Deaths Reported in the Las Vegas Age

Las Vegas, Nevada

April 7, 1905 to December 31, 1933

If you are accustomed to reviewing vital records in areas of the country where records have been kept for three centuries or more, you may find it strange that all Las Vegas records are twentieth century records.

The area now called "Las Vegas" (Spanish for "The Meadows") received its name from the flowing springs, streams and surrounding meadows which created a green oasis in the midst of the desert. Native Americans enjoyed the benefits of the area for many centuries before the first Europeans appeared.

The first significant efforts by people of European origin to establish a permanent settlement in Las Vegas began in 1855 when Brigham Young sent a party of Mormons to establish a mission. Soon afterwards the Latter Day Saints sent a second Mormon group to develop mineral resources that early explorers had discovered in the mountains to the west and south of Las Vegas. Neither of these efforts was successful and by 1858 the church had recalled both groups to Utah Territory.

From 1858 until the beginning of the twentieth century, the vicinity was a ranch, owned first by O. D. Gass, later by Archibald Stewart and still later by Stewart's widow, Helen J. Stewart.

Construction of the San Pedro, Los Angeles, and Salt Lake Railroad between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City began just after the turn of the century. Senator W. A. Clark of Montana, the developer of the railroad, purchased the Stewart Ranch in 1902 and in 1904 he designated it a railroad Division Point. The first train arrived in January 1905 and on May 15, 1905, the railroad auctioned to the public about 1,200 lots. Las Vegas was born.

The early growth of Las Vegas amazed no one. Gaming was made illegal a few years after the auction, although anti-gambling laws were not rigorously enforced. Despite its becoming the county seat of newly organized Clark County in 1909, the population in 1930 was barely more than 5,000. Construction of Boulder (Hoover) Dam beginning in 1929 and re-legalization of gambling in 1931 signaled the beginning of development.

The first issue of a new newspaper, the Las Vegas Age, was published on April 5, 1905, preceding by a month the date the Stewart Ranch became Las Vegas. The newspaper was published from that time until 1947. In the early years, it was a weekly but the frequency of publication increased gradually and the Age had become a daily at the time publication ceased. Genealogists are fortunate to have available a single source for these vital records during the pioneer period in Las Vegas.

The Nevada State Historical Society indexed the entire Las Vegas Age newspaper and prepared a separate index of deaths reported from the inaugural edition in 1905 through the end of 1933. These were the years when Las Vegas was little more than a village. This separate index of deaths is the index that appears in the following pages.

The staff of the State Historical Society, particularly Frank Wright and Dave Millman, were most helpful during the compiling of the data base from the card index. Their assistance is acknowledged and appreciated.
