. He was familiar with the rendering industry before arriving in Newberry. The tankage business consisted of reducing dead animals into stock feed, fertilizer and animal skins.

Victor Hasler sold some land to Mr. St John for his new plant. No money changed hands. Mr St John was to furnish Mr. Hasler with stock feed until the debt was paid.

Mr. St. John started small but he had to have buildings, trucks and drivers to pick up the dead animals from farms in the area, he needed skimmers to remove the hides and cookers to render the grease. Every part of the animal was used: such as bones for meal, grease sent to the soap companies, hides to be tanned and other parts were used for animal feed.

About 1942 Jake St. John sold out to the Albert Jacobshagon family with Max Jacobshagon, Albert's brother was manager. The Newberry plant had a large workforce, ten cookers, three dryers and boilers fired by coal and Rick Jacobshagon became manager and still worked there in 1993, when the book 'A Tradition In Rendering' was written.

When Griffin Industries took over the Newberry plant in 1970, it was a very large but old plant which primarily processed poultry waste, dead animals and locker plant waste products with-in a 100 mile radius. The plant had good workers, good buildings but poor equipment.

In the new Griffin Plant gas fired boilers were installed to replace coal and a new water system was installed. New state-of-the-art equipment was added to help clean up the operation and make it ecologically sound.

After the new facilities were completed, the poultry operation was expanded and in 1971 a new feather plant was built at Newberry to make feathers into fertilizer. A joke circulated in Newberry about one of the truck drivers. He was in Ohio and was stopped by the police for an over-weight load. When they asked what he was hauling and his answer was feathers they thought it was a 'smart mouth' answer. Knowing how light feathers are they inspected his load and were surprised when they found he really was hauling feathers to Newberry, Indiana.

Griffin Industries has rendering facilities in several states. An offensive odor has always plagued the plants. A class action was taken against the company and the government stepped in and the industry has to comply with strict state and federal regulations.

The Newberry plant has several employees a fleet of trucks and state of the art equipment. They are the leading employer in Cass Township

Newberry bridges called 'safe'

Slated for replacement in 2010

By Nick Schneider
ASSISTANT EDITOR

NEWBERRY — While the Minneapolis bridge collapse disaster has generated concern about safety of bridge structures across the nation, an Indiana State Department of Transportation official says the latest inspection of the twin truss-type bridge on State Road 57 — just north of Newberry — showed no reason for alarm.

The bridges — which cross the White River and overflow area to the north — were constructed in 1940. The bridges underwent rehabilitation repairs in 1982.

The two bridges near Newberry are the last iron truss-type bridge structures still in use on state highways in Greene County.

The last inspection conducted on Aug. 29, 2006 showed "they were beginning to need replacement," according to INDOT spokesperson Cheri Goodwin, who works out of the Vincennes District office.

"There was nothing critical outlined from the inspection if there was a major deficiency or a problem. There wasn't any one thing that stood out. As far as the integrity of the bridge itself and its safeness, it is structurally fine. There is no need for alarm," she explained.

"They are good sound structures."

Goodwin said the bridges are on INDOT's schedule for replacement.

"They are both scheduled for replacement in 2010 and the projected cost on those is $12 million together," Goodwin said. "It would be a new standard concrete type bridge that would be open on the top."

She also pointed out that are some wildlife concerns that will have to be addressed when it comes time for replacement.

Recently, Indiana Brown Bats — a state protected species — have taken up residence in a nesting area on a north side bridge abutment.

"We've (INDOT) actually gone in and secured the area — put up some fencing to make it a more secure area for them and animals can't come in and disturb the bats," Goodwin said.

Goodwin said that the presence of the bats will have no real effect on the bridge replacement plans other than making plans to work with the Indiana Department of Natural Resources in how to handle the relocation of the bats in a new habitat.

"We are still moving forward with the (bridge replacement) project," she said.

Looking at the entire county, Goodwin said there are no bridge structures on state highways that show up on what she termed as a "critical list."

"There were over 800 bridges on a state report last year that came out that defined functionally obsolete or suspicious structures. Here in southwestern Indiana — the area that our district covers — there were 80 bridges. A very small number — 10 percent here in this area," she said. "That does not include any county bridges."

Goodwin stressed of the 80 designated bridges, none were listed in the critical category.

The Vincennes INDOT district covers all or parts of 18 counties.

Goodwin explained that statewide every bridge structure is inspected a minimum of every two years and some, which are on a watch list, may undergo more frequent follow-up inspections on a three month, six month or yearly basis.

"We want to stress that all of our structures are safe to be driving upon. At any time during inspection or day to day travel that we can find a structure that is questionable or we felt like it was unsafe, we would absolutely close the road for the public's protection," she stated.

Goodwin added, "We want to reassure motorists that we are going to take any findings from the Minnesota accident and incorporate that into our inspections as well. If there is a trend or something that we need to take note of, we will be sure to make that a part of our inspections."

The former train depot and telegraph office that had been on the farm of Jack and Joyce Hasler in Newberry moved Thursday to the White River Valley Antique Association's village at the fairgrounds in Elnora. Joyce Hasler donated the depot in memory of her late husband.

Depot donation a tribute to husband

Former train station heads to antique association village

NEWBERRY — After her husband's death last year, Newberry resident Joyce Hasler knew what she wanted to do to honor him.

So, on Thursday, she watched as the small town's old train depot headed for its new home in Elnora to be part of the White River Valley Antique Association's village at the fairgrounds.

