BOUQUET'S EXPEDITION TO COSHOCTON

The following is a continuation from the Kinsman Courier, Winter issue of 2002 and Spring issue 2003.

Bouquet has generally been credited with releasing approximately 200 prisoners. The accompanying lists from the Gage papers designated lists A, B, C, and D, account for 194 captives delivered by the Delawares to Colonel Bouquet's forces in October and November of 1764. List E from the British Museum Additional Manuscripts, contains 12 names not included in lists A-D.

The Shawnees were not as prompt in complying with the Articles of Agreement as the Delawares. However, they turned over 9 captives on January 5, 1765, and 44 additional captives on May 10, 1765. These lists, also found in the Gage Papers, are designated lists F and G.

LIST G

On every hand were piled rugs, many burned into charred masses while others were only scorched on the boxes. Quite a number were rescued by foreman BAKER and those were hung on lines to dry. In the carpet storage were two rolls of one thousand yards of new carpet which did not seem to be injured. At the same time there were other rolls of five hundred yards which had the ends so burned as to cause complete ruin. Of some $900 worth of wool yarn some $50 was saved. Ravelings were on the floor for some seventy-five rugs ready for — and the foreman stated that by this evening he would have had $1000 of stock out for shipment. In one place was a great heap of untouched old carpets and the factory was crammed with work for weeks ahead.

On the third floor the destruction was as complete as in any part of the building. There were heaps of household effects all burned over and water soaked and apparently utterly ruined. About all that can be saved from the mass is some stoves and iron bedsteads.

In the basement is located a 35 horse power gas engine. The floor over it held and it is practically undamaged. The line shafting in the basement seems also uninjured. The boiler of the steam engine is but slightly damaged, but the engine parts, pump, etc, are in bad shape.

Later investigation as to the cause of the fire shows that the Times published the only correct theory. Beyond doubt it was a gas explosion and gasoline fluid had nothing at all to do with the accident. There appears now, however, that a leakage of natural gas contributed to bring about the disaster. The day before some gas piping had been done preparatory to installing another presser in the grossing room. When the help went to work in the morning several remarked to Mr. SPECK they noticed natural gas fumes, but at the time he thot little of it. There seems to be no doubt but that this gas filled that section of the building and traveled until it reached a spark when the explosion came.

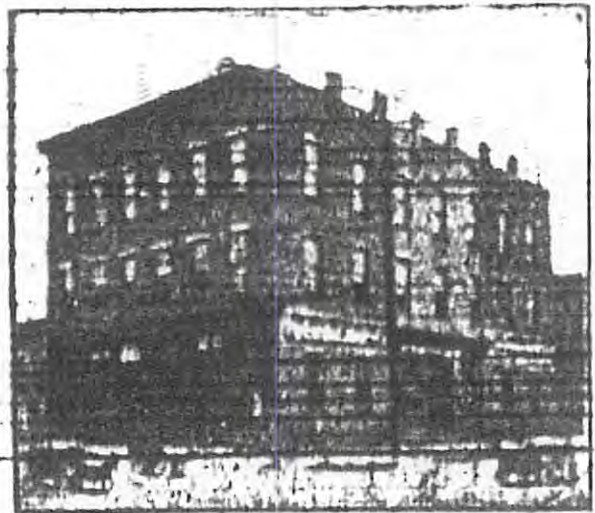

This accounts for the quickness with which the flames seized upon the main building.

The company announces that it has made arrangements to at once resume its laundry business. It will maintain offices with Mr. MILLIGAN and will receive and deliver laundry as before, having made a contract with the Muskingum laundry at Zanesville to do the work.

It is also announced that just as soon as the fire insurance can be adjusted the work of rebuilding and restoring the plant will be commenced. The rug industry will not be resumed until the rebuilding is completed, which will take some considerable time. The fire has thrown quite a number of people out of employment temporarily and this will be quite a misfortune.

Many people who had their clothes at the laundry will be visiting the stores today to get their customary changes on "tub night."

