order of the day was generally as follows: On leaving their state rooms in the morning, the first business was ablution. This was not a pleasant operation, as they were obliged to perform it with salt water, and the saline properties evinced more of a disposition to adhere to the skin than was quite agreeable; hence the task of wiping and rubbing was more satisfactory than that of washing. If the weather was mild, the quarter deck became the resort, where they amused themselves by reading or walking till the breakfast call, which was usually about eight o'clock.

This ceremony over, they returned to much the same employments till the hour of dining. This was the important meal of the day, and they were sometimes treated to a desert, which consisted of boiled rice pudding, and, the greatest luxury of all, a mince pie, compounded of corned pork or beef, sea biscuit, dried apples of questionable character, and a smart seasoning of salt and pepper. Dinner concluded, which left them in the best possible humor, they generally took a siesta of an hour or two. After this refreshing, they found the shade of the awning quite grateful, as it was now the warmest part of the day, being between one and four o'clock. They again resorted to their books, till, wearying of this, after being out a few weeks, it required something unusually exciting to interest them, and the felt, if they could only step into a bookstore and procure something new, it would be an inestimable privilege. The little stock of reading was soon exhausted, and they were without resource of this kind.

They were from the 29th of July to the 9th September, being about five weeks, reaching the equator; and had listened to a great many sailor yarns respecting the wicked practices of Neptune, and looked forward to the crossing with some expectation of witnessing an exhibition of his pranks. They stated, that, as often as a ship neared the seat of his power, he came on board with his queen, tritons, and attendants; and if there were any green hands on board, they were sure to suffer. He generally forced their acceptance of a coat of tar, well napped with feathers; and for several days their faces would not recover from the severe shaving they had received in the shape of scraping. At the eventful period, the cabin boy Billy was obliged to undergo some ceremony of the kind, the particulars of which they could never learn; but the poor fellow was dreadfully frightened, and it is probable the crew played upon him some severe joke.

There was rather an amusing scene when the sun was first discovered directly over head. The doctor was aware they were about far enough to the south to see it in this position; and one day, about twelve o'clock, placing himself in a posture so that he could have a clear view of it, he suddenly sprang up, and cried out loudly, "Stand from under!—don't you see we shall all be dashed to atoms? Stand from under!" There were many idlers lounging about the deck, and at the shout, they ran in a panic from their several places, and stared about in every direction but the right. Apprehending no danger from the "god of the day," their thoughts never once pointed to him; and they could see no cause for the cry. Turning their eyes to the doctor, they saw him laughing, and immediately suspected they had been gulled. He pointed upward, and instantly comprehending the ruse, they enjoyed a hearty laugh.

They were now approaching the most dangerous part of the voyage, and did not pass the ordeal unscathed. In a few days they were near where the Amazon empties into the sea; and such a vast volume of water rushing towards them in one direction, and the winds in a contrary, the vessel was often very agitated. It was thought they were in considerable danger; but it was slight compared with what they soon experienced from the most terrific storm they encountered. The clouds began looming in the west, the breeze to whistle more shrilly; and the passengers, who on these occasions are more than usually alert, observed the officers interchanging looks of meaning, and issuing orders in low tones of stern decision; and that the men went to their duty with more than ordinary readiness and alacrity, with a few words, as though much were depending upon their movements. Mr. Beers sidled coaxingly along to the captain, and modestly enquired, "Capt. Barker, is there danger?" With a shrug of impatience he replied, "Danger, danger—no!" with a significant motion, which the interrogator interpreted as a wish for him to go; for he immediately went below, and began diligently studying the sacred promises. The ladies stealthily repaired to the cabin, and no one was left on deck save a few courageous spirits, who delighted to witness the conflict between old ocean and the storm. The hatchways were closed, and orders given for reefing the sails. With an apprehensive glance at the already black horizon, the men sprang aloft, and one after another of the clouds of canvas disappeared from the masts, and, with a single

During the winter, there was a convention for getting up a petition to the United States Government to extend jurisdiction over the colony. It is but just to say, that the result of that movement, and all subsequent petitions, has been, as was predicted by some on that day., to draw upon Oregon hundreds of immigrants, many from the westerner frontier of the states, of a restless, aspiring disposition, save that, in the spring of 1847, mails were for the first sent to that country at Government expense.