"They'd asked to buy it from him, and he'd always said no," she said of her late husband, Jack. "So after he died, I knew they'd buy it but I thought, no — I'm not going to sell it. I'm going to donate it so other people can enjoy it. And it'll be in his memory."

The old depot was part of the New York Central Railroad, which apparently stopped service to the small Greene County town sometime in the 1940s.

The depot was moved to what's now the Hasler farm sometime in the 1950s by a man who'd worked for the railroad, Hasler said. It was on the property when they bought it 40 years ago, she said.

Eighty-three-year-old Farol Keller, who's lived in Newberry all her life, recalled leaving the depot to travel on the train for the first time as a young girl.

She rode up the tracks to Terre Haute to see her brother, an engineer for the railroad.

And when she was even younger, she said, her brother would toot the train whistle a special way when he came through town so family members would know he was driving.

Hearing the whistle, her mother would let her go outside to wave at him.

"That's the way we got our mail, and they delivered packages on the train," Keller said. "That was our main transportation in and out of town."

Hasler said it was tough to see the train depot leaving her farm — and the town.

"It was bittersweet," she said. "I was emotional."

The depot was moved by MCF Housemovers of Newburgh and arrived safely at Elnora Thursday.

The depot will now be restored and will bear a plaque on it in her husband's honor, Hasler said.

The recent donation of the Newberry Depot to the White River Valley Antique Association was made in the honor of Jack Hasler----a lifelong Newberry resident. Joyce Hasler, who with her two children, Doug and Demita Hasler, decided that since Jack had never wanted to sell it when the White River Valley Antique Association offered to buy the old building, they shouldn't sell it either. "He passed away suddenly last October, and since he didn't want to sell it, we wanted to donate it in his memory." Moved in the early 1950s to a Newberry farm owned by an ex-railroad man, Clarence Roach, the old depot building stayed with the farm when Jack and Joyce Hasler bought the property 41 years ago. Roach had the depot building transported to his property though no one is sure these days how much, if anything, he had to pay to acquire it.

Over a hundred years old, at best guess, the depot has a long, rich history. Deronda Holmes originally came to Newberry in 1930 to work for her uncle. The depot was their main source of transportation, and she remembers the mail coming in on the train. Martha Wesner, also of Newberry, remembers that her father, Felix Sappenfield, has a funeral home, and the caskets would come in by train. "They (caskets) would be shipped on the railroad," she explained. "Dad would go down and pick up the caskets." As a young girl, Wesner would go with her father to the depot. "My dad was good friends with the depot operator," she said. "I thought it was a big deal." Wesner believes the depot to have been built around 1888. It was interesting to look out the depot door and there was the river," Wesner reminisced.

Part of the New York Central Railroad, the building served as a depot for the company. The Newberry Bridge was built in 1941, spanning the railroad and the track that was long ago removed, probably making the depot and the rail traffic it governed obsolete,

Farol Keller, who's lived in Newberry all her life, recalled leaving the depot to travel on the train for the first time as a young girl. She rode up the tracks to Terre Haute to see her brother, an engineer for the railroad. And when she was even younger, she said, her brother would toot the train whistle a special way when he came through town so family members would know he was driving. Hearing the whistle, her mother would let her go outside to wave at him. "That's the way we got our mail, and they delivered packages on the train," Keller said. "That was our main transportation in and out of town."

Newberry Festival

By Anna Rochelle
NEWBERRY — The annual Newberry Festival was Friday and Saturday.

A group of veterans (above) served as the grand marshals of the parade. They are from Newberry, Linton, Bloomfield and other parts of Greene County. They are also called the "Thursday Morning Breakfast Club" because the veterans get together every Thursday morning at the Newberry Café.

75 Years Ago

There have been chicken thieves in Newberry on several occasions recently. As many as fifty chickens have been stolen in a single night. Someone has a most ravenous appetite for chicken or else they are marketing their swag—The grainery of Charles Jameson was entered by thieves last Saturday night and several bushels of wheat were stolen. Mr. Jameson feels pretty sure he knows who did it—The hen house of John Summerville was entered last Saturday night and a number of Mr. Summerville's most choice hens were carried away—

THREE TOWNS DRY.

Bloomfield, Worthington and Newberry Vote to Have No Saloons.

The local option election held in Richland township last Friday resulted in a victory for the "dry" forces. The official majority against the return of the saloons was 101, but an error in tallying made the official majority 98. There will be no licensed saloons in this town or township for at least two years, but the "dry" advocates will be expected to stop all other forms of liquor law violations which are now well known to almost everybody.

The election in Cass township held the same day was decisively a victory for the "dry" side and there will be no saloons in Newberry.

Last Monday Jefferson township voted on the local option question. There has been saloons in Worthington for two years, but the people were convinced that conditions were worse with saloons than without. The majority against the "wets" was about 100.

A mural on the wall of the Masonic lodge in tiny Newberry in Greene County depicts the variety of ethnicities in the United States and the farming industry once prevalent in Indiana.

Designed and painted by artist Jan Cabel, the mural was completed about 10 years ago, after an acquaintance suggested it. Jan Cabel's husband, Joe, operated the front-loader that allowed her to reach the work area.

A secret among Newberry folks: Hidden among the corn are the initials of those involved with the project, including the Cabels and some of their family members'.

"You can't tell; we worked it into the scene," said Joe Cabel.

The Citizens' Bank of Newberry closed in 1932 and was later used as the town's Post Office.
