INTRODUCTION

Wills are among the most important genealogical resources. The dates of signing and probate help to approximate the date of death - especially valuable in the absence of information from tombstones, church records, or newspaper notices. The signature or lack of it on an original document may provide clues to the literacy and state of health of the signer. The personal property mentioned in the will, such as a sword, family bible, or silver and gold objects provide clues to the life styles of the testator. Of course the family relationship and names of legatees in the document are of paramount importance in reconstructing the family group.

In Maryland when an individual died prior to 1776 there may well be three copies of the will (and other probate records). The first is the original copy which may have been deposited at the Maryland State Archives in Annapolis. The second is the copy of the will found in the county court house, and the third copy is that found in the records of the Prerogative Court, which were kept first at St. Marys City, then in Annapolis, and are now of course at the Maryland State Archives. Whenever possible all three copies should be consulted, with any discrepancies noted. The original will may be faded or cracked (due to having been folded), but may provide the proper spelling of a name miscopied by either the county clerks or those of the Prerogative Court. On the other hand, the copies may contain more legible writing than the original, which may have been written in haste by someone poorly educated or hardly able to hold a pen - or both.

The wills in this volume cover the years 1664-1775, but were not recorded in either the Somerset or Worcester County Will Books, and thus do not duplicate the wills abstracted and published by Ruth T. Dryden or Sharon A. Jones.

The wills in this volume are arranged alphabetically by the last name of the testator, and give the Prerogative Will Book and folio number on which the will begins, the dates of signing and proving, and the names of all persons mentioned in the will. Where land was bequeathed, the name of the tract has also been included.

This book of abstracts is a companion volume to the abstracts of Worcester County Wills prepared by Sharon A. Jones (for the years 1742-1769) and Ruth T. Dryden (for the period 1769-1783 and 1790-1851).