It is to be regretted that the government has never taken any formal action to avail the colonists in the least, in their difficult and dangerous position. Mr. Lynn's bill, proffering a portion of land to each male settler, has oscillated between house and senate for the last six years, keeping the settlers in suspense between hope and fear. But I am wandering, and must return to the spring of 1838.

The rainy season closing, preparations were made for Mr. Lee's return to the States, ostensibly for a reinforcement, although such a recruit came in the year previous. But there was territory enough to be occupied by four times the number already there. However, there was another object in view in sending him out. It was the unanimous opinion that he had been long enough rusticated in the woods, and that it would be advisable for him to return home, if but for a short time, in the hope that commingling once more with polished society, would result advantageously to himself and the mission, of which he was superintendent.

A short time after his departure, Mr. Daniel Lee and Mr. Perkins commenced missionary operations at the Dalles of the Columbia, nearly a hundred miles from Fort Vancouver. There the great reformation was effected, of which Mr. Perkins gave such a glowing, melting description to the American public. There was also a revival of religion at the mission, which for a time produced a happy change among the youth and American residents. Indeed, Mr. Lee's absence was an eventful period, for it now happened that Mr. Thomas J. Hubbard a second time started for California for herds, with about twenty of the neighboring men, and in three weeks the news returned by Mr. La Fromboy, of the Hudson's Bay Company, that they had been attacked by the Cheste Indians, and every one killed. The emotions of the families of the party may be imagined, but not described. An awful gloom spread over the colony. They hoped it might be a false report, and waited long for a relief to their anxiety, when one day they heard the firing of guns at some distance from the mission, on the opposite side of the river. They hastened in the direction of the sound, and to their infinite joy found nearly all the party they had feared were slain. They had been defeated by the savages, driven out of their way, and wandered about in the mountains, some of them suffering severely from their wounds.

Soon after this an event transpired more generally mourned than any other during Mr. Lee's absence, and nearly concerning him. It was Mrs. Lee's death, which occurred after a short illness. Her young son died in two or three days after, and they were buried together in the grove where the mother was married scarce a year previous.

Neither were Dr. and Mrs. White without their personal afflictions, for there they buried George, their adopted son, who was drowned while attempting to cross the Willamette river on horseback. The current was very rapid, and it was supposed he became giddy, for he turned the horse's head down stream, and, becoming entangled in the saddle, was drowned and carried away, before his companion, an Indian, could reach him. He narrowly escaped a similar fate the day they left Havana for New York, to start for Oregon. He was rambling thoughtlessly about the boat, when he accidentally fell overboard, and was recovered with some difficulty. He was dear to them as an own child, and they lamented their loss with heartfelt sorrow. By his side, also, they laid their little Jason, an infant of eleven months, which was likewise drowned, when Mrs. White so miraculously escaped with her own life, while on an excursion down the Columbia river.

It was the season that Dr. Whitman's little daughter was drowned in the Wallawalla, a tributary of the Columbia; and what made it a more remarkable coincidence, was, that these two children were the first born son and daughter of Oregon. It was truly a summer of singular events,—the greatest revival, and the greatest number of deaths that occurred during the same length of time of their stay in Oregon.

Betty Lou Kennedy

[Oregonian, 13 Nov 2002, p.B6]

Betty Lou Kennedy was born Bett Loy Kaiser in Aurora, Illinois, on Sept. 15, 1921, the third of four children. She attended La Grange Junior College. During World War II she worked for the Quaker Oats Company in Chicago as a payroll clerk.