OLD SOLDIER LAID TO REST

John HORNER, Sr., a highly respected man who resided at his country home four miles north of Frazeyburg, died last Saturday. Mr. HORNER, was born January 4th, 1828 and was therefore nearly 80 years of age. He was a member of Co. H 159th Ohio during the war. He is survived by his wife, and six children, C. C. HORNER, Jno R. HORNER, Mrs. Gilbert ASHCRAFT, Mrs. Sarah K. GAULT, Mrs. M. J. BRYAN; all of Frazeyburg and Joseph W. HORNER an attorney at Newark; besides these, 9 grandchildren and a host of friends remain. Two daughters, Callie and Hattie, preceded him in death. He was a good neighbor and kind father.

The funeral occurred from the home Monday, Dec. 30 at 11 o'clock, under the auspices of the G. A. R. Rev. CLEMM officiating.

Among those from a distance who attended the obsequies, were Mr. And Mrs. Clyde PRESTON, the latter a grand daughter, of Monongahela, Pa. And Mrs. James MCKEE, son Frank and wife of Coshocton.

BAKERSVILLE ACCIDENT

A deplorable and frightful accident appeared Saturday evening, in the village of Bakersville, this county, during a jollification over the Democratic victory. A small cannon had been brought from the village of Baltic, and was being fired off with rather heavy charges of powder. In one of the discharges the cannon burst in every direction with terrific force. One of the flying metals entered the window of the village Hotel, near by kept by Mr. FORD and his wife. Mrs. FORD was sitting inside the window. It struck her, tearing away a portion of the face and head, killing her instantly. John W. MIZER, of Baltic, standing on the street, was hit by a piece of the shattered gun, which cut away half the leg well up toward the hip, not only carrying away the flesh, but crushing the bones of the limb. He will lose his leg, even if his life is saved. A number of other persons were more or less injured. The terrible mishap stopped the celebration.

Taken from The Coshocton Democrat, Tuesday, November 15, 1892, Vol. 49, # 7, pg 3.

THE BURSTING OF A CANNON

Brings Disaster to Homes and Gloom to a Jubilant Throng

A terrible accident occurred at Bakersville, last Saturday evening, which turned the jollification that was in progress into a scene of mourning. It seems that no one is to be blamed for the mishap which brought such sad results, the cause being only misplaced confidence in a dangerous implement.

The following extract from the Bakersville press gives the details of the sad affair:

"A few minutes past 8 o'clock the band made its appearance on the street to cheer further the jollifiers in their noisy merriment. The boys rendered one selection but were interrupted in the second by the excitement occasioned by the bursting of the "cannon." The instrument of destruction, it is remembered, was not a real cannon, but a broken jack-screw, which had been used on an event of like nature. It was about eight inches in length with a two inch caliber, very rough, and was discharged by a fuse in charge of J. W. MIZER, of Baltic. Four discharges from the mouth of the weapon echoed and re-echoed from hill to hill, and nobody tho't that it would blight a happy home and throw a pall of sadness over two others. But such was the case, for it exploded with terrific force in the fifth round. Though cautioned beforehand to be careful with it, the weapon, which was brought from Baltic by Mr. MIZER himself early in the evening, was charged heavily with powder and brick, after which it was placed on a stone foundation in the street, a rod or so from BIXLER'S corner, and there discharged with the following result:

Mr. John D. THOMAS, who was standing in front of Hotel Ford, heard immediately after the discharge the cries of a child within, and upon going to the window, was the mangled corpse of Mrs. Wm. O. FORD, who had been sitting in her room, watching the spectacle. The child which was in her arms at the time, escaped unharmed. The fragment that struck Mrs. FORD was about two by four inches and weighed nearly two pounds. It passed through the window, breaking the sash and two panes of glass, striking the unfortunate woman in the face and passing out at the back of the head. A portion of the jawbone was found on the floor nearby, and some hair and flesh on the door at the opposite side of the room.