During a 1944 visit to Phoenix, she met Evan Kennedy, an aircraft design engineer. The two were married on Feb 3, 1945.

After the war, they moved several times. Her first child, Anne, was born in Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. In 1947 they moved to Portland, where Evan found work as a structural engineer. They joined First Presbyterian Church, where they were very active. She had a second child, Carter, and a third, Gordon. She was a seemingly tireless homemaker. She knitted and sewed in addition to participating in PTA, church choir, Cub Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, and myriad other activities that enriched her life and the lives of others.

Betty Lou was an avid genealogist, and she joined the Genealogical Forum of Oregon in the 1960s. She was a member until her death, serving as treasurer, president and in other offices. She learned to use a computer and genealogical software when she was well over 60. She corresponded with genealogists throughout the country. Like her mother, Betty Lou was a member of the P.E.O. Sisterhood, a women's society that raises scholarship money for women and offers its members friendship, encouragement, and support. She was a member for over 50 years and served in all of her chapter's offices.

In 1974, Evan was transferred to Baltimore. They intended to be gone from Portland for five years, but as it turned out they stayed in the Baltimore-Washington area until 1989. She was active in church and P.E.O. there and researched her and Evans ancestors in Virginia and West Virginia. She served as a docent at an historic house in Maryland. They enjoyed visiting the cultural and historical sites of the East Coast.

In 1979 she became a grandmother when her daughter Anne gave birth to Colleen Kennedy Chrisinger.

When Evan retired, they briefly considered living in the East or Colorado, but the lure of being near their family in the Northwest brought them back to Portland. They resumed their activities at First Presbyterian. Betty Lou joined the church's bell choir. She frequently visited her children and granddaughter. She and Evan traveled to family reunions, and in 1998 took a 6-week tour of Europe, which included a visit to her ancestors' village in Switzerland. She was a member of both the D.A.C. and the D.A.R., for which she served as state president and in other offices.

She became increasingly troubled by an arthritic hip. She underwent hip replacement surgery in an effort to regain her mobility. The hip surgery was successful, but there were complications. She summoned all her stubborn determination, her desire to be with her family, and physical endurance, but after fighting for sixteen days she died November 4, 2002 at the age of 81.

She was a well-liked neighbor, a loving mother and grandmother, and an irreplaceable wife. The world is poorer for her passing.

Eileen Mahoney Nelson

A member since 1986, Eileen Nelson died in Portland on May 7, 2001. She was born in Portland on July 15, 1921, graduated from St. Mary's Academy, and worked as a claims examiner for several different companies, before retiring in 1988.

Survivors include a son, Donald. Interment was at Mt. Calvary Cemetery.

Anna (Ohlmann) Rutan

Former Forum member, Ann O. Rutan died January 29, 2001.

Ten Years in Oregon:

Travels and Adventures of Doctor E. White and Lady, west of the rocky mountains, with INCIDENTS OF TWO SEA VOYAGES VIA SANDWICH ISLANDS AROUND CAPE HORN; containing, also, a brief history of the missions and settlements of the country origins of the provisional government number and customs of the Indians incidents witnessed while traversing and residing in the territory, description of the soil, production, and climate. Compiled by Miss A. J. Allen. (ITHACA, N. Y.,: Press of Andrus, Gauntlett, & Co., 1850).

CHAPTER III.

Falkland Isles—Seals, &c.—Albatross—Cape Horn—Atmosphere—Man overboard—Miss Johnson's efforts for his conversion—Juan Fernandes—Burial of the cook—Whales—Loss of the ship Essex.

As they proceeded further southward, the swell of the sea was very much greater, the waves higher, and the troughs were deeper; and for several days before they reached the Cape, they were made aware of its vicinity by this marked change, which, when within two days' sail of it, was really frightful. The wind wafted them strongly and steadily onward; but he scene became more and more dismal, till they approached the Falkland Islands. Here it was much calmer and clearer, and they had a fine view of the isles, the coast of which differed from any other they had ever seen. There were rocks, seeming to rise perpendicular from the sea, to the height of several hundred feet, entirely barren, excepting where, in their clefts, a thin soil afforded a place for various sorts of ever-greens to fasten their roots. It seemed singular that, with so small sustenance, even this hardy species could flourish as it did, from the height of three to twenty feet, presenting to the eye a pleasant picture, where the green branches rested on the face of the rugged rock, or in dark relief against the sky.

Formerly, here had been extensive fisheries, of various kinds, producing immense revenues to those engaged in them. Several sorts of seals, called the sea horse, sea lion, &c., were also found in great abundance.

Large flocks of birds, among which were the gull, and {page 35} albatross, frequented the coast, leaving quantities of their eggs, and were often found on their nests with their young, where they appeared as tame as domestic fowls, until an attempt was made to drive them from thence, when they would fight with fierceness as long as life remained. Here they saw the albatross, the largest of the water fowl, and excepting the condor, the largest bird that flies, measuring from tip to tip of the extended wings, from twelve to fifteen feet; and the captain assured them he had seen an instance of one seventeen feet.

As they approached Cape Horn the wind blew more strongly from the north-west, directly in their faces, driving them several days out of their course.

The farther south they sailed, the more unpleasant grew the atmosphere; so humid and piercing, that, clothing themselves as thickly as possible, and retiring to their births, it was still very chilling and uncomfortable. The utmost endeavors were made to kindle fires, but the dampness frustrated such efforts, and the only effect was filling the cabin with smoke. For nineteen days they were in this forlorn, uncomfortable situation, when the shifting of the winds in their favor, enabled them to regain their lost ground, and double the Cape.

A thrilling occurrence took place as they were rounding the most southern point. A man was sent aloft on Sabbath morning, and in a few moments, "a man overboard!" rang through the ship. This was the first occurrence of the kind that had happened, and the possibility of it had scarcely entered their thoughts. That one should be taken from among them in so sudden and fearful a manner, almost paralysed the little community. With pallid faces they crowded to the stern, and each did his best to assist the unfortunate man. For a while, from the heavy roll of the waves, it seemed utterly impossible to accomplish his rescue. But a merciful providence interfered; he was enabled to seize one of the ropes which had been thrown him, and, as he was drawn on board, one volume of thanks rose to heaven, from the hearts of the anxious gazers. Miss Johnson immediately opened a correspondence with him on his truly miraculous escape; her affectionate heart saw that if ever there was an opening for divine grace, this was one. She labored well and perseveringly, and it was thought that her kind, affectionate, christian efforts, were crowned

Ten Years in Oregon:

Travels and Adventures of Doctor E. White and Lady, west of the rocky mountains, with INCIDENTS OF TWO SEA VOYAGES VIA SANDWICH ISLANDS AROUND CAPE HORN; containing, also, a brief history of the missions and settlements of the country origins of the provisional government number and customs of the Indians incidents witnessed while traversing and residing in the territory, description of the soil, production, and climate. Compiled by Miss A. J. Allen. (ITHACA, N. Y.,; Press of Andrus, Gauntlett, & Co., 1850).

CHAPTER V.

Spring and preparations to leave the Sandwich Islands—Benefit to them of their residence there—Engage passage on board ship—Food and water—Windy and boisterous—Great loss—Contents of the Boxes sent on board by Pilot Reynolds; his wife—Interesting young man; his marriage with a native woman—Mr. Grimes—Succession of Storms—Endeavor to cross the Bar of the Columbia—Desperation of the Captain—Crossing—Lulling of the Winds—Baker's Bay—Rest—View—Varieties of Trees; their enormous size—King Chenamus and his Consort; his Intoxication; their Dress—Aground three times—Visitor—Invitation to Shore—First Canoe ride—Arrival at Astoria—Residence of Mr. Birney—Beds for the Night.

Spring was now approaching, and with it thoughts of leaving the pleasant home and friends to which they had become much attached. They were sorrowful, but duty bade them on to the wilds of Oregon, and they accordingly made their preparations. They were benefitted by their residence at the islands, for they had learned much of missionary labors, and the course which they must in part pursue.

They embarked on board the Diana, Captain Hinckley, and found that, unlike the vessel they had before sailed in, this was provided with a variety of good, wholesome provisions. They were thirty days at sea, and had a very boisterous passage; but nothing more disastrous occurred than the death of their English cow, which to the children was a misfortune, as they were thereby deprived of milk.

After they had been out a fortnight, and the weather had become somewhat calm, they felt a curiosity to open the three boxes which had been sent on board by Pilot Reynolds, mentioned in the last chapter, labelled to Dr. White. In the first they found a dozen bottles of wine, in the second eight of brandy, all invaluable in sickness, and in the third pepper, spices, cassia, tea, sugar, and every such article as Mrs. White needed on going to housekeeping. They had often seen Reynolds while at the islands, and endeavored to learn something of his former history. But in this they were disappointed. They had heard him speak much of his children. One morning Mrs. White went into his store on some trifling errand, when she saw a native woman behind one of the counters. She was dressed in black satin, with a wreath of rare and beautiful feathers upon her head, and was a tall, fine looking creature, of rather noble appearance. After the usual compliments, Mr. Reynolds, turning to her, said, "Mrs. White, themother of my children." This was a singular introduction, and she was reasonably surprised, especially as before she had never heard him mention his wife, and besides, this was the first instance she had ever seen of a colored woman being the wife of a white man.

A young man who left Boston with them, afterwards married a native woman. He was a man, who, from his acquirements and deportment, would have been judged possessed of too much pride to form a connexion considered so degrading. His intellect was of a high order. He was well educated, and it was a treat, which the passengers often sought, to converse with him a few moments when he could be released from his duties; for, owing to his not very prosperous circumstances, he had gone before the mast to work his passage to the islands, where his father was residing. As there were so few young ladies in the country, he could have returned to his states for a wife, if so disposed; for he was so prospered that he could have done so with propriety as did another gentleman, named Grimes, a passenger, who would have been suspected as being more likely to take the opposite course. He was almost the reverse of Pitman—his inferior in both intelligence and education. He went out as clerk for an uncle; and five years after, when they returned, he accompanied them, a wealthy merchant, married a lady in New England, and then returned to the islands.

Nothing of particular interest occurred, till they neared the bar of the Columbia river, where lay the greatest danger they encountered, although for three days before they reached it, leave him to record when he writes his own biography. From thence he went to Fort Vancouver, where being under the surgeons care, he recovered in a few weeks. From this time he wandered about with no employment save such as cutting and splitting rails, for two shillings per hundred, of which, as he had little strength, and less inclination for such pursuits, he soon wearied.

At length he visited California a second time, in company with Mr. Young and his party, who went thither for cattle; and it was after his return that Dr. White first saw him. His curiosity was roused by receiving from him a recipe, very neatly written, employing medical terms for the articles he wished to obtain; and, in conversation with a gentleman he learned some of his history, and though that, with proper encouragement, he might be induced to reform. He sent him an invitation to call on him, but he declined. He afterwards had an interview with him, in which he enquired what he purposed for the future. He replied very indefinitely, and the doctor proposed to him to enter his family for six months, and partially review his studies, to prepare himself again for practice in his profession. He was amazed, touched, and hardly knew how to answer, and left, promising to see the doctor again. In a few days he accepted the proffer.

He was an educated man, soured by adversity, and bitingly sarcastic, and consequently was not a favorite among the people; indeed, had very few friends. At the end of six months, his modes, unassuming manners, and studiousness had elevated him in the public estimation, and he possessed its entire confidence as a skillful physician, which he proved himself to be.

For the first time in seven years, he now wrote his mother, informing her of his whereabouts, and promising to visit her as soon as possible. Soon after he made proposals to Miss Smith, and succeeded in obtaining her hand, and a year subsequent made good his promise, and visited his mother in the States, where they remained several months. He was afterwards elected one of the three executives in the government of the territory.

One of the Baileys companions in his last expedition to California, was John Turner, a man who had been engaged in some of the rashest adventures encountered in the last twenty years. He was a man of singular genius, and some of his tales were very amusing.

One little incidents he sometimes related of his travels under a government officer, in the western wilds of what is now the State of Missouri. Some sixty miles west of the nearest settlement, they came in sight of a log hut, having about it an appearance differing from the common Indian cabins. They entered it, and found there a man and woman, with several children, who were as sly and suspicious as the wildest savages in the country. They at length gained their confidence, and learned that twenty years before, the man had become a fugitive from justice, and with his family fled to this solitude, where, for the whole length of time they had not seen a single face of their own color. They had in their possession garments which they had brought from the States, but they were so patched that it was literally impossible to distinguish their original color. They seemed happy, and evinced not the slightest desire to mingle again with their race, stating that from their long isolated residence, they were incapacitated for enjoying society.

Turner was with Bailey, and was the means of saving the lives of the survivors of his party in their encounter with the Chestes. This young Hercules, like Samson of jawbone memory, seized a large pine knot, and making such havoc among the copper colors, that he at last succeeded in driving them off. A few years previous, he was associated with Captain Smith and a trapping party of twenty, who were attacked by a band of savages, and every man, excepting himself and Smith, killed

This old veteran afterwards turned hermit. Whether in imitation of the one he saw early in life, I cannot say; but with an Indian wife lives as secluded as possible at no small remove from the settlement.

J. J. Kadderly Interview : Occupational Customs and Early Horse Racing

Federal Writers' Project

Works Progress Administration

OREGON FOLKLORE STUDIES

Name of worker : Wrenn, Sara B. Date Jan. 1, 1939

Address : Upper Drive, Oswego, Lake Grove, Oswego, Oregon

Subject: Occupational Customs and Early Horse Racing

Name and address of informant: J. J. Kadderly First Street near Alder, Portland, Oregon

Date and time of interview: Dec. 28, 1938, 1:30-3:00 p.m.

Place of interview: Hardware store, First near Alder Street, Portland, Ore.

Description of room, house, surroundings, etc. : A little old-fashioned hardware store in an old part of Portland, the interview taking place in the small glassed-off office. The informant, owner of the store, sorted out change as he talked, placing it in a noisy little change container that came in with a rattle and bang over the wire from the sales clerks. Ever so often he would be too interested in what he was saying to notice the change and the clerk would yell, "What's the matter up there? Hurry up with the change." Whereupon the informant would chuckle, "heh! heh!" and dive into his desk drawer for change. There seemed to be quite a lot of money dribbling in. The change cup shot in with such a racket the worker jumped half out of her seat at every operation.

Personal History of Informant

Information obtained should supply the following facts:

1. Ancestry : Swiss.

7. Special skills and interests : Horses special interest, and driving trotters special skill.
8. Community and religious activities : "Always tried to follow the Golden Rule." No church. Mason for many years -- Scottish Rite.
9. Description of informant : Little wiry man, with a long nose and a continuous "heh! heh!" chuckle. His father died when he was fourteen, leaving him the sole support of his mother and four brothers and sisters. He appears to have got a lot out of life and to have enjoyed every minute of it. Meticulous in his dress and appearance.

Interview

School? I only went to school four years, in a little old log school house in Wisconsin. Then my father died and I had to get out and earn some money. Gosh ding it, I can smell that school house yet. There was about forty kids and I don't think they ever took a bath. I can smell it just as plain as if it was yesterday.

I came to Oregon in 1878. It was September 1, when we, my wife and me first set foot in Portland.

We came by way of San Francisco and we came up from there on the old steamship George W. Elder. God dang it, but that old ship could roll! I was doing pretty well in Wisconsin too. I had learned the tinner's trade. I had enough to get married, heh! heh! But we had gosh danged thunder storms back there. One day I was settin' with some of the boys and there was a bigger storm than usual -- thunder and lightnin' like blazes, and I sez, "Gosh dang it, if I knew a place where they didn't have any such assistance; but knowing that unless he reached the settlement he must perish, he attempted to swim the rapid current. He succeeded for a few rods, when he was obliged to return, and with great difficulty crawled upon the shore, with scarce breath or consciousness in his wasted body. Fortunately, he was discovered and carried to the mission, where his reception and treatment were such as perhaps I had better leave him to record when he writes his own biography. From thence he went to Fort Vancouver, where being under the surgeons care, he recovered in a few weeks. From this time he wandered about with no employment save such as cutting and splitting rails, for two shillings per hundred, of which, as he had little strength, and less inclination for such pursuits, he soon wearied.

At length he visited California a second time, in company with Mr. Young and his party, who went thither for cattle; and it was after his return that Dr. White first saw him. His curiosity was roused by receiving from him a recipe, very neatly written, employing medical terms for the articles he wished to obtain; and, in conversation with a gentleman he learned some of his history, and though that, with proper encouragement, he might be induced to reform. He sent him an invitation to call on him, but he declined. He afterwards had an interview with him, in which he enquired what he purposed for the future. He replied very indefinitely, and the doctor proposed to him to enter his family for six months, and partially review his studies, to prepare himself again for practice in his profession. He was amazed, touched, and hardly knew how to answer, and left, promising to see the doctor again. In a few days he accepted the proffer.

He was an educated man, soured by adversity, and bitingly sarcastic, and consequently was not a favorite among the people; indeed, had very few friends. At the end of six months, his modes, unassuming manners, and studiousness had elevated him in the public estimation, and he possessed its entire confidence as a skillful physician, which he proved himself to be.

For the first time in seven years, he now wrote his mother, informing her of his whereabouts, and promising to visit her as soon as possible. Soon after he made proposals to Miss Smith, and succeeded in obtaining her hand, and a year subsequent made good his promise, and visited his mother in the States, where they remained several months. He was afterwards elected one of the three executives in the government of the territory.

One of the Baileys companions in his last expedition to California, was John Turner, a man who had been engaged in some of the rashest adventures encountered in the last twenty years. He was a man of singular genius, and some of his tales were very amusing.

One little incidents he sometimes related of his travels under a government officer, in the western wilds of what is now the State of Missouri. Some sixty miles west of the nearest settlement, they came in sight of a log hut, having about it an appearance differing from the common Indian cabins. They entered it, and found there a man and woman, with several children, who were as sly and suspicious as the wildest savages in the country. They at length gained their confidence, and learned that twenty years before, the man had become a fugitive from justice, and with his family fled to this solitude, where, for the whole length of time they had not seen a single face of their own color. They had in their possession garments which they had brought from the States, but they were so patched that it was literally impossible to distinguish their original color. They seemed happy, and evinced not the slightest desire to mingle again with their race, stating that from their long isolated residence, they were incapacitated for enjoying society.

Turner was with Bailey, and was the means of saving the lives of the survivors of his party in their encounter with the Chestes. This young Hercules, like Samson of jawbone memory, seized a large pine knot, and making such havoc among the copper colors, that he at last succeeded in driving them off. A few years previous, he was associated with Captain Smith and a trapping party of twenty, who were attacked by a band of savages, and every man, excepting himself and Smith, killed.

This old veteran afterwards turned hermit. Whether in imitation of the one he saw early in life, I cannot say; but with an Indian wife lives as secluded as possible at no small remove from the settlement.

JOHN E. MAGERS. Residence, 700 East Ash street, Portland, Oregon. Office, 310-311 Gerlinger building, Portland. Born Sept. 25, 1847, in Morgan County, O. Son of Doctor William Bosman and Mary Jane (Barkhurst)

doctor addressed them, giving an account of the deaths, revivals, reformations, etc., at the Dalles and Willamette, all of which seemed much to interest them. In turn, he was much pleased with the neat and respectable appearance of his auditors. Having been for three years so completely isolated from the fashionable world, the new modes and fashions which they brought with them struck him very pleasantly, and he thought so large a party, an of such a cast, reflected honor on the American churches, and told favorably of their sentiments on the subject of missions. It seemed really like the arrival of the pilgrim fathers in New England; and it may be inquired, if their influence was any thing like what the fathers' would have been. The mission influence, for a time, was deeply felt in the colony, and through it was laid a broad basis for the promotion of civilization and literature. Churches and mills were erected, herds introduced, farms enlarged, and the Oregon Institute built. This building was a noble edifice, one hundred feet by ninety-four, and contained four stories. It was established for the instruction of the children of the colony, who came in numbers from all parts. The school was well taught and conducted, and examinations and exhibitions were held there which would perhaps have done honor to many of the popular academies of this country. This was not the only school in the colony, there were several others; but this was carried on on a more extensive plan, and was a valuable acquisition to the country.

But to return. There were fifty-two members of the new recruit, and the following is the disposition which was made of them. Dr. Richmond and lady, without being gratified with a sight of the old mission at the Willamette, were sent off to Nesqually, a hundred miles north of the river. Dr. Babcock and family, and Mr. Brewer, were despatched to the assistance of Lee and Perkins, at the Dalles. The residue were conveyed to the mission, to be afterwards distributed as should be deemed advisable. The nearest Methodist station to the old mission, in the upper country, was at the Dalles. This was strictly an Indian mission, conducted on much the same principle that were those of Dr. Whitman and his associates. Here, as among them, a school for the natives was established, Mr. Brewer also opening farms for them as well as for the missionaries. This had also been done successfully by the other denomination, resulting beneficially to the natives, as will be seen hereafter. Too much can hardly be said in praise of the Presbyterian missions, for their efforts in behalf of the Indians, in which they were indefatigable. Mr. Lee's object seemed principally to introduce a better state of things among the white settlers, which, to a great degree, succeeded. He had originally been sent out to labor among the Flathead Indians, and passing through the country, leaving them far to the right, went on to the Willamette, intending to spend there a winter before proceeding to his destination. He found the mild, equable climate, and society, though small, of whites, more congenial to his habits than any thing he could expect in the section to which he had been sent. Thinking that he discovered signs of the colony becoming an extensive and valuable field of usefulness, and that, for various reasons, the Flatheads had less claim for missionary efforts than had been supposed, he determined to assume the responsibility and commence a mission on the Willamette. He directed its principal energies to bear for the promotion of the interests of the white population, the result of which have been seen in the erection of mills, etc., and through this influence also a perfect form of provisional government has been established and enforced for years. My readers may have often heard of Mr. Hines and lady, who have of late returned from Oregon by way of China, and who have written many interesting letters, especially of the missions in the Celestial Empire. They were with the last mentioned reinforcement, and assigned a station at Umpqua, one hundred and forty miles south. The following August, Mr. Lee, Mr. Hine, and Dr. White sat out on an exploring tour, for a suitable spot for a station. They traveled on horseback, with a single attendant, and two horses laden with their blankets, provisions, etc. in two days they reached the Upper end of the Willamette valley, the whole of which they had never before travelled, and as all others have been, were delighted with its lovely scenery, and general fertility of the soil. As no hunters had visited the valley for some time, they found fresh signs of the beaver, and otter, numerous flocks of wild fowl, and herds of deer were scampering, all hours of the day, over the beautiful plains. They pushed on for the Umpqua fort, about sixty miles from the coast. As they left the valley, the travelling for some distance was very pleasant, the country being gently undulating; but it became more
